Yeah 10 listed but not interested in all of them. I checked the book again and the 910 is listed but I tend to agree. It is a bit weird. It is a bit of a challenged for me. I like doing the odd things. I have 4 of the radios here waiting.

If you had a circuit I would be interested.

Try this:
www.aimcomm.com/sparky/traps.gif

Tune the 'A' section to the closest adjacent freq, the 'B' section to the other adjacent freq, and the 'C' sections to the frequency being used. The series section is optional but recommended. If you can get lots of caps you can repeat the filter after the series section.

On second thought (and a quick bit of math) just one of these filters should be fine for each radio.

A pleasure, Jim.

I wouldn't read too much into the "stories of some hams that do not want to communicate with M3s" it is not nearly so common as comments on here would suggest. We had a few (2 as I recall) in our club that were a bit wary of the scheme when it started- one is now joining our training team (another amateur and myself are the local equivalent of the 'VEs') and the other helps out on a more casual basis. Much of the 'problem' is mis-information and prejudice.

There must be something like 3500 to 4000 newcomers to the hobby in the last 12/15 months as a result of the Foundation scheme. I don't know the national figures but locally about 25 to 30% of these are youngsters (under 16). Schools and youth groups are showing an increasing interest.

Again, while I don't have national figures, but 30% or so of our local M3s have either 'moved up' already or are waiting on the exam results for the next step. More are waiting on our running the next course- a number are already studying using the material at www.amradioinfo.co.uk

Our club ships out CD training materail for both the FL and IL and most enquiries are for the IL material (although the CD contains both).

What really seems to annoy the 'antis' is just how wrong their predictions have been.

I must be a sorry state to be in- always negative.

The Donkey In The Well

One day a farmer's donkey fell down into a well. The animal cried piteously for hours as the farmer tried to figure out what to do.

Finally he decided the animal was old, and the well needed to be covered up anyway, it just wasn't worth it to retrieve the donkey. He invited all his neighbors to come over and help him. They each grabbed a shovel and began to shovel dirt into the well.

At first, the donkey realized what was happening and cried horribly. Then, to everyone's amazement, he quieted down. A few shovel loads later, the farmer looked down the well, and was astonished at what he saw.

As every shovel of dirt hit his back, the donkey did something amazing. He would shake it off and take a step up. As the farmer's neighbors continued to shovel dirt on top of the animal, he would shake it off and take a step up. Pretty soon, everyone was amazed, as the donkey stepped up over the edge of the well and trotted off.

The Moral:
Life is going to shovel dirt on you, all kinds of dirt. The trick to getting out of the well is to shake it off and take a step up. Each of our troubles a stepping stone. We can get out of the deepest wells just by not stopping, never giving up! Shake it off and take a step up!

Remember the five simple rules to be happy:
1. Free your heart from hatred.
2. Free your mind from worries.
3. Live simply.
4. Give more.
5. Expect less.

O.K., that's enough of that B.S. ...

The donkey later came back, caught the farmer out in the field and kicked the sh#t out of him. Then he went over to each of his neighbors farms and kicked the sh#t out of them too for helping.

The REAL Moral:
When you try to cover your ass, it always comes back to get you.

One could argue the definition of "conducive", as it would apply to the typical "CB science" and drivel that usually accompanies such talk. I have been involved in many technical discussions about subjects that, if put into actual use, would be illegal. The main purpose of guys like Dennis O, Sean, Eitner, myself, and others, was to educate. Dispell "CB science" myths, explain things like what modulation "headroom" is, what the difference between class AB and C is, which rigs wideband the best, and which rigs have shown, through repeated tests and useage, to be poor performers, or which have reliability or stability issues. The list goes on. I've always felt that if you are going to walk down that illegal path, that it's better to do it with quality gear, and with an intimate understanding of the risks, and how to avoid trouble. Keeping a low profile goes a long way toward insuring that your radio hobby continues.

When discussions turned into what acts are considered illegal, how could anyone with any integrity, ignore that which is written in black and white?

Then I guess you consider the opionions of such market "gurus" as Alan Greenspan, Lou Dobbs, and many others, who all tag the pending war as a primary reason why our economy remains flat, as "arrogant" as well?

The economy has little to do with a president's "policy". Presidents do little to affect it either way (Short of small details like war). The market sets the policy, not the other way around.

Sorry if you can't handle the truth. Radio hobbyists (Like today's computer geeks) have always been ridiculed by the "A-list" crowd as sort of odd. I've known that for many years. What's funny, is someone like you, who may ridicule a ham, and think that because you're an outlaw Cbers, that your somehow "cooler". That is laughable.

I have no trouble separating my personal feelings from the issues. Why is it that I have no problem differentiating how I personally feel about freebanding, with what the FCC says about it? It seems it is you, who have the problem separating these things.

You seem to have the misplaced opinion, that I have a desire to discuss these things with you. Going to E-mail would defeat the purpose anyway.

Most sociopaths can behave themselves one-on-one, in a non threatening environment. It's how they behave in a group, that tells the better story.

Ah! When the circle closes in, and the lights begin to dim, you can always run and hide behind that shield of anonymity, and the lack of accountability that it provides, and claim that this is all an "act". Yea, well, maybe it is, and I've been duped just like the rest of the group. But if it is an act, I would say that your talents have been wasted. You should be in Hollywood with the rest of the vapid, superficial drones, who make it their live's work, to pretend to be people who they aren't (Yet we are somehow supposed to believe that they have the inside track on reality. Talk about irony.).

Funny, we had a similar problem with Ham radio packet forwarding almost 10 years ago. Someone had configured his BBS, to strip message ID's and replace them with their own. In essence, every message became "new" again, and the dupes flowed. It wasn't until the software writer removed that option totally (Some guys couln't be trusted to set it up correctly), did the problem finally go away.

There's a reason why each message has a unique ID. Any entity that messes with it, is asking for trouble.....

You are a lying dirt bag Frank. You cannot provide any proof because it never happened.

And speaking of being a baby, need I remind you that you are the one how periodically stomps off in a fit to pout in this newsgroup.

Having over 25 years experience as a radio technician, allows me to make certain claims with respect to CB radio repairs. I have claimed such.
But that's only the tip of my educational iceberg. The rest is irrelevant to the topics discussed. BTW, I do not "call others names" if they merely make an incorrect statement. Unless, you consider the statement "Sorry, but you're wrong", to be in that catergory.

If you don't mind going low tech just hook your radios to a six input manual coax switch box which would be hooked to your one antenna. You'll just have to remember to change switch box setting each time you change radios.

If there's no truth to the statements, ignore them, I do with George. All the BS posts don't a thing to either position of legal or illegal.

Here's a start. Central California Hwy. 99, local truckers use 15 south of about Bakersfield, and then switch to 17 north of Bakersfield. Out of state guys are on 19. Not sure if they do that over on hwy 5. Visalia California, locals (not truckers) are on channel 20 in the evenings, and 38 LSB during heavy skip hours.

Someone write that down. :)

The default frequencies for the second bank are as follows:

1) 154.400 DO NOT USE!!! This is a FIRE frequency.
2) your programmed second channel.

Please be careful when programming your radio. This radio has the potential to transmit where you absolutely can't. Check with a frequency counter connected to a dummy load before use.

The UNCLE will give no warning letters in this range of frequencies.

My "pet rock" is out in the garage (not a real Pet Rock, but a rock I picked up in high school that I've kept (kinda as a pet) for all these years for some odd reason), and my lava lamp is here in the office. The basement is where most my old electronic stuff lives. I was really into electronics and heathkits back in high school (before I could get access to computers).

Gee Frank,,appears you were laughed at all weekend.
We already have had our laugh at your expense, Frank.. You entertained us all with your recent revelation and self-elevation concerning your attendance at EWU. Kind of tough for a guy that claimed he never resided in eastern Washington, such as the "wrong side of the state." That is one hell of a commute for night classes?

You were goaded once before into cutting your gums on the razor blade by claiming a "local" in your area sued a cber. It was said you lived in Issaquah, yet you denied it. In a sordid attempt at lending credibility to your original statement concerning the lawsuit, you produced a news article from Spokane. At such point I made note Spokane isn't local to you. You responded that Issaquah was close enough to be considered local. So, yes, we all enjoyed a brief chuckle.

And what does he have to do with anything besides a failed pathetic attempt at lending yourself transparent credibilty?
Was he a friend? It certainly was nice of him, as a friend, to allow you to get away with such TOS violations for so long. More telling is the manner in which he approached you and related that he has done everything possible in his power to allow you to carry on your games, but his upstream provider is demanding proof of your expulsion from his service and he wasn't about to allow your monkeyshines to begin tarnishing his companies good name, and that you had to go. It was nice of him to give you a heads up and a date of when your service was to be terminated. It allowed you to post your "Dear John" letter to this group and bid farewell, even though none believe you ever left. I bet you laughed almost as hard as I did.

Maybe I'll try it...but MSN has done outstanding things for me..they have went above to get each and every one of you angry AKC types tossed for your lack of self-control that resulted in mindless and juvenile tactics outside this

You overestimate me, Sparkles. I didn't FORCE you to to commit those violations..You had yourself tossed. Practice some self-control and restraint, and don't assume I believe myself responsible for what ails any of you. You have no self-control and do and say stupid things and blame others as if they somehow "provoked" you..LOL.....much like you're lil pal Geo..neither of you have enough sense to restrain yourselves.

Your opinion of anyone and everyone that discusses any matter with you sucks,,always has. You recently insulted another poster and attacked him personally instead of the topic. Yet, you felt so threatened by his knowledge that you had the need to set forth your educational attendance while degrading his,,something you know nothing of (an extremely familar theme among lids like yourself).

Equating following mere TOS agreements with how I view myself is..well,,,a bit off-topic and an unhealthy foray into my personal life and feelings,,but as you know, I have no problem allowing you to chew on some of those once every while.

>Your personal life and feelings are a matter of >public record, Twist.

Sure they are Frankie, but only disturbed individuals such as yourself gain pleasure through concerning yourself with others personal lives. That you lids erroneously feel harping on one's personal identity and life is somehow advantageous to your cause or somehow has an effect on those such as myself that illustrate your lack of control, low self-esteem, defective personality, and communication deficit is but a mere reflection,, a projection , really, of your greatest fears. Somehoe you and George feel most threatened by my posts the most, evidenced by posts that wish to do away with the 1st amendment by George and yourself. You can not effectively communicate, so you will fail at attempted intimidation through identification. You need to learn a thing or two about law, also, Frank. All that you spewed to Phil concerns you as well,,you can not gather personal information as a means to harass one publicly. You're not too bright, but the fact that you and your little band of lids are incompetent and impotent in all you do is concern for none.

mindspring, let alone anything else in this forum...and you may choose to selectively ignore the fact you accused me of being other hammies who seem to have buried you on the hammie forums in several discussions about merit, integrity, and conduct unbecoming of a hammie, not to (Yawn) Your arrogance is neatly outlined in the ethics class commonly used text "Moral Reasoning." See Frank, one with a tech degree or degree in electronics can not teach logic, despite your claim to the contrary. The only way you ever "taught" logic was as a substitute teacher for the day, which neatly explains your comment "if I EVER teach it again" , and also illustrates your failure in your chosen career, as you were reduced to subbing for the local school district to make ends meet. $88.75 for the day sucks, huh Frank? I wouldn't call such behavior "cool" and many usenet followers agree such behavior is childish and of bottomfeeders. Such behavior upset you to such a point that you continue to share with us the impression the one that posted your phone number had left on you..yet you attempt to treat those with the same behavior you purport to digress from. You are a hypocrite who mistakenly holds that the same private information that infuriates and intimidates you will affect another in the same manner.

Yeah. I want to be like you. Spend all my time on the PC, designing websites of strangers, and posting under others' names. Not to mention another gay sexual

Yea, I guess it is....stay with the regimen. I quit smoking some years ago and it was the toughest thing I ever did. Upon that conquest, I realized I could do anything. It was the catalyst for quite a few things. I smoked heavily for 22 years and it was one awful withdrawal the first week, but the rewards have me asking myself, "Why did I wait so long?" to quit.

What constitutes a "conviction" to you? A statement by Riley that you committed violations? A letter from the FCC warning one they were in some type of violation? A subpoena? An NAL? An actual court room complete with trial?

It figures. I ask what constitutes a conviction and you expertly claim the sentences imposed.
Davie, an adjudication of guilt constitutes a conviction...your offering of the sentencing asect is irrelevant. This is why you are not to be looked to for accurate information concerning the law and cb or hammies pertaining to such.
Do not be angry over it, I am certain you have some subjects inwhich you may redeem yourself to some degree, but the false pretense that you have a clue concerning law is certainly not one of them.

Oh here you go again....claiming "I" didn't really mean "I" when YOU wrote it..sort of like when you said any of "Us" alive during Hitler's rise to power, didn't really mena "us", which was shot down before it had a chance to spawn it's hideous little lid,,er head.

>However, there are others who are,

See, how quickly you can learn when forced? That's all you had to say..."There were OTHERS alive during Hitler's rise"..but you didn't..you deliberately obfuscated as you do so well. And try not to speak for others. You know not of what they want, believe, nor feel. I am much more in tune with the general mass of cbers than some hammie lid that feels he is due respect merely by virtue of his status he feels he "worked" for. Which brings us back to the question that begs, what do you consider work, if you consider that attainment some type accomplishment, but we;ll save it for another of your lessons another time.

How can you say something is flat that never eisted in the first place, Davie? Nevertheless, those you mentioned never claimed the entire market is contingent upon such.
Consumer confidence and spending is affected by more than the pending war..much of it has to do with lack of faith in Bush' economic policy.

Dead wrong. No confidence in the president or his (economic) proposals have historically sent stocks sliding and consumerism plummets. In many cases, consumer confidence is tied DIRECTLY to what the president does or does not do. Need examples Davie, before you stick your foot in your mouth and jump to tell me I'm wrong with yet another fabulous display of your lack of self-control?

no matter how irrelevant these personal feelings may be. That you continue to bring such personal feelings up and reiterate your separate your personal feelings from any issue presented.

You have a funny way of showing it.....your posts are peppered with insults.

The fact that you are not yet able to distinguish such illustrates it all. The FCC doesn't hold one a criminal until convicted. You trash the 1st amendment and use usenet as your trial and appoint yourself judge jury. Can you see a problem with this if the feds took your approach, Davie junior? The mere fact is, what you feel and what the feds feel and do is blurred by your irrational beliefs.

This is what was there right after I put 151.82 in 1 and 151.88 in 2.
After flipping DS2, I had 154.4 in 1 and 151.88 in 2. I had not pressed the SET button even though I looked in the radio when I got it.

Have you had any success in programming four separate frequencies?
Channel 2 in bank 2 always reverts to channel 2 in bank 1.

While waiting in line to pay for my adult beverages, I looked at the cigarette display, reduced to plexiglas sliding doors with cabinet locks, the prices on cartons blew my mind! $34.99!! Holy ____! I'll grow my own first, tobacco that is. It's nice to know that I can run up stairs and not smell like an ashtray anymore. Butt-free since November 1996.

Last word? Keep up, lid. One must have first engage the topic, in order to have a "last word". I didn't post since Friday and come back to incessant pleas and cries from you wishing to trash the first amendment simply because you finally arrived at the realization you lack the self-control to speak without malice, prejudice, or insult. Not to be outdone, lid-Gilliland and lid-N3CVJ, porthole Davie junior, dove into topic insults to the mix. My "last" word hardly compares to my swan song

Some of the guys may be able to get at least a scanner on 151.88. See if we can't make the 10 or so miles between us on a higher frequency then HF-CB.

> we can't make the 10 or so miles between us on a higher frequency then HF-CB.

Scott, I saw your post in the NG. I just got back from testing tonight. A friend just got his 19-1206 HT and I quick charged his battery. I left his location in Elkridge. He on a rubber duck and me with a 19-1210 mobile with 5\8 wave mag mnt on roof on 151.820. I drove to Catonsville HS and copied him full quieting @ 1/2 watt. That's about 3mi. I went another mile to Frederick Rd in Catonsville and he was pretty scratchy. Switching to 2W helped a little but not much. He swapped out antenna to a 2-meter collapsable 5/8 wave AEA hot rod whip and back to 1/2w for a solid copy again.

I was using 5w at all times and he allways had a good copy on me. I went a little farther but it was down hill from that point (Elevation that is), so we lost contact after that point. Overall, I am impressed with the performance of the HT, especially with it's supplied duck. We have 5w CB HT's and they don't perform that well (probably due to the ineffiencies of a HT anttenna at 27Mhz). They work like a base station with 13.8vdc into a base antenna.

Next, we will try mobile to mobile tests with 5/8 mag mnts, although I'll have 5w and he will have 2w. In a hour of testing, and I was at a point high above Baltimore looking down on the city, we never heard anyone else on the frequency. I have heard nothing in the 3 weeks I've been listening.

Later, Carl

Last word? Keep up, lid. One must have first engage the topic, in order to have a "last word". I didn't post since Friday and come back to incessant pleas and cries from you wishing to trash the first amendment simply because you finally arrived at the realization you lack the self-control to speak without malice, prejudice, or insult.

why don't you talk like a normal human being oh sorry you can't you sound like such an asshole and Ill bet you really are anyhow.

Anyone can use voice over the internet, but repeaters aren't authorized for CB - that is why there are no links to CB transmitters over the internet. There are services that allow anyone to monitor amateur repeaters over the internet and have chat rooms for cbers and swls (and I believe eqso is one of them).

Which will get much less effective as the current sunspot cycle winds down.
Amps help in marginal conditions, but if the band is not open, 1,000,000 watts won't help.

You should try and let me know when you're out there. I've got a good bit of height from the roof. I call it the 7th floor. There is a radio tower real close, so you know it's a good spot. I have a 360 view of all over. From the door, NE has a building in the way.
On the other side of the roof, it's a clear shot. That direction will wait for warmer weather. My coax will reach from the door to the first AC unit!!! Chilly one tonight. Noone on 11, so I came in.
Heard more on 147.285 then 27.365. Would you rather use .82 or .88?

I don't what it is, but if it's old try here:

http://bama.sbc.edu/

This BAMA is Boat Anchor Manual Archive.

Also, a dogpile.com search for BAMA (spelled out) had lots of hits.
Dogpile checks the other search engines for you. Try HC-43C in the FETCH box.

What could possibly be threatening, or hypocritical about a theoretical discussion of modulation principles?

The main difference, is that some others pay homage and lip service to blatently illegal operators and their toys, because they make a lot of money doing illegal mods. That, in itself, makes much of their advice suspect, as well as their objectivity. It's pretty hard to make a case against the use of something like a "Swing kit", when you make a ton of money installing them into sucke..., I mean, customer's, radios.

Now who's trying to be the psychoanalyst? Try an original tact sometime. Really.

Translation: I am a sociopath. I am independent, simply because I am unable to function as part of a larger group, due to the fact that I cannot accept my responsibilities as part of the larger group. I am an idependent, not by choice, but by default.

Oh, I see. People should not take responsibility and should ignore transgressions by other people. Let certain people, who lack integrity and moral character, thumb their noses at the system, while the rest of us, who do feel an obligation to "follow the rules" should just MYOB? Sorry, but there's no such thing as a free lunch.

I'm still waiting for you to prove me wrong on the libel issue. Seems you got fairly quiet when the law was cut and pasted for your perusal. And if you still think it's up to the defendant to "disprove" libel, you're even more laughable.

Who's a martyr? Recounting stories that happened to me, many years ago, were used as examples. Besides, it doesn't matter if it was yesterday. You seem to think that people can't change, and anyone, who was guilty of something at one time or another, is forever branded, and can never change or speak out against that which he had been guilty of.

I only have a problem with people with poor judgement and bad attitudes. The rude, arrogant, inconsiderate people, who like to do things like "squash mudducks" because it inflates their poor self esteem. Freebanders, who mind their own business, conduct themselves with some civility and decorum, and don't go out of their way to interfere with others, do not earn my contempt.

Innocent people don't get fined, have their equipment taken, or get jail time. I don't care how the sentence is imposed. Only you would attempt to cloud the issue with semantics. If they get fined, etc., it means they are guilty, end of story.

Only you, would even attempt to make that an issue, since it should be clear that I am not old enough to have been alive in the 1930's. That would make me at least in my 70's and more likely in my 80's, to have any real accounting of the era.

I don't have the time to be your grammar teacher, as well as your therapist, law advisor and radio technician. You'll just have to learn these things on your own.

What? Of course there were others alive then. That's what I was refering to. The fact that it took you this long to "get it", and the realization of which, comes to you as some sort of epiphany, does not surprise me.

And herein lies the source of your contempt. Your seething dislike of hams, simply because they are able to do something you cannot, or will not due to paranoia concerns over losing your precious anonymity.

So who's the more credible person? Someone who climbs up the ladder by working (However easy or hard) and achieving their goals? Or a slacker, who makes up excuses and reasons why they don't WANT to succeed, to cover the truth, that they are either unable or just not motivated enough?

That's why you shake your bitter, angry fist in the air, and blame the "establishment" for all of your problems. That's why you buy into leftist propaganda so easily. Socialists and communists, like people like you. You're easy to pander to.

The president does little to affect the economy directly. He passes or vetos spending packages that are voted on by congress. He can make initiatives and set the tone, by which his term will be defined. But most analysts agree that the pursuit of wealth does not need a president's approval, or cares if he doesn't give it. This is a world market, there are far more factors at work that what a single human can hope to control. A war is a variable. Something that is usually not considered, since it happens so rarely. When this one is over, the economy will rebound, just from the joy of having that out of the way. The capture of Osama will be icing on the cake.

Bush is no more responsible for the economy's decline, than Clinton was for its prosperity. Neither one did anything that could be traced as having any direct affect.

You say that, but when you make statements like:

"some hammie lid that feels he is due respect merely by virtue of his status he feels he "worked" for".

It shows your underlying contempt for the ham service, and those who chose to make the effort to obtain their tickets. You berate the ham service at every chance you get. Any time someone makes an observation about illegal activities on CB, you chime right in there with "hammies do it too". You are one of the first to claim that this is a CB forum, and yet, you are also the first to drag hams into discussions (If for no other reason than to berate them), and make a point of identifying CBers, who are also hams. Then you turn around and accuse them of bragging about it.
Google is chock full of your various mind farts along these lines.

The classic "catch all" excuse. You feel you've been given the green light to be disrespectful, rude, and sociopathic, because you perceive that you've been somehow "wronged". There is no excuse for your behavior. The cries of "he started it" may have worked on the playground, when you were a kid, but not in the adult world. You're equally culpable.

>.see, your insults are so ingrained in > yourself you realize not even doing it and are unable to recognize your

If you consider getting handed your head on a platter, every time you spread a lie, or perpetuate misleading information, as an "insult", that becomes your comprehensive problem.

Only to people with fragile psyche's, like evidently, yourself. If you find the truth insulting, I think you need to do some serious introspection.

The 1st amemdement is about freedom of speech. It is not about unlimited speech (Such as the "fire in a theatre example), and it is not about breaking federal laws in the process. Your right to free speech does not give you the right to circumvent FCC rules. You're once again talking like a disenfranchised 20-something.

> and use usenet as your trial and appoint yourself judge

I apply the priciples of common logic. You emotional bias is irrelevant.

Criminal: One who commits a crime.

Crime: An act committed in violation of the law.

If you violate the law, you commit a crime. If you commit a crime, that makes you a criminal. Simple logic.

> Can you see a problem with this if the feds took your approach,

There is nothing irrational about logic.

You have me confused with you. I can easily stay on topic. It's you that tries to steer the topic away from the original subject and onto one of your non sequitorical tangents.

Case in point: Your incessent attempts to steer the topic of converstation away from illegal CBers and onto USENET ettiquette.

Which forum would be "proper", for making observations about sociopathic

I never started smoking. Took a lot of peer pressure abuse for it as a teenager, but I eventually had the last laugh. Divine intervention cured my wife of that awful habit, when she was pregnant with our daughter.
Seems that one of those wierd hormonal things, caused cigarettes to taste horrible, so she quit. Once our daughter was born, she was thankfully "off the stuff" and didn't go back. Now she can smell the stuff a mile away and complains about the smell. I always remind her that she thought I was exaggerating, when I complained all throughout our marriage before she quit.....
It's a good thing she's smoke free now. The prices are outrageous. I know some people who buy them over the internet, at some supposed discount price. But that's a pain, and nothing like the corner store......

Part 97 does not apply to the CB band. And it is perfectly legal to

If you did not suffer from such a severe communication deficit, you would draw a distinction between an innuendo and an outright accusation. You also illustrate you do not or can not read all the posts......see, as you showed now, not many are interested in lidDavie N3CVJ's hobby of "studying" (as he calls his unhealthy obsession with me) , as one of his posts concerning his warblings on mental health claimed that when one speaks of a subject repeatedly and no one around the speaker can comprehed or make sense of what one is saying (Like you and your daily references to homos and homo acts), then that person has created a world of fantasy is which their cries have taken on an aura of reality to the speaker....taking issue with one pointing such things out as your daily reminders of sexual cornfusion and continued insults laden with homosexual remarks leave but one

If he used a simple coax switch, he could hook all the radios to one

I use an Alpha Delta 4 position switch to switch from HF rig to HF rig. The 4 position switch then runs to the antenna tuner with allows me to select any of 4 HF antennas. The VHF rig gets it's own separate feedline. I find it pretty convenient. This may be ideal for you as well.

You have already demonstrated your belief in what erroneously constituted libel law, and are about to do it again with another topic that you appear to be desperately obfuscating with or for..

>I'm still waiting for you to prove me wrong on >the libel issue.

You're the only one. When you prove yourself ignorant of what you profess, no discussion is necessary. Besides, there's no free lunch.

>Seems you got fairly quiet when the law was >cut and pasted for your perusal. And if you still >think it's up to the defendant to "disprove" libel, >you're even more laughable.

You make my day, porthole lid-Davie junior. I'm not certain how you will do it each day, but you manage :)
I would suggest you familarize yourself with the recent Tom Cruise libel situation. Not at all precedent setting, it follows suit of all before it and I use it only so as to familiarize yourself with such matters that you continue to offer but have no clue.

When did you stop? There are posts of you without prejudice, talking of acts, by yourself, of breaking the law less than three years ago, and giving advice on how to do so (abetting) less than that. So just exactly what date did you induct yourself into Martyrdom on?

>Who's a martyr? Recounting stories that >happened to me, many years ago, were used >as examples.

"Many" is a relevant term.
You abetted in offering advice break the law very recently.

>Besides, it doesn't matter if it was yesterday.

Youwould love to have one , anyone, believe that, but the matter is, it very much is related, as it illustrates your malicious lies, conveniently orchestrated by your refusal to answer the last time you broke the law pertaining to radio. Light too bright, lid-davie N3CVJ <g>?

>You seem to think that people can't change, >and anyone, who was guilty of something at >one time or another, is forever branded, and >can never change or speak out against that >which he had been guilty of.

(chuckle) Your unhealthy obsession with what others think is always the monkey on your back.

>I, don't have a problem with it.

LOL! The archives are chock full of you "not" having a problem with just that..LOL!

>I only have a problem with people with poor >judgement and bad attitudes. The rude, >arrogant, inconsiderate people, who like to do >things like "squash mudducks" because it >inflates their poor self esteem. Freebanders, >who mind their own business, conduct >themselves with some civility and decorum, >and don't go out of their way to interfere with >others, do not earn my contempt.

But lid-Davie, many of my posts are full of operating courtesy references, and my past posts state the same as what you just have, and you have claimed you have never heard me...yet you continue to amuse and pleasure yourself at your own expense with desperations.....you are indeed full of conflict, davie.

What constitutes a "conviction" to you? A statement by Riley that you committed violations? A letter from the FCC warning one they were in some type of violation? A subpoena? An NAL? An actual court room complete with trial?

>Something that results in a forfeiture of >money, and/or equipment, or >the assignment >of jail time.

It figures. I ask what constitutes a conviction and you expertly claim the sentences imposed.
Davie, an adjudication of guilt constitutes a conviction.

>Innocent people don't get fined, have their >equipment taken, or get jail time. I don't care >how the sentence is imposed. Only you would >attempt to cloud the issue with semantics. If >they get fined, etc., it means they are guilty, >end of story.

The semantics are all yours lid-dAvey,,,,,,,I asked what constitutes a conviction, and you answered ignorantly with examples of sentences.
What constitutes a conviction, is an adjudication of guilt, despite what you believe.
"Innocent people don't get jail time" is about as ignorant as "Right or wrong, I am behind the US all the way." Pick up a bookand get your nose outta my ass,,you'll seee several death row inmates exonerated in the last two years due to DNA testing. See lid-davie,,I didn't do this to you,,,you continue to do it to yourself by acting as if you knowwhat you are talking of.

>I never claimed that I personally was afraid >of terrorists. There >you go again, not >comprehending the >meaning of general >pronouns.

Oh here you go again....claiming "I" didn't really mean "I" when YOU wrote it..sort of like when you said any of "Us" alive during Hitler's rise to power, didn't really mena "us", which was shot down before it had a chance to spawn it's hideous little lid,,er head.

>Only you, would even attempt to make that an >issue, since it should be clear that I am not old >enough to have been alive in the 1930's.

Obviously,,which is why I corrected you.

> That would make me at least in my 70's and >more likely in my 80's, to have any real >accounting of the era.
>I don't have the time to be your grammar >teacher, as well as your therapist, law advisor >and radio technician. You'll just have to learn >these things on your own.

I pointed out your age to you, lid-davie, as you were either cornfused or deliberately trying to lend a false sense of credibility to your lackluster post. Speaking of yourself in the third person illustrates your fantasies.

>However, there are others who are,

See, how quickly you can learn when forced? That's all you had to say..."There were OTHERS alive during Hitler's rise".

>What? Of course there were others alive then. >That's what I was refering to. The fact that it >took you this long to "get it", and the >realization of which, comes to you as some >sort of epiphany, does not surprise me.

but you didn't.

Yes I did. You are the only one who can't comprehend it.

>.you deliberately obfuscated as you do so >well.

Then allow us to look at your words again and you can disseminate your "truth" for us.

"Those of us alive during Hitler (snip).."

Now,,there is no obfuscation, except on your behalf. Any audience reading that is under the impression the writer of the remark was indeed alive during the Hitler era. The fact that such proper technique is lost on you is of no great surprise to myself.

>Mr. Pot, meet Mr. Kettle. Hey, guess what, >you're both black!

Several things have taken place here. One,,is lid-Davie Hall N3CVJ hates to be shown when he is wrong. Two, is lid-davie junior has a problem admitting he is wrong. And third, but defintitely not last, none of the names you have unrealistically equated youself with are coming to your aid. You;'re a lid.
And try not to speak for others.

>Why not? You always manage to...

You know not of what they want, believe, nor feel.

>And you know this how?

Default.
I am much more in tune with the general mass of cbers

>You're only in tune with outlaw CBers,

Not true.That is only the part you focus on due your myopic views.

> who thumb their nose at their responsibilities.

Not true again, and this time is due your undue malice.

>How do you know what the rest of us want?

You're not "us",,,,,,which is why you began reaching for names to include yourself in,,you are seeking acceptance anywhere you can find it. Face it, you're ostracized as alid and the only acceptance you have is with the likes of N8 and ilk. The hammies don't want you and the cbers are smarter than you. You were warned back then, but no, you had to continue and frolic with Dogie, ignoring please from the group and from your elders.....you deserve it.

>And herein lies the source of your contempt. >Your seething dislike of hams, simply because >they are able to do something you cannot, or >will not due to paranoia concerns over losing >your precious anonymity.

LOL! It's not contempt, Dave, it's ignorance,,and it's all yours, pal..LOL!

>So who's the more credible person? Someone >who climbs up the ladder by working >(However easy or hard) and achieving their >goals? Or a slacker, who makes up excuses >and reasons why they don't WANT to >succeed, to cover the truth, that they are >either unable or just not motivated enough?

Any time you can muster the energy needed to refocus...let me know.

>Which brings us back to the question that >begs, what do you consider work, >Something that requires a conscious decision, >and the associated effort to complete.

Need examples Davie,

>From you? You have proven time and time >again, that you don't have the >slightest clue about how society works, or >anything else. That's why you shake your >bitter, angry fist in the air, and blame the >"establishment" for all of your problems.

That's pretty funny..I didn't even know an establishment nor conspiracy existed until you enlightened me....LOL!

>That's >why you buy into leftist propaganda so >easily. Socialists and communists, like people >like you. You're easy to pander to.

PT Barnum had your number.

There ya' have it..that arrogant disdain for those who are cbers..you just cant help yourself.

>Sorry if you can't handle the truth.

See,,,lids like you don't like to be shown what they are,,whcih is why you snipped the part where you called cbers "not normal"..didn't want to be reminded of your arrogance....
LOL! Believe me, Davie,, this room is quite aware of how you feel toward cbers.

>And what way is that?

That you hold such as abnormal and feel that others somehow are "unable to handle your views"

>Not others, YOU.

No,,you conveniently snipped the part where you said cbers were not normal, you didn't mention me once.....it was pointed out and this is where you attempt to change the meaning of what you wrote with lies, yet again..LOL! LOL!

>I've known that >for many years. What's funny, >is someone like >you,
who may ridicule a >ham,

No dice. I have nothing against hammies, Davie, just liars. Your attempted insinuation of such is illustrative of your desperation.

>You say that, but when you make statements >like:
> "some hammie lid that feels he is due >respect merely by virtue of his status he >   feels he "worked" for".

Davie,,,I was being polite and not fronting you off by call...from now on I will when referring to you so you can comprehend it through that comunication deficit.

>It shows your underlying contempt for the ham >service, and those who chose to make the >effort to obtain their tickets. You berate the >ham service at every chance you get.

I have never berated the hammie service and all those present know it and see who is what. You're drowning in your lies of sheer desperation.

I must note here , that out of incompetence, your snip job was inept, so I just took the liberty of doing it correctly.

Nope..it sure doesn't dAve,,and the difference is, I respect your opinion.

>You have a funny way of showing it, your >continual attacks of my >character not >withstanding.

It's all return fire, Davie.

>The classic "catch all" excuse.

Truth hurts lids like YOU,,,always have, ever since I began pointing out your behavior that is a danger to hammie radio.

>You feel you've been given the green light to >be disrespectful, rude, and sociopathic, >because you perceive that you've been >somehow "wronged".

I am "given" nothing despite your liberal views.
I need no permission fom anyone, unlike you, who needs a number.

>There is no excuse for your behavior.

Davie,,if you can't act like a big boy and muster some self-control and ignore what you personally have problems with, I suggest you find yourself a new hobby..this one is proving too difficult fr you to grasp.

>The cries of "he started it" may have worked >on the playground, when you were a kid, but >not in the adult world. You're equally culpable.

Difference is, I admit to muddying the waters with you lids.....you have a serious self-esteem problem by blaming another for behavior you can not accept nor debate without losing focus.
see, your insults are so ingrained in yourself you realize not even doing it and are unable to recognize your own incompetence, only the return fires.
If you consider getting handed your head on a platter, every time you spread a lie, or perpetuate misleading information, as an behavior can not handle, that becomes your comprehensive problem. I will continue to point out such deficits.

>I have no trouble separating my personal >feelings from the issues.

You have a funny way of showing it.....your posts are peppered with insults.

>Only to people with fragile psyche's, like >evidently, yourself. If you find the truth >insulting, I think you need to do some serious >introspection.

The fact that you are not yet able to distinguish such illustrates it all. The FCC doesn't hold one a criminal until convicted. You trash the 1st amendment

>The 1st amemdement is about freedom of >speech. It is not about unlimited speech (Such >as the "fire in a theatre example), and it is not >about breaking federal laws in the process.
>Your right to free speech does not give you >the right to circumvent FCC rules. You're once >again talking like a disenfranchised >20-something.

Not ata ll,,you are seriously devoid of reasoning..your analogy of "fire" is flawed. While I can not use such a term in a theater of course, my speech is certainly unlimited in numeric content. That you are unable to muster such self-control to deal with such speech you believe inexcuseable is your problems, despite your attempts at blaming society.

and use usenet as your trial and appoint yourself judge jury.

>I apply the priciples of common logic. You >emotional bias is irrelevant.

Common logic goes out the window when you lose topic on each thread.

>Criminal: One who commits a crime.
>Crime: An act committed in violation of the >law.
>If you violate the law, you commit a crime. If >you commit a crime, that makes you a >criminal. Simple logic.

It's not that cut and dry, Herr Hall. there would be no need for a court system if it were..all we would need would be a lid-davie N3CVJ.
Can you see a problem with this if the feds took your approach, Davie junior? The mere fact is, what you feel and what the feds feel and do is blurred by your irrational beliefs.

>There is nothing irrational about logic.

Only your interpretations of such
So it's the group's problem that you are unable to exhibit self-control and remain on topic?

>You have me confused with you. I can easily >stay on topic. It's you that tries to steer the >topic away from the original subject and onto >one of your non sequitorical tangents.

LOL! You must stop taking so many anti-depressants..just yesterday you claimed wandering offtopic is your "hobby" and when pointed out its not the groups hobby , you whined with "But that's not my problem". illustrating once again, your contempt and disdain for the group, making it all about you,,LOL! It's not about you lid-Davie, despite your self-esteem that is battered and in desperate need of attention, evidenced by your pathetic coupling of your name with others whose work actually precedes them in reputation, unlike your own where the need for selfpromotion is evident. Based on your own posts, no one would send you an AM radio to fix from this group.

So it's our fault you have not the self-control to remain on topic. Just wanted to ascertain it once more.

>Check the google archives to see who >remains on topic, and who twists meanings.

Once again, you attempt to dictate not what we see, but what you say...LOL!

>Been there, done that.

No Davie,,you have done just the opposite and demonstrated your lid status for refusal to take your obsessiveness of what you refer to as "hobby" to a proper forum.

>Which forum would be "proper", for making >observations about sociopathic Cbers, who >hide behind anonymity, break rules at their >discretion, and then blame everyone else for >their own trangressions?

How can there be blame when there are no transgressions? You're getting careless and sloppy again.
It's your problem that you blame on the world. It'sYOUR inabilty, your lack of self-control, your lid-status responsible for your actions, no matterwho or waht you atttempt to blame..
It what? It"illustrates"? LOL! Davey, how come that term was never once utilized by yourself prior to my schooling of you?

>Check the archives. You'll see who teaches >who.

Ahh...the exit through the rat hole .... :)

>If you want a therapist, there are many >LICENSED, legal ones who will >gladly listen to >you. Just let your fingers do >the walking......

I do.. as you have the mark on your forehead to show it.

>Another dream? Which character were you >then.
>Ah! When the circle closes in, and the lights >begin to dim, you can >always run and hide >behind that shield of >anonymity, and the lack >of accountability that >it provides, and claim >that this is all an "act".
>Yea, well, maybe it is, >and I've been duped >just like the rest of the >group.
LOL! Not the rest of the group, Davey,,just a few of you lids, the social outcasts and deviants you associate with.

>Why, Hello again Mr. Pot, I thought you forgot >about us.....

>Dave
>"Sandbagger"
>N3CVJ

And miss what you do to yourself? Never.

Good choice Bert I also use one of the alpha deltas , but the real neat one is the ameritron switchbox that hooks up outside and uses 1 run of coax into the house you then can hook up to 5 different antennas best part is you can use 1 run of good coax into the shack ie: hardline etc and switch electronicly between all antennas

Have Regency radio that someone hooked up a Turner power-mike to. This mike requires an expensive 7.5v battery. Can the battery requirement be defeated and have the mike be just a regular dynamic one? If not, will any dynamic type mike work with the unit? Also...antenna is mounted behind cab of PU in the middle of the rear window, with 2/3s of it above cab. Will installing a rubber mat on the trucks bed affect the ground-plane? Thanks.

Najh I call em as i see them you were asked as well as all others in the group to avoid the trolls and leave them alone, yet you started with your incoherent rambling posts sucking up bandwidth and flooding the Ng with replies to aaron etc, now in the immortal words of the NG PunchClown . I have returned to you as you like to say what belongs to you, now you don't like it, well my sorry ass fella toguh shit no one liked it when you took the Ng hostage with your jacked off replies to aaron doug etc.

No he doesn't he needs to shut the fuck up for a change he is a asshole he has caused much of the major strife in this NG, his posts are incoherent he mis quotes people he lies he deserves to have his web tv taken from him and go sit in the corner.

I don't either since I was just responding to "hey Bert" , but if he wanted to test the reciever of 4 radios on same antenna etc he could turn them all on and just flip the switch to each radio and compare results? Or test the transmit of all radios and compare them with same antenna etc in a short period of time. who knows what his intentions are.

You should be able to use just about any standard mic as long as it's connector is wired correctly. But the power mic will probably not work at all without the battery (you should test it just to be sure). I'll bet that if the power mic is in good shape, just about any CB shop would gladly trade and wire for you a dynamic mic.

It won't make any difference; that is, as long as you aren't re-mounting the antenna on the rubber mat.

Mopar:

I did.. 97.101(d) applies to amateurs.. and states that no amateur operator shall interfere with any radio transmission. It makes no mention as to whether the other radio transmission is legal or not, nor does it restrict the rule to the amateur bands. Therefore, if someone has an Amateur license, and interferes with any radio signal, intentionally or not, they are guilty of violating 97.101(d)

There are provisions in part 15 regarding interference as well, as evidenced by another post I made today. Not to mention that part 15 devices in the CB band are restricted below 27.28 Mhz.

You might want to check out the Part 15 rules. They're easily found at http://www.arrl.org/tis/info/part15.html

I've done my homework... apparently others aren't ready to understand that fact, or the rules involved.

From the above website:

Frequency limits for part 15 devices in the "CB band" are:

26.96 - 27.28 MHz Hobbyist, walkie-talkie, baby monitor, etc.

Harmful Interference

The FCC rules require the equipment manufacturer or importer to design and test his products to ensure that they do not exceed the absolute maximum limits. In addition, the FCC requires that Part 15 devices be operated in such a way that they not cause harmful interference. The operator of the Part 15 device is responsible for correcting the interference or to stop using the device if so ordered by the FCC.

Yes if it is on the amatuer bands, those regualations don't have any bearing on the cb band

Subject: Canadian humour, eh?

On behalf of Canadians everywhere I'd like to offer an apology to the United States of America. We haven't been getting along very well recently and for that, I am truly sorry.

I'm sorry we called George Bush a moron. He is a moron but, it wasn't nice of us to point it out. If it's any consolation, the fact that he's a moron shouldn't reflect poorly on the people of America. After all it's not like you actually elected him.

I'm sorry about our softwood lumber. Just because we have more trees than you doesn't give us the right to sell you lumber that's cheaper and better than your own.

I'm sorry we beat you in Olympic hockey. In our defense I guess our excuse would be that our team was much, much, much, much better than yours.

I'm sorry we burnt down your white house during the war of 1812. I notice you've rebuilt it! It's Very Nice.

I'm sorry about your beer. I know we had nothing to do with your beer but, we Feel your Pain.

I'm sorry about our waffling on Iraq. I mean, when you're going up against a crazed dictator, you wanna have your friends by your side. I realize it took more than two years before you guys pitched in against Hitler, but that was different. Everyone knew he had weapons.

And finally on behalf of all Canadians, I'm sorry that we're constantly apologizing for things in a passive-aggressive way which is really a thinly veiled criticism. I sincerely hope that you're not upset over this. We've seen what you do to countries you get upset with.

Thank you.

Correct, and a well deserved "fuck you and your beer" is much in line. You canadians give way too much lip service to our coattails.(read blow us) Find your own continent before we decide you are trespassing on our's.

Is it just me, or is #8 just REALLY thick?

Read it again, #8... It says NOTHING about what frequency the interference occurs on. In other words, if you have an Amateur license, and you interfere, even on the CB bands, 97.101(d) STILL APPLIES TO YOU.

Even if you think it doesn't, part 15.5(b) does in this case as well, so that'd be two violated rules. But who's counting?

I hope this is sufficiently succinct and simple enough for you this time.

I've tried telling him that. Many times, he can't keep straight who he's responding to. Just last week, he thought he'd be cute by correcting a grammatical mistake, that he thought I'd committed. The real laugh was that he was correcting his own passage.

It's almost becoming a cost effective alternative if the prices of cigarettes become any more expensive.

I can't smoke. Smoke makes me cough badly. Pot also gives me a headache.
That's why I've never had the desire to do so.

Well then, give the device to a non-ham neighbor on the other side of the illegal station, and let HIM use it. Problem solved.

Easily solved by adding a bandpass filter, or limiting a sweep to stop at the upper limit. I think though, that the band limits for part 15 devices have not been updated since the inception of 40 channel radios.
Otherwise, according to the rules as you state, it would be now illegal for a 100 mW walkie talkie to operare above channel 27. I have never seen such a provision or warning. Many multi-channel part 15 CB walkie talkies have been, and are still being sold, along side a selection of crystal for any of the 40 channels.

What I don't understand is why you would oppose an effective method of dealing with a much larger interference problem, by arguing semantics of rules that apparently are not important enough to have been updated since before 1977, especially when set against the backdrop of rampant disregard of part 95 rules, on a daily basis, by stations with far greater interference potential?

You want to nitpick part 15? You can start by citing anyone who opens their rigs (CB, Ham, or otherwise) and performs mods, effectively changing the radio's original design, which therefore voids their part 15 certification.

I understand your "two wrongs don't make a right" attitude. But I look at it as one small potential rule infraction, to take care of a much larger rule infraction. Would they give a person a ticket, for exceeding the speed limit, while transporting a heart attack victim to a hospital? Sometimes, the ends justify the means.

About 20 years ago, I rubbed elbows with an FCC engineer at a hamfest. During the ensuing small talk, the topic of illegal CBers and interference came up. I made mention of the jamming device, as a deterrant to neighboring illegal stations, and the FCC man commented to me that it was a "novel" idea (A story Twisty tried to claim that I "lied" about, the last time I told it). It seems that while the FCC is seemingly unconcerned with CBers run amock, they are even less concerned with people using part 15 devices to solve the problems, that the FCC can't or won't deal with.

I'm starting to think seriously about producing these devices. I've already had a few E-mail inquiries, as a result of this thread, asking whether I would make them one. If there is indeed a market for something like this, heck, maybe I'll capitalize on it.....

Taking back the band, one outlaw at a time.....

The short answer, no. An alternative to the 7V battery would be to run the mike off of radio power. This basically involves modifying the radio to supply one of the internal regulated voltages (Usually between 6 and 9 volts) to one of the unused mike pins (If there are any), or to couple it to the mike audio lead (Making sure to D.C. isolate it, via capacitive coupling), and then modifying the mike to get its juice from that pin on the radio. I've done it to several of my mobile rigs (Including an RCI-2950), and I never have to worry about a dead mike battery.

Another "Rube Goldberg" solution, is to solder a 9V battery clip to the internal battery terminals, and use a cheap 9V battery, and tape it to the back of the mike or cord. While aesthetically, not very pleasing, some of the locals in my area have done this, and it works.

> If not, will any dynamic type mike work with the unit?

Usually yes. A standard, run of the mill, dynamic mike will work fine. But you'll lose the audio gain of the amplified mike. Be careful not to use a mike with a condenser mike element, as these usually require a dc voltage on the audio lead to function.

Greetings from Texas!

I am restoring a Kris 23+ tube-type CB radio base station.
It came to me with no tubes installed, and no other info.
I need to know what tubes are used in this set. My radio is a later model. The earlier model, which is covered in Sams Photofacts volume 45, is different from the later model in many ways (the two models don't even have the same number of tubes in them!). Is there a Sams for the later model? If so, what volume? At least knowing what all of the tube types are will be a start.

Thanks and 73,
Dean, K5DH

PS: To the hams who will no doubt be tempted to bitch at me for posting a CB-related query on the ham radio groups, I'd like to point out that hams have been a much better source for this kind of information than CBers. I guess that's because the majority of hams used to be CBers. -DH

Mopar:
I did.. 97.101(d) applies to amateurs.. and states that no amateur operator shall interfere with any radio transmission. It makes no mention as to whether the other radio transmission is legal or not, nor does it restrict the rule to the amateur bands. Therefore, if someone has an Amateur license, and interferes with any radio signal, intentionally or not, they are guilty of violating 97.101(d)
There are provisions in part 15 regarding interference as well, as evidenced by another post I made today. Not to mention that part 15 devices in the CB band are restricted below 27.28 Mhz.
You might want to check out the Part 15 rules. They're easily found at http://www.arrl.org/tis/info/part15.html
I've done my homework... apparently others aren't ready to understand that fact, or the rules involved.
  From the above website:
Frequency limits for part 15 devices in the "CB band" are:
26.96 - 27.28 MHz   Hobbyist, walkie-talkie, baby monitor, etc.
Harmful Interference
The FCC rules require the equipment manufacturer or importer to design and test his products to ensure that they do not exceed the absolute maximum limits. In addition, the FCC requires that Part 15 devices be operated in such a way that they not cause harmful interference. The operator of the Part 15 device is responsible for correcting the interference or to stop using the device if so ordered by the FCC.

SSB is correct as far as what the law states.
Ironic how some of those, such as Hall, who are licensed for communications, suffer from the greatest deficit concerning such. Maybe that is why he felt the need to attach such important status to his license.....he figured the license may aid or at least mask the deficits. This lid just gets done bragging about his years and years as a hammie, experience, and bragging on how good he is at fixing shit, and here the hypocrite hall opens unexpectedly and he offers advice on how to be a "criminal". One hell of a reflection on his character and how society is reflective of such moral decay. But remember, N3CVJ not only believes, but claimed several times he has "changed his criminal" ways since "then". He merely aids, abets, and encourages those seeking to break communicative laws ut in place for the greater of society, not a few selfish individuals like Hall who thumb their noses at the FCC and disregard it's laws like a common criminal. I believe your ignoraat illustration went something like this: Criminal: One who breaks the law, commits a crime.

I won't call you a criminal though. Hypocritical lid, fits well.

You read it again and this time understand not assume what it means, it the amatuer band you are making assumptions based on your ignorance. In

Yes it is simple you are a hammerhead and your wrong, simple enough concept for me. No where does it say what you claim. NOWHERE part 97 has nothing to do with a ham who operates on another Band. Part 97 ends at the end of the Ham bands.

6093. Soldiers Using FRS

EAGLE BASE, Bosnia and Herzegovina ï¿½ For soldiers on patrol with the Bosnian peacekeeping mission, the best way to stay in touch starts with the post exchange.

Thatï¿½s where soldiers are buying up two-way radios designed for civilian families on ski slopes or at the mall.

The commercial two-way radios are smaller, more powerful and more reliable than Army-issue hand-held radios, said 2nd Lt. Drew Weaver, 1st Platoon leader from Company C, 1st Battalion, 151st Infantry Regiment of the Indiana National Guard.

The National Guard unit is serving a six-month rotation at Camp McGovern as part of Stabilization Force 11.

ï¿½Everybody in the squad has one,ï¿½ said Spc. Brian Rabreau, a Company B, 1st Battalion, 14th Infantry Regiment gunner. The regiment is part of the 25th Infantry Division, Light, from Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, currently serving at Eagle Base.

Most of the soldiers carry Motorola TalkAbout series and Uniden Eco series radios because Army and Air Force Exchange Service stores and catalogs sell them, at prices ranging from $69 to $159. Those types of radios are used under the Family Radio Service, a portion of the UHF spectrum set aside in 1997 by the Federal Communications Commission for families and small groups to use relatively inexpensive two-way radios to communicate, at no charge, among themselves.

Some patrols treat the FRS radios like Army-issue radios. During pre-patrol briefings, the patrol leader gives patrol members the FRS primary and backup frequencies. The radios contain different codes that can be selected on which to receive signals. Only those who know the code can speak to each other.

Soldiers on patrol use the FRS radios to warn other vehicles in a convoy of obstacles in the road, to give directions and to reposition forces. During illegal weapons and explosives collection patrols, the soldiers call in the location of illegal items for pickup.

Around camp, patrol members use the radios to inform each other of duty schedule changes, to discuss recreation choices and to generally stay in touch, Rabreau said.

The soldiers know the Army has communications security concerns. Army Signal Command radio instructions prohibit the transmission of unit locations, troop and equipment strength, and information on ammunition supplies over nonsecure radios.

However, soldiers avoid talking about the sensitive subjects on FRS radios, just as they would on the nonsecure Army-issue hand-held radios, said Staff Sgt. Earl Dean, a Company B patrol leader.

GI radios

The soldiers already have radios available from the Army inventory for use while patrolling, said Capt. Michael Campbell, the 1st Battalion, 14th Infantry Regiment signal officer. Army signal companies are responsible for an Army unitï¿½s communications.

The Army uses the AN/PRC-127 as its standard hand-held radio, Campbell said. The radio has a range of 3,000 yards, weighs about 3 pounds and is 7 inches high by 3 inches wide, according to the radioï¿½s operation manual.

Most patrols also carry two AN/PRC-119 radios. One of them is vehicle-mounted, while the other can be mounted on a backpack and carried, said Sgt. Joshua Miller, a Company B, 1st Battalion, 14th Infantry Regiment team leader.

The AN/PRC-119 radio is the Armyï¿½s communication workhorse and has a transmission range of five miles, weighs 10 to 15 pounds and is about a foot long by 6 inches wide, Campbell said.

The largest FRS radio commonly bought and used by soldiers has transmission ranges of two to four miles, weighs around 10 ounces and is 6 inches high and 2 inches wide, depending on the model.

The Army recognized soldiersï¿½ need for intrasquad communications and recently purchased the Icom F3S radio system, Campbell said.
The radioï¿½s size and weight are comparable to the Motorola and Uniden models, but that radio has a range only of up to 1,000 yards, Miller said.

The Army issues the F3S only to regular Army units, so National Guard and Reserve units serving with SFOR are left out in the cold when it comes to squad level communications, Campbell said.

ï¿½We could not get the job doneï¿½ without the FRS radios, said Spc. Justin Antle, a Company C, 1st Battalion, 151st Infantry Regiment gunner. During weapons collection patrols, the soldiers need to venture away from their vehicles and the one soldier who may be carrying the radio backpack.

ï¿½We need to be able to move,ï¿½ Antle said.

Campbell said he understands why the soldiers want the TalkAbout-type radios. ï¿½The need is there,ï¿½ he said. ï¿½These soldiers are on the tip of the spear. They require instant communications.ï¿½

However, he thinks the Army should issue soldiers FRS radios instead of making them buy the radios on their own, Campbell said.

The plan would not be without precedent, Campbell said. In June 2000 the Marines started purchasing the Icom IC-4008M, a FRS-type radio, for squad-level communications.

The Marine radio is small, lightweight, cheap and powerful for its size, Campbell said.

At around $75, if the radio breaks, Marines can throw it away, Campbell added.

ï¿½Not that I had anything to do with the decision, but if I had to do it all over again, I would get the Marine radio,ï¿½ he said.

The Army did factor the ability of the Icom F3S to be programmed with 14 different frequencies, compared with the Icom IC-4008M, which probably has the usual five frequencies, Campbell said.

The Marines had the radio modified to operate on special Marine UHF frequencies, according to an Icom press release about the contract.

Shopping for radios

In contrast to the Marines, soldiers purchase FRS radios out of their own pocket at military exchanges.

The radios currently are sold out at the Eagle Base post exchange, said an AAFES salesclerk at the exchange.

However, people may also order the radios out of the AAFES catalog, the salesclerk offered.

The most popular radio, the Motorola TalkAbout T6400, costs $99 in the catalog. Other Motorola FRS radios available through AAFES range from $69 to $159.

Some soldiers invest in professional series FRS radios. These radios have ranges of up to four miles, can scan frequencies, and have eight FRS frequencies and two UHF frequencies available.

ï¿½If [soldiers] want to buy them, Iï¿½m all for it,ï¿½ said Staff Sgt. Earl Dean, a Company B, 1st Battalion, 14th Infantry Regiment patrol leader. ï¿½[The FRS radios] are very reliable.ï¿½

Officials at Motorola did not return calls for comment about soldiersï¿½ use of the commercially available FRS radios.

At least as far back as the 1990-91 Persian Gulf War, soldiers have appreciated the advantages of the smaller, easier-to-use and powerful commercially available radios.

In after-action interviews with soldiers on the ground during the war in March 1991, Army officials discovered problems with the
AN/PRC-127 hand-held radios, according to an Army history Web site.

At the time, Sgt. 1st Class Jose Claudio and Staff Sgt. Gary Danberg revealed problems with programming frequencies into, and maintaining the power sources for, the Army radios.

After going without communications for a time in a battlefield environment, the soldiers obtained Motorola radios and communication became possible.

Problems were eventually solved with the AN/PRC-127 radio.

However, when Army officials asked Danberg which radio he finds more effective in the field, he replied, ï¿½I would recommend using Motorola.ï¿½

Campbell said he knows of no plans to provide soldiers with the FRS type radios since the Army already purchased the Icom F3S system.

Calls to the Army Signal Command public affairs office for information on the Armyï¿½s radio purchasing plans were not returned.

Asked Tuesday why U.S. soldiers in Bosnia are being provided with inadequate communications equipment and having to compensate with radios bought from their own funds, Pentagon spokeswoman Victoria Clarke said, ï¿½I am not familiar with the situation in Bosnia, but this is not the first time Iï¿½ve heard something like this.ï¿½

Clarke said that Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld heard similar complaints of inadequate spare parts and other shortages when speaking to airmen at U.S. Transportation Command at Scott Air Force Base, Ill., during a recent visit.

ï¿½People are doing extraordinary thingsï¿½ in spite of such shortages, Clarke said.

ï¿½Having adequate equipment and resources they need to do the job is equally importantï¿½ to people in uniform as are issues of compensation and benefits, Clarke said.

ï¿½We are focused very, very hard on improving processes and policies ... so we can address those sorts of things, so someone doesnï¿½t have to reach into his own pocket to get the job done,ï¿½ Clarke said.

The Army has a Tactical Radio Communications System division responsible for providing timely, cost-effective, communications for soldiers during the Armyï¿½s transformation to an objective force, according to the divisionï¿½s Web site.

The divisionï¿½s project manager, Col. John Grobmeir, could not be reached for comment.

For now, soldiers in Bosnia may use the FRS radios, Campbell said. However, the Bosnian government recently has expressed an interest in control over radio frequencies.

If that happens and the frequencies used by the radios are restricted, the U.S. government could be fined when soldiers use the radios, Campbell said.

REC.RADIO.CB AFTER TWISTEDHED

(WASHINGTON) The US and AKC said today they are prepared to undertake a mission to help rebuild the newsgroup's infrastructure after mounting what Mr. Busch calls a "war of liberation" in rec.radio.cb. Central to this vision is a newsgroup free from Twistedhed. "The tryrant must be toppled. A liberated rec.radio.cb can show the power of freedom to transform a former battleground dominated by antisocial rhetoric into the vital radio hobbyist newsgroup it once was," Busch said.

The vision is noble, but challenges loom large. Twistedhed has historically incited conflict among rival factions and flamed many potential pro-legal rivals, emphasizing a clear message of advocacy for abuse of FCC rules. There are concerns that during such a final Armageddon-like conflict, Twistedhed may try to set huge sections of the newsgroup afire like he did in the previous conflict.

Two groups, CB hobby fence-sitters and ham/cber pro-legal activists, have been persecuted under Twistedhed leaving a legacy of tensions that could be difficult to manage. Twistedhed has invested the newsgroup with a system of harassment that has placed loyalty to pro-illegal factions and pirate freeband extremists within the norm of acceptability. If a possible U.S.-led military action achieves its goals, the imbalance will be dismantled with the toppling of Twistedhed. Changing the culture, though, could take longer. There's more to democratization than simply ridding rec.radio.cb of Twistedhed.

There's the matter of maintaining an open forum with checks and balances under an ad hoc group of non-political moderates. An atmosphere free from Twistedhed is needed to help provide the basis for the critical and independent thought characterized by a newsgroup ready to enter a new era of mutual tolerance and harmony. If it works, the promise is enormous. Busch is not merely interested in settling old scores with Twistedhed. "We have really tried to emphasize that our intentions are good, that we're going to help the newsgroup. And it begins with getting rid of Twistedhed".

In other words, you are a loser that is impotent, so you now must resort to a war attack on the first amendment, merely because you are an incompetent lid and can not muster the self-control needed to ignore that of which you can not handle. The fact that you wish to do away with the first amendment merely because you have no communication skills and can not handle that of which you read indicates by all measures that I am 100% corect in my approach and shall continue to point out the hypocricies of such lid behavior non-artistically displayed by yourself.. The fact that you wish to exile my chosen persona from usenet based upon your insecurities and inabilty to deal with me, indicates the lights are too bright for your liking. Professing your love of censorship for all which renders you incompetent, makes responding to your cries for help all the more worhwhile. really, junior. Amass some qualities that a man may possess, not a crybaby. Get some gumption and maybe some self-respect for yourself and you will find the world isn't really against you, you merely need slight behavior modification in order to communicate effectively and lose the deficit.

Unfortunately, there's still a "disconnect" somewhere. The tube list on that web site sez 6AQ5 for the audio amp, but my set has a 9-pin socket, so it can't use a 6AQ5. It has not been modified by a user, so there must have been more than two versions. Could be a 6BQ5, 6AW8, 6GW8, etc. I'll have to find someone who has a radio of the same version as mine and see what theirs has. :(

The search continues...

You trying to figure out what is supposed to be there?

Find the pin for the plate, the pin for the control grid, and the filament pins, and we'll see what we can come up with.

The majority of hams used to be CBers? What?
Anyway, you put some nice 10M crystals in that thing, a BFO, Yep, 'privacy channels'. Yeah, only those who know the code. Ummmm ... just don't set your scanner (or HT) to only unlock on a given PLL tone.

Hoooo boy ;) I also have a great deal of suspicion on the 'long range' FRS radios vs military issue devices. Normal HTs (running a couple of watts) should be good for 5 miles or so over flat terrain. FRS will be lucky to do much more than 2 miles. Not bad units, but a lot of misinformation in that post!

But let's assume the interference occurs, say on ---a ham band like 10 Meters. A "bandit" station has NO protection from unlicensed stations because he has no "rights" in the first place. If a ham is sitting on 28.085 yelling AUDIO, AUDIO, BIGGGGG POWER on AM over and over, he is in voilation of the rules on, at least, 2 counts. (1 by using voice on frequencies designated for CW and digital modes, and 2) and by causing interference to the stations who ARE using the frequency correctly. Making calls on an authorized frequency on which there are bandits does not constitute "interference" on the part of the licensed station---even if the licensee is aware that there is a bandit on the air' it is the REVERSE because the interference iis the fault of the guy that has no right to be there. The feds have already ruled in this issue. If a ham station interferes with a trucker, it is just tough. The ham can call CQ, CQ at full power allowed for that band and the trucker can't do a thing--even he is completely blocked from talking to the next truck. The only way a ham would be liable to charges is if he was interfering with other LICENSED stations, or was out of band. Think about it: If a licensed station were on-air and a bandit was on the same frequency, guess who would be cited. Ask rholling@fcc.gov

READING OPINIONS FROM BOTH SIDES BUT I HAVE DETECTED A HINT OF CONFUSION

THE BEST ADVICE SOMEONE EVER GAVE ME. HE TOLD ME ABOUT THE KISS METHOD
("KEEP IT SIMPLE, STUPID!) SO, WITH THIS AS A THEME, I'D LIKE TO APPLY
THIS THEORY FOR THOSE WHO DON'T QUITE GET IT. MY HOPE IS THAT WE CAN SIMPLIFY THINGS A BIT AND RECOGNIZE A FEW IMPORTANT FACTS.

HERE ARE 10 THINGS TO CONSIDER WHEN VOICING AN OPINION ON THIS IMPORTANT ISSUE:

1) BETWEEN PRESIDENT BUSH AND SADDAM HUSSEIN ... HUSSEIN IS THE BAD GUY.

2) IF YOU HAVE FAITH IN THE UNITED NATIONS TO DO THE RIGHT THING KEEP THIS IN MIND, THEY HAVE LIBYA HEADING THE COMMITTEE ON HUMAN RIGHTS AND
IRAQ HEADING THE GLOBAL DISARMAMENT COMMITTEE. DO YOUR OWN MATH HERE.

3) IF YOU USE GOOGLE SEARCH AND TYPE IN "FRENCH MILITARY VICTORIES," YOUR REPLY WILL BE "DID YOU MEAN FRENCH MILITARY DEFEATS?"

4) IF YOUR ONLY ANTI-WAR SLOGAN IS "NO WAR FOR OIL," SUE YOUR SCHOOL DISTRICT FOR ALLOWING YOU TO SLIP THROUGH THE CRACKS AND ROBBING YOU
THE EDUCATION YOU DESERVE.

5) SADDAM AND BIN LADEN WILL NOT SEEK UNITED NATIONS APPROVAL BEFORE THEY TRY TO KILL US.

6) DESPITE COMMON BELIEF, MARTIN SHEEN IS NOT THE PRESIDENT. HE PLAYS ONE ON T.V.

7) EVEN IF YOU ARE ANTI-WAR, YOU ARE STILL AN "INFIDEL!" AND BIN LADEN WANTS YOU DEAD, TOO

8) IF YOU BELIEVE IN A "VAST RIGHT-WING CONSPIRACY" BUT NOT IN THE DANGER THAT HUSSEIN POSES, QUIT HANGING OUT WITH THE DELL COMPUTER DUDE.

9) WE ARE NOT TRYING TO LIBERATE THEM.

10) WHETHER YOU ARE FOR MILITARY ACTION OR AGAINST IT, OUR YOUNG MEN AND WOMEN OVERSEAS ARE FIGHTING FOR US TO DEFEND OUR RIGHT TO SPEAK OUT. WE ALL NEED TO SUPPORT THEM WITHOUT RESERVATION.

Good reading, from a Toronto newspaper's editorial page!
Widespread, but only partial news coverage was given recently to a remarkable editorial broadcast from Toronto by Gordon Sinclair, a Canadian television commentator. What follows is the full text of his trenchant remarks as printed in the Congressional Record:

This Canadian thinks it is time to speak up for the Americans as most generous and possibly the least appreciated people on all the earth.

Germany, Japan and, to a lesser extent, Britain and Italy were lifted out of the debris of war by the Americans who poured in billions of dollars and forgave other billions in debts. None of these countries is today paying even the interest on its remaining debts to the United States.

When the franc was in danger of collapsing in 1956, it was the Americans who propped it up, and their reward was to be insulted and swindled on the streets of Paris. I was there. I saw it. When distant cities are hit by earthquakes, it is the United States that hurries in to help. This spring, 59 American communities were flattened by tornadoes. Nobody helped.

The Marshall Plan and the Truman Policy pumped billions of dollars into discouraged countries. Now newspapers in those countries are writing about the decadent, warmongering Americans. I'd like to see just one of those countries that is gloating over the erosion of the United States Dollar build its own airplane. Does any other country in the world have a plane to equal the Boeing Jumbo Jet, the Lockheed Tristar, or the Douglas 10? If so, why don't they fly them? Why do all the International lines except Russia fly American planes?

Why does no other land on earth even consider putting a man or woman on the moon? You talk about Japanese technocracy, and you get radios. You talk about German technocracy, and you get automobiles. You talk about American technocracy, and you find men on the moon - - not once, but several times - and safely home again.

You talk about scandals, and the Americans put theirs right in the store window for everybody to look at. Even their draft-dodgers are not pursued and hounded. They are here on our streets, and most of them, unless they are breaking Canadian laws, are getting American dollars from ma and pa at home to spend here.

When the railways of France, Germany and India were breaking down through age, it was the American who rebuilt them. When the Pennsylvania Railroad and the New York Central went broke, nobody loaned them an old caboose. Both are still broke.

I can name you 5,000 times when the Americans raced to the help of other people in trouble. Can you name me even one time when someone else raced to the Americans in trouble? I don't think there was outside help even during the San Francisco earthquake.

Our neighbors have faced it alone, and I'm one Canadian who is damned tired of hearing them get kicked around. They will come out of this thing with their flag high. And when they do, they are entitled to thumb their nose at the lands that are gloating over their present troubles. I hope Canada is not one of those.

The easiest thing for you to do, is to go to Radio Shack and see if they still carry those "Space Patrol" walkie talkies. They have crap receivers, but since you aren't going to use it, it doesn't matter. They used to be sold for something like $10 a pair. Take the channel 14 crystal out, and sub in one for channel 31. Hook up your batteries, tape the PTT button down, and hide it as close to his station as legally possible.

So this thing IS for real. Wow! Actually, I took a look at it, and the schematic. Impressive, to say the least. What it is, essentially, is a PLL circuit designed to replace a stock fixed mixer crystal circuit.
This board contains provisions for +/- 40 channel shift (actually 45 if you count the RC "skips"), as well as +/- 1Khz USB and LSB offsets, and a clarifier incremental shift as well.

The whole thing appears to be designed as "plug and play" as possible.
There are only 2 trimmer caps on the board that can be aligned. VC2 centers your PLL's "lock range", and should not need adjustment. Usually you would set this by putting a high impedence voltmeter on TP4 and adjusting VC2 for a voltage somewhere in the middle of it's range (I'm guessing about 3 - 4 Volts, in the mid band position, judging from the PLL's 8V VCC).
VC1 appears to center your mixer frequency. Set your clarifier at the 12:00 position, and using a frequency counter connected to TP5, set the output frequency for 14.535 Mhz in the mid band position and AM mode.
Any frequency offset difference, at this point, between the frequency of 14.535 and your actual transmit frequency, would have to be resolved with adjustments inside the radio. If there are no adjustments for the radio's PLL reference crystal, you can use VC1 to "fudge" the difference. This may result in a bit of a "lopsided" clarifier range, but it may not be that big of a deal. SSB offsets are not adjustable, and are controlled digitally by the divide/N counter inside the PLL.
>From the truth chart, that I was able to gather from the PLL programming, you're at the limit for high channel range. However, you should be able to get an additional 37 channels down, by playing with the programming pins (Setting pins from 9 to 16 to logical 0), if that suited you.

I hope this helps. I've never played with this board, but it looks to be fairly well designed, and a few steps above the earlier "hack" mods that used to float by on occasion.

It's a Regency CR-186 model. It's been working for at least 25yrs. Mostly I use it for information as to why I'm sitting in a parking lot on IH35.....on which ever side I'm traveling(AustinTx part). I'm gonna use the 9v battery suggestion from Mr. Hall. Thanks to all for the good responses....well, except for.....lol

A good mic for the mobile would be a D104-M6 handheld power mic. I've used one for years with excellent performance.

Hey Dave, first off....you have a power mic, not MIKE.
Second, a power mic most often can improve a stations signal, when adjusted properly. Use the damn thing! Removing the amplified properties of the mic may make it useless/ineffective. Kinda like the pilot of a jet saying "The engine is too loud...can you make it more quiet..maybe turn it way down"...next sound...crash.
Third, you have plenty of experience posting so dont play nieve...ie: rec.alt.homerepair and alt.rec.birds
I did notice that noone addressed your Rubber Mat question......
AH????? Sounds like an opinion.....sounds like an AH....everyone has one!
What really blew my mind is that noone suggested BUYING A CHEAP ASS 7.5VDC BATTERY! They only cost $7!
You are going to spend at least 4 times that much on any of their ideas...Stock mic....speech processor mic.....buy the damn battery and use it...problem solved!

A dead key would be useless. Switching to sideband allows one to hear under a carrier. A 555 would work as a square wave noise source.
A 556 could become a sweep generator. 555's can work from 5 to 15 volts.

Hell just buy an old cheap 40 channel radio and broad band it, then it will transmit the whole spectrum, if your real creative set it up to only key when the squelch is tripped by a recieved signal, it can transmit for 10 seconds then go back to scan looking for a signal to break the squelch setting. works real nice.

Or better yet, drug all the illegals they catch along the mexican border. Drug them, ship them up to our northern border, when they wake up they will run across into Canada. Should double Canada's

So you insist on replying to those things of a nature that you can not handle. It is "you're", not "your",,and JJ has pointed this out to you more times than it should take even one with a deficit to comprehend.
(chuckle) You're not bright enough to stay out of trouble...you can be

I can think of no better example of a lid than from what you set forth on a controlled, regulated basis. One who so closed-minded as to attack what they can't handle.

Your communication deficit obscures your interpretation of my position.
At this point in time, I continue to point out your lidness and others of your ilk, because of you and those of your ilk, who want only to censor what they can not handle, and ostracize others for daring expressing their views on freeband radio and amps, demonstrating an even greater lack of self-control than originally thought. This ng is for all and at times there are bound to be things that others disagree with. the difference is, the MAJORITY of folks do not suffer from your communication deficit shared by your akc hypocrite lids.

You want censorship, go hold Gilliland's hand and attempt to soothe your dilemma he shares. Twice he stated he was leaving, once to start his own moderated cb group, and most recently.
Learn to keep your emotive responses in check and accept that of which you can not change, but don't be immature and attempt to tell others what they can or can not, should or should not read. If it bugs you that much, maybe you should remove yourself and find a hobby that allow you to develop the skills necessary to function socially without attacking or projecting your problems and inadequacies onto others.

Dave,

Thanks for this super description. I will give it a try when the board arrives.
There was a version A board, but had 6 coils to adjust, and was more involved by adding an external SPDT switch. Also, those coils hate drastic temperature changes, and drift like crazy. That is why I wanted the B board. I figured the B wa released becaused of the problems with version A. I would hope this B board is stable. I really don't plan on doing much with these frequencies other than listening for international calls. I mostly hang out on 38 LSB for DX and 19 AM for road info. Is there SSB channels that are in use other than the 35-40? I am not aware of any.

One other question. You mention I was at my upper limit. Do you mean up and above the "upper 40" or the "standard 40". You also said an additional 37 channels down. This is in addition to the "lower 40"? I would not be interested in modifying it for these 37 anyway. Hell, I was not even interested in all the +/- 40 except for a few specific channels.

Many of those old 100 mW W/T's had "morse code" buttons, which transmitted a 1Khz or so tone. That should make even a narrow SSB receiver. If not, you could FM the crystal by feeding it a signal from a 556. It's more work though....

I went back and looked at the "A" board, and wow!, I can see why you'd be a little hesitant. Yes, the "A" board has temperature stability issues, because it tries to resolve the various offsets by shifting the crystal frequency with inductors and capacitors. If the temperature coefficient of the coils and caps don't cancel each other out, you will have drift issues.
They have made a big improvement with the "B" board, as it uses a PLL to synthesize all of the offsets. The only elements that are sensitive to temperature drift are the 2 crystals. Any drift from the PLL reference crystal will effect each offset equally, and you will not be "all over the place" depending on which mode or frequency shift, you choose.

As far as the legal 40, on the one hand, any channel is fair game for SSB use. On the other hand, there has been a "gentleman's agreement" calling for the upper 5 or so channels to be "set aside" for SSB. So that is your best bet. On channels above 40, most of them are SSB.

> One other question. You mention I was at my upper limit. Do you mean up and

The upper 40 range. The PLL maxes out its truth table in the "HI" position, so there isn't any more "up" capability.

Yes.

Many people are satisfied with things as they are. Others like to squeeze every ounce of capability out of their stuff. I was just providing the info. What you do with it is up to you.

Perhaps you need someone to explain it to you. asswipe LOL

You can always send email to blackhole9 at five-ten-sg.com even if your mail server is listed here. Note that this is NOT a list of open relays. To determine exactly WHY your mail server is listed here, enter the IP address in the form and click on the Search button.

You sent email to the above address, and it seemed to be ignored? Well, you are probably listed here as a dialup-equivalent address, and you asked to be removed, but you clearly did not read the directions in section two, especially the red highlighted ones. It is truly amazing how many folks don't read that text.

IP address 68.55.6.97 is listed here as comcast.net dialup equivalent.
Please read section 2 below regarding dialup equivalent addresses.

6180. Why Twistedhed must go

Newsgroup: rec.radio.cb
Date: 2003-03-13 23:01:44 UTC
From: #8 <#8@smell.com>
Message-ID: <hPKcnXrB7IB1kOyjXTWcqw@comcast.com>
Source record: 154366

Why Twistedhed must go

BBC News Online has asked a range of contributors to comment on the rec.radio.cb crisis. Here, James Phillips from the conservative US think tank, the Heritage Foundation, argues the case for the dismantling of Twistedhed's regime.

Ultimately, the only way to be certain of removing weapons of mass delusion from Twistedhed is to remove Twistedhed from rec.radio.cb.

Given Twistedhed's long history of newsgroup terrorism, the US and AKC cannot allow such a dangerous regime to attain more illegal equipment. Twist has never lived up to his obligations to obey FCC rules and maintain a legal station. And Washington must not allow him to continue to make a charade of FCC Part 95.

If the FCC is not capable of undertaking collective security action, then the US would be fully within its rights to defend its own national interests by taking unilateral action, if necessary

One of the problems with the inspection process is that it cannot work unless Twist co-operates. Inspectors are not going to be able to find weapons in a farm with several hounds loose. That's harder than finding a needle in a haystack - it's more like finding a needle in hundreds of haystacks.
If the inspection process is going to work it needs a very aggressive leader who does not blink at challenging Twistedhed and forcing him to do what he says he was going to do.

The 12,000 or so recent posts submitted by Twistedhed were a recycling of his previous prevarications.

If the UN is not capable of undertaking collective security action, then the US and AKC would be fully within its rights to defend its own interests by taking unilateral action, if necessary. Countries can no longer complain about "unilateralism" given that the Busch administration has bent over backwards to accomodate Twistedhed.

Rec.radio.cbers will reap the benefits of liberation, just as the Afghan people benefited from the fall of the Taliban

In the event that Twistedhed is removed, the NG will be the biggest winners. They suffered under his postings after he invaded rec.radio.cb in 2000 and fought a very bloody war with N8. He also invaded rec.radio.amateur newsgroups a year later and fought another one with Leland. The newsgroups have been extremely oppressed over the past years and, ultimately, they will reap the benefits of liberation, just as the Afghan people benefited from the fall of the Taliban. The AKC should try to replace Twistedhed with a broad-based representative that will pose no threats to legal CB interests.

Nothing like a little reinforcement to remind folks of your participation and guilt with lids.
Is it a suprprise folks such as yourself need to feel larger than yourself. Removing your nose from my azz and placing it in Lelnad;s is amusing. KC8LDO has many times equated my successes with his own failures, from my article in a hobby rag (that HE madly searched the web for and brought here to share with you all) to my weekend charters...he has expressed problems with both....not unlike yourself. You, like he, have come to view my personal life as a part of your own life, almost an extension,,, a pipe dream neither you nor your named lids were ever able to manage or quite attain..,,perhaps the self-employment and doing what I love when I want and getting paid upsets you greatly....,isn't that part of the reason the savages in the mid-east hate western culture??????.....Because they are inanely jealous of our ways and know no better themselves? They exterminate that of which they do not comprehend due their lack of education, much like yourself.........Watching you and your lid froth, it's as if something very personal and dear to you is on the line. Nevertheless,,its a shame one can live to be of such an age and acquire so little self-control as you have illustrated. Thanks for the warm fuzzy this evening :).

Love it or hate it, I am indeed a very important part of what defines you in this ng.
I have also noticed when speaking of hammies in a positive light, you demonstrate a propensity to speak of such as "we". When posting collectively about negative behavior concerning hammies, you avoid the term "we", specifically and methodically utilizing the terms "they", "them" or "those". This is referred to as BIRGing, "Basking In Reflected Glory".

According to researchers at Stanford University in Palo Alto, those who have a strong psychological connection (or fancy themselves as possessing such traits) experience the highest of the highs and the lowest of the lows...they often can, and do, live vicariously through the efforts of another. By doing so, they attain a sense of belonging, a sense of acceptance,,a sense of comraderie that they once held in the amateur community but pissed away with behavior conducive to permanently staining hammie radio. This was illustrated most recently by self-inclusion of such a lid with the names of those he wishes to be associated and on par with but to which he can not muster, sort of like you with your fantastic inability to pass on that of which you can not handle.

Your self-esteem is non-existent evidenced by your self-realization of having neither the social skills nor intellect to employ the liberties afforded you. Teaching you how to exercise such liberties can be achieved only when you realize the first amendment was put in place for all. What legendary status you have created for yourself to assume others present share your inabilties, social inadequacies, communication deficits, lack of control, and beliefs of expurgation. Magnificent!!!

No, I have a power mike(look it up in the dictionary). I used Dave Halls suggestion and it works just fine...thanks Dave. Yes I use to post to 'repair' but no more and I do occasionally post in the birds group. So? What's your problem with that? Since you are a fan, you know that I've always tried my best to give helpful/intelligent answers to folks questions....not smartassed ones like you responded with to my question. I quit repair because of the jerks. The DIYers know more about electricity than my 40yrs in the trade, so I gave up trying to help them. Look, I came to this group with what may seem like foolish questions to someone like you, but the guys who responded were very helpful and I appreciate them. I'm not at all interested in having some stupid war-of-words with you. I'm 60yrs and don't have the time for idiotic stuff like that anymore. Good luck in all you do. Hopefully you will accomplish whatever it is you are attempting to accomplish.

I'm out......

6209. A Nonviolent Plan To Oust Twistedhed

Newsgroup: rec.radio.cb
Date: 2003-03-14 03:47:05 UTC
From: #8 <#8@smell.com>
Message-ID: <LAOdndq4gOtUzeyjXTWcqw@comcast.com>
Source record: 154396

A Nonviolent Plan To Oust Twistedhed

Rather than a flame war or sanctions, there's a better way to get rid of Twistedhed: strategic nonviolent action. Take away the consent of the group and his regime will collapse. This may seem like wishful thinking but there are plenty of historical examples to show how it can actually happen.

In 1989, most Eastern European regimes were toppled with little or no loss of life. There were no foreign military attacks, no guerrilla struggles, no sabotage. Instead, there were rallies in the streets, initially small but before long massive, causing entrenched communist rulers to lose their nerve and resign without a fight.

The same methods can be applied against Twistedhed. There are opposition groups in rec.radio.amateur groups that can tap into widespread anti-Twistedhed sentiment. There are fence-sitting keyclowns who, if they abandon their loyalty or gum up the works, can bring the regime to its knees. There are freeband moderates and Part 15 experimenters that can be persuaded to switch allegiance.

Unfortunately, aggressive AKC policy actually helps Twistedhed maintain power. AKC sanctions against Twistedhed have led to hundreds of thousands of flame posts, causing resentment against the pro-legal factions and thus undermining opposition to Twistedhed. Similarly, argumentative posts and the threat of a flame war unify the outlaw population, especially the hard core keyclown forces, and weaken the prospects for internal resistance.

In 1999 there was a massive NATO air attack against Serbia but it did not dislodge dictator Slobodan Milosevic. He was only unseated the next year through popular protests. Nonviolence worked better to bring about 'regime change'.

So what could be done to undermine Twistedhed? Instead of igniting flames, ignite discussion. Instead of sanctions, open the borders between legal and illegal CB and promote trade that benefits both camps. Encourage Legal 40 operation, including visits by hams trained in nonconfrontational skills. Welcome keyclown defectors, offering them safe haven, perhaps even used equipment. Post information on a range of methods of resistance, including slogans, fraternization, religious processions, teach-ins, stay-at-home, frequency boycotts, strikes, boycotts of newsgroups, go-slows, sit-ins, alternative forums, alternative newsgroups and many others.

Nonviolent action can be used to oust Twistedhed. The people of rec.radio.cb just need the tools and encouragement to do it.

Well for the past three years, if it wasn't Twistedhed it was me, if not me, you, if not you, Phil, if not Phil, Randy, if not Randy it was Scott..... the list is endless. So that's why I say it's the newsgroup proper, a troll plain and simple.
I have kill filed both Twisthed & Dave Hall, that was getting as old as George.
Checked out the body shop and the progress of the Baja, about a week, maybe two and it's done. Then all I have to do is put the front end together, interior and Viola! ready for shows.

Dave,

I installed the board. Fairly routine install. I adjusted VC2 for midband, no problem. High band is right on with midband. Likewise for LSB, USB. Low band will not track. If I adjust VC2 to try and track low band, it becomes unstable and drifts everywhere. So, essentially I have a CB40 and a +40. Here is where it becomes weird. When I put low band in USB mode, it tracks. It will not track in AM or LSB.

Couple notes on this board:

1. The clarifier will shift evenly up and below the frequency when it reaches it's mechanical limits. I nice feature. So center the clarifier is not needed.

2. Seems that VC2 be adjusted a long way, and still track in mid and high. Almost like it's is self correcting. As soo as you go too far, it goes nuts, and you back it off.

3. VC1 seemed to be a fine adjust on the frequency. It fine tunes the frequency, but if you go too far, it starts back downwards. With the clarifier centered, I adjusted VC1 upwards just at the point it started before it started downward. I assume this was center.

Other than this low band problem, they really did a nice job with the adjustment portion of this board.

Who's "they"? You can get crystals for any frequency, if you want to special order them. Places like Radio Shack used to stock certain CB frequencies (Both 14 and 31 were included in this list). I haven't checked lately, but seeing as Radio Shack is slowly shifting its focus away from hobbyists and to cheesy consumer electronics, they may no longer stock them..

When you are in the low band position, try reajusting VC2 to reacquire phase lock. What you are describing sounds like what happens when a PLL unlocks, such as what happens when the VCO runs out of voltage range to resolve frequency errors. That's what VC2 is supposed to center. Be careful to not adjust it any further than necessary to regain "lock" or you'll risk making the high band "unlock".

It is "self correcting" in the sense that it does not directly adjust the output frequency. What it does is adjust the frequency of the VCO.
There is also a varactor diode, driven by the output of the phase comparitor, which also electrically adjusts the frequency. What the output frequency should be, is determined by the /N counter in the PLL.
Any shift in frequency is corrected by the voltage output of the phase comparitor. So when you try to shift the oscillator frequency, with VC2, the PLL compensates electronically, to offset your adjustment, to keep the oscillator on frequency. The phase comparitor output voltage of the PLL, has a finite range, so at some point, by continuing to turn VC2, you will go beyond the limits that the PLL can correct, and the loop
"unlocks", and the oscillator essentially becomes unstable and free running. That's what I think is happening in your "low range". A small tweak of VC2 should fix it.

> 3. VC1 seemed to be a fine adjust on the frequency. It fine tunes the frequency,

That's the nature of trimmer caps. They basically have a 180 degree adjust range. Beyond that and it just "mirrors" itself on the opposite side of the trim range.

> With the clarifier centered, I > adjusted VC1 upwards just at the point it started before it started downward. I Set VC1, with the clarifier centered, and on AM, for the proper output frequency (27.3150, for example). That's the simplist way.

Try not to let some of the people here get to you. Since many people like to hide behind fake names, there is no accountability for those choosing not to be polite. Many others have been stung in their past altercations, and are suspicious of newbies, almost to the point of

Well for the past three years, if it wasn't Twistedhed it was me, if not me, you, if not you, Phil, if not Phil, Randy, if not Randy it was Scott..... the list is endless. So that's why I say it's the newsgroup proper, a troll plain and simple. I have kill filed both Twisthed & Dave Hall, that was getting as old as George.

Checked out the body shop and the progress of the Baja, about a week, maybe two and it's done. Then all I have to do is put the front end together, interior and Viola! ready for shows.

Dickhead, get out of the house. It is a great sellers market. I would not call it a good buyers market because rates are low. Low rates are great except for several majors factors.

1. Far more buyers than sellers

2. Houses way overpriced

3. Multiple bids on houses driving up costs.

4. Houses are selling in days, sometimes 1 day, before you can even see one.

5. Sellers are getting list or more, in most cases.

Now, of you had any business savvy, you would now this. If you even owned a house, you would know this. But since you post here about 250 times in 11 days, you wouldn't know this. BTW, you won't find this inthe ARRL book.

Who's "they"? You can get crystals for any frequency, if you want to special order them. Places like Radio Shack used to stock certain CB frequencies (Both 14 and 31 were included in this list). I haven't checked lately, but seeing as Radio Shack is slowly shifting its focus away from hobbyists and to cheesy consumer electronics, they may no longer stock them..

Dave,
what you are suggesting sounds like a good idea on the surface, however (as you probably have guessed), I am a ham and subject to a lot more than part 95 rules when it comes to Cb operations (part 97 also applies). I cannot setup a device here to "jam" him as it would violate a fair number of items in the 1934 communications act.

However, one piece of good news: the local police did check on him last night due in large part to complaints from several neighbors.... lets just say that today, things are a bit quieter...

However, I do expect him to start up again at some point...

WRONG,
as a licensed amaeteur, the rules apply no matter where you go (ham, cb, etc). by having that ticket in your possession, you automatically agree to abide by the rules as set forth (its a contract under action in legal circles)

there are cases already on the books where hams have been cited for the following:
1. use of non-type accepted equipment on 11 meters
2. violations of BOTH part 95 and part 97 rules while in operation of such equipment.

The fact is, you eally don't know what you;re talking about, as is always the case. Now go back to assailing the rights and liberties afforded us, such as the first amendment, since you are unable to ignore and move on that of whhich you can not handle. Is not a violation of part 97 it is a part 95 violation, ham license or not it is illegal to use non type accepted equiment on 11 meters anyone using that typre radio will get fined if caught. holding a ham license doesn't change anything. when you talk on cb your a cber no matter what radio you use.

McCain: War on Twistedhed Is 'Just'

Arizona Sen. John McCain, in an op-ed piece in today's New York Times, plainly states the case for disarming Twistedhed: rec.radio.cb feels threatened, and we will act.

In his column "The Right War for the Right Reasons" McCain writes that rec.radio.cb is the only group Busch is sworn to protect. McCain writes: "Clearly, the lack of resolve does not free an him from his responsibility to protect the security of this newsgroup. Both houses of Congress grant him authority to use force to disarm Twistedhed. That is all the authority he requires."

And as for whether or not a war on the regime of Twistedhed is right and just, and regarding the issues of a "rush to war," McCain wonders why the newsgroup has only recently started its clock on Twistedhed, when the countdown to his demise should have started in 2001.

"After 2 years of AKC sanctions, two different FCC inspections, several pro-legal resolutions and, now, with the full power of the AKC at his doorstep, only an obdurate refusal to face unpleasant facts in this case, that a tyrant who survives only by the constant use of promoting illegal CB is not going to be coerced into good behavior by nonviolent means could allow one to believe that we have rushed to war." Indeed, many of the momentous, violent and destructive flame wars of the past few years may have been averted had the FCC enforced any of the dozen and a half rules regarding freebanding.

But there are still those who feel that a war with Twistedhed would spur further attacks and newsgroup violence from radical keyclowns. To that, Mr. McCain says: "Isn't it more likely that antipathy toward the legal operators in the illegal world might diminish amid the demonstrations of jubilant rec.radio.cb'ers celebrating the end of a regime that has few equals in its ruthlessness? Wouldn't people be encouraged to see the human rights of newsgroupies valiantly secured by AKC'ers?"

A veteran himself, McCain knows the value of such security and the sacrifices needed to maintain it. He writes, "Our forces will fight for peace in rec.radio.cb, a peace built on more secure foundations than are found today in the newsgroup. "May God bless them and may humanity honor their sacrifice."

The distance between CDP and myself was slightly over 7 air miles last night when I took my 19-1210 mobile business band radio tuned to 151.820 MHz, a 1/4 wave 2 meter magnet mount antenna, and a jump start pack to the roof of a 6 story building. Sat my antenna on the top of the metal door that leads to the roof. What a view! Contact was made almost full quieting. Then, just for grins and giggles, I asked if he had an FRS radio with him. He has the RS mobile FRS unit, the one with the separate antenna. Contact was then made on FRS channel 7 with my extra cheap $10 Cobra FRS-105 radio! The audio was just as good. The signal had a bit of static.

Next time, we'll try to get some more participants.

Congratulations! There was a nice tropo enhancement on 2 meters yesterday that provided very long range propagation.

The solution is obvious. Twisthed's activities should be legalized.
Then he will lose interest in them because they will no longer provide him with the thrill of illegality.

But, it's up to the antikeyclowns to win a pyrrhic victory if they

I use a Francis 4.5 foot Hot Rod and a Wilson 2000 Trucker. My power output is higher with the Wilson than the fiberglass antenna. Both have the same swr of 1.1 but gain a full watt dead key with the Wilson.

Please help, I take care of my disabled mother full-time and need a way to go to the store, walk/bike, yard work and still keep in contact (she can only be left alone about 10 mins. at most unless she can get ahold of me). Cell Phone is out due to costs and other reasons. Stores are within 1 mile. Best I can come up with is to buy a rechargeable 2-way FRS radio and the one that seems to get pretty good reviews is the Motorola Talkabout T5420-nicad2. It's about $70 a pair or possibly less if I shop around. Is anyone aware of a better pair of rechargeable FRS 2-way radios for around this price? I gotta get out of this house, I'm going nuts! The radio would give me enough freedom to do a few things locally and she can still call me and I can be home in 5 mins.

Thanks, Jeff

THE BUNNY AND THE SNAKE

Once upon a time (allegedly) in a nice little forest, there lived an orphaned bunny and an orphaned snake. By a surprising coincidence, both were blind from birth.

One day, the bunny was hopping through the forest, and the snake was slithering through the forest, when the bunny tripped over the snake and fell down. This, of course, knocked the snake about quite a bit.
"Oh, my," said the bunny, "I'm terribly sorry. I didn't mean to hurt you. I've been blind since birth, so, I can't see where I'm going. In fact, since I'm also an orphan, I don't even know what I am."

"It's quite OK," replied the snake." Actually, my story is much the same as yours. I, too, have been blind since birth, and also never knew my mother.

Tell you what, maybe I could slither all over you, and work out what you are, so at least you'll have that going for you."
"Oh, that would be wonderful" replied the bunny. So the snake slithered all over the bunny, and said, "Well, you're covered with soft fur; you have really long ears; your nose twitches; and you have a soft cottony tail. I'd say that you must be a bunny rabbit."

"Oh, thank you! Thank you," cried the bunny, in obvious excitement.
The bunny suggested to the snake, "Maybe I could feel you all over with my paw, and help you the same way that you've helped me."

So the bunny felt the snake all over, and remarked, "Well, you're smooth and slippery, and you have a forked tongue, no backbone and no balls. I'd say you must be French".

When the photo mutipliers at the the old theater died(they are used to pickup the soundtrack). I made replacements for them by grinding the top off a TO3 transisor and glues a microscpe slide over the hole. This can be used two different ways. The light will generate a voltage that can be taken off the base and emitter/collector or control collector /emitter current.

Even bad transistors can be used if one of the base junctions is still good..

Seeing a 1 watt change only means the antenna is loading to the transmiter differently than the other antenna. I t remains to be seen whether this is an improvement or not.

Dave:

Simple...

There are better ways of dealing with the problem, such as getting the FCC involved. If enough people scream enough times and in the right way, notice (and action) will be taken by those best equipped to handle the situation.

There is no need for a HAM to jeopardize his ticket to deal with an errant operator of an unlicensed piece of gear.

frequency the interference occurs on. In other words, if you have an Amateur

Fuck You SSB your the ignorant asshole part 97 Deals with the amatuer frequencies not a ham who talks on a cb and jams another CB. because CB doesn't fall under part 97 it is part 95.

A Ham can only break part 97 rules when he operates on amateur frequencies.
END of Story

TITLE 47--TELECOMMUNICATION

COMMISSION (CONTINUED)

PART 97--AMATEUR RADIO SERVICE--Table of Contents

Subpart B--Station Operation Standards

Sec. 97.101 General standards.

(a) In all respects not specifically covered by FCC Rules each amateur station must be operated in accordance with good engineering and good amateur practice.
(b) Each station licensee and each control operator must cooperate in selecting transmitting channels and in making the most effective use of the amateur service frequencies. No frequency will be assigned for the exclusive use of any station.
(c) At all times and on all frequencies, each control operator must give priority to stations providing emergency communications, except to stations transmitting communications for training drills and tests in RACES.
(d) No amateur operator shall willfully or maliciously interfere with or cause interference to any radio communication or signal.

Did you bother to read 97.101(d)?

Apparently not.

Here it is....

(d) No amateur operator shall willfully or maliciously interfere with or cause interference to any radio communication or signal.

Now, show me where it restricts the interference to the amateur bands in that statement.. BTW, that's a direct cut-and-paste from http://www.arrl.org/FandES/field/regulations/news/part97/b.html so you might want to check it...

it says ANY radio communication or signal. It doesn't say where, what frequency, etc...

Looks like YOU are the one reading things into it...

Part 97 deals with the Amateur Band, that is the only thing part 97 pertains to. Just because you want to read into something is not there you are wrong and cannot cite a case or show any proof other than what you think it should be. you drivers license says you cannot speed, so if you go to a race track must you abide by the 55mph rule? Of course not traffic laws don't pertain to race tracks. might noit be best analogy but fact is your 100% incorrect.

BUT a station operating his legal gear on a Amateur band need worry about interfering with an unlicensed station. He may operate within the bands and with the equipment authorized.
Period. An unauthorized station can NOT be interfered with, nor considered to be causing interference to said station. If a CB station is operating on 28.085, for example, and a ham decides to call CQ right on top of said CBer, he may do so because he is NOT causing interference; the unauthorized station is the interfer-er. Even if I KNOW that my transmission
"may" interfere with unauthorized stations, I can deliberately choose that frequency and proceed to operate on it. If it messes up the interfering station who is not supposed to be there to begin with, TOUGH! As long I am operating my station according to standard Amateur practice, on frequency and not interfering with OTHER L I C E N S E D stations, all the bandit can do is just spit and sputter 'til the cows come home. If there are other Amateurs occupying the frequency, then it would be good Amateur practice to QSY and find another frequency. But, yield to an bandit station, NO!

Youi are trying to read too much into this rule which actually implies that each station is being operated within the rules of its respectful service. Anytime a station is being operated outside the said rules, it is already assumed that the station who is NOT operating within a service is ALREADY breaking the law and will be dealt with. If a ham is operating on CB with illegal equipment, he would be cited; quite a few have been. If a CB station is on 24 MHZ with one of those "export" radios, then he would get popped for that.

If you read this rule, it appears that you are implying that unlicensed stations must yield to tranmissions by licensed persons simple because they have chosen to operate illegally; that is NOT what this rule is for. Amateur stations are, by following all the rules of their service, are already assumed not to be willing to operate out-of-band. Regulations are written for specific services. Thus, an Amateur station must operate on frequencies and use equipment authorized ONLY for that service. CB stations must operate on frequencies and with equipment authorized ONLY for that service--as may every other service for whom regulations have been written. There is a principle called "incumbency" whereby primary stations, properly licensed have exclusive domain. What the following rule is saying is that those stations have dominance, and someone who just decides to operate somewhere has NO right to do so.
So if you think that if I, for example, choose to operate on a certain frequency that is free at the moment to other hams, but has---say-----truckers on there, you are wrong. I would not be causing interference to other hams, and the illegal stations haven't a leg to stand on.
ALL of this, of course, implies that all stations in all services will operating legally. They are are NOT legal can expect to be cited or fined for it.

Yikes
If it's the 16th, then I can't make it. I've got my final big outdoor concert of the year that day...
Depending on how much last minute prep stuff I gotta do, I just might wander up Friday night, though

Steve he is flat out wrong. If a ham uses a Cobra 2000 on CB band, guess what he is a Cber Part 97 does not apply, part 95 applies it is a different service. He is trying to make it that once your a Ham you must follow part 97 even if you are using a different service ie: cb band, fireman, frs,gmrs all because you hold a ham license. LOL

I prefer "Slow Code Extra".. But at least I've GOT a license. I haven't seen you posting your call.. But Ok... Whatever.. You're probably just a no-code tech anyway.

He is only a Ham when he is on amateur frequencies get it thru that thick skull cap, part 97 only apply to use in the amateur service. 97.101(d) is part of the amateur service Just like your states driving laws have nothing well,

thats rather funny, don't you think. the FCC has already stated a number of times in a number of very PUBLIC cases, that anyone holding a license to operate is subject to those rules AT ALL TIMES and on any frequency that said person may operate on (this includes the use of type approved equipment for 11 meters).

THE FCC hhas stated this. this is no opinion on anyones part. it is a simple statement of fact. e-mail Mr. hollingsworth if you don't belive me. talk to any communications lawyer in the land (I'm sure there are more than a few haunting the newsgroups). they will all tell you the same thing.

possession and use of a properly issued license entitles you to specific privileges. However, it also restricts you. by possession, you agree to the terms and conditions of the license as stated. it is a formal instrument of contract. break it and you pay the consequences.

anything else?

Most of that is true, Jerry...

The topic of discussion is a HAM building a "part 15" device to interfere with someone running a CB and bleeding over onto his stereo/tv/phone/etc. A specific CB channel was even mentioned.

In this case, if the HAM does build and use a "part 15" device to "plug the ears" of the CBer, he's in violation of rules in part 15, part 95, AND part 97.

Yes, I believe that when you get your Amateur License, you are held to a higher standard, even when you're not on the Amateur bands. The rules spell that out quite plainly.

I'll comment further within:

This wasn't the topic of discussion in this case... What you've said here is correct.. You can't interfere with an unlicensed station in the HAM bands, because they are the ones causing the interference there.

I think you're misunderstanding this portion of this thread, which was NOT talking about bootlegging CBers in the HAM bands, but a HAM interfering with a CBer on the CB band using a part 15 device. If a HAM were to do this, 15.5, and 97.101(d) both still apply.

Again, I think you're misunderstanding the point. Granted, it's been skewed and spun around to try to "prove a point", but the point has been missed.

That doesn't apply when the "interference" is to intruders on the lower part of 10 meters. The FCC has clarified their meaning to imply that the interference is only considered "harmful", when the stations being interfered with are legitimate, authorized users. Extending this logic, one can also assume that running a part 15 device, which only interferes with a neighboring CBer, who is running excessive power, would not be considered "harmful" either, as that station has voided his authorization by deliberately ignoring part 95 rules.

C'mon, you're not that naive are you? The whole reason the freeband is loaded with people, and there are stations running 10's of killowatts right now, is because not one of them thinks, for an instant, that the FCC is giving 11 meters serious consideration. Unless the interference is great enough to interfere with a commercially licensed service, or if a whole block actively complains, there is little hope that the FCC will intervene on a timely basis.

> If enough people scream enough times and in the right

So the FCC might get around to it in 3 or 4 years. What are you supposed to do in the meantime?

> There is no need for a HAM to jeopardize his ticket to deal with an

There is no reason to think your ticket would be in jeopardy. You are not interfering with a legitimate, authorized user. And with a part 15 device? That rates right up there with jay-walking, as a citable offense.

Not true. Part 97 does not apply to non-ham services. Part 95 does not apply to part 15 transmitters. Part 15 allows low power experimentation, with the caveat that they cause no "harmful" interference. The key word here is "harmful". My contention has been that an illegally operating CB station, has no authorization to operate, and therefore has no legitimate claim to be free of interference.
Besides, in all practicality, what's he going to do, call the FCC? "Hello, FCC? Yes, I am a 1Kw CB station, and I'm getting interference, please help". Yea right.....

Start with an alignment. Where it no longer works right is the bad stage.

I stand corrected, SSB. And it pretty much explains the way I think in terms of legalities. IOW, the idea of 'jamming" didn't even cross my mind. It's just not what I would do. I came to radio, not from CB, but from a military exposure, and its indoctination; CB came later. So, I wouldn't even be thinking about making a jamming device. (I might pin a coax, tho <<giggle>).

BTW (this is for Mopar),

I am off to Rat Shack to get some resistors and caps to build some tuner modules for Icom and Kenwood rigs.This is a circuit that allows one to "fool" the rig into thinking there is ATU attached, and sends a 15 sec tone to position a screwdriver antenna, or to adjust a manual tuner. This is MUCH more fun than arguing about rules, or even talking on a radio! LOL!

Toodle-oo!

Hi Scott,

That sounds pretty good, enjoyed reading about your test. The problem out here in Metropolis are the highband repeaters at the same location that hose the murs receiver whenever it comes on. That being about every 10 seconds. Then the paging transmitter blows everything away...

Is it possible to buy a decent mike these days or have all the manufacturers thrown in the towel? Very worrying for the hobby when companies such as Astatic, Valor, Paradynamics subsidiaries of Astatic IIRC, give up on a lot of their mike products. What is the state of the hobby in the USA if this is happening?

CB in the UK has been struggling for a few years now, however, I've noticed a slight upturn recently...has it come too late for the manufacturers?

Anyone think classics such as the Silver Eagle will be re-introduced if the demand pops up for them again?

Perhaps the subject line should have read 'CB or what's left of it'

My gosh, it didn't take long for you to change this thread subject, Jerry. No one has stated anything to the contrary and once again you are setting forth a one-sided argument.
The fact remains, N3CVJ's intentional acts of deliberately interfering to anothers signal, is illegal and wasn't referring to a hammie keying over an illegal on a hammie frequency in the original post Attempting to change the subject concerning what he originally said is obfuscation in it's finest exampe. You claimed that hammie or not, if they are breaking the law, they deserve to get busted. Is it a coincidence you choose only to illustrate a cber when you construe their speaking of an act as breaking the law? It did not go unnoticed that you failed to alert a fellow hammie that his intentions are illegal, counteractive to the hammie creed, hammie radio, and only conducive of lid behavior,,,but then again, perhaps it was selective on your behalf,,you seem pre-occupied with cb behavior but turn the other cheek when a hammie has gone bad, despite your claim otherwise. Others have noticed......

That doesn't apply when the "interference" is to intruders on the lower part of 10 meters. The FCC has clarified their meaning to imply that the interference is only considered "harmful", when the stations being interfered with are legitimate, authorized users. Extending this logic, one can also assume that running a part 15 device, which only interferes with a neighboring CBer, who is running excessive power, would not be considered "harmful" either, as that station has voided his authorization by deliberately ignoring part 95 rules.

This lack of self-control you have been demonstrating is mildly amusing. What began as a source of amusement has rapidly escalated to a case of concern for you, by only you. Go figure.

Unsophisticated and limited in depth and perspective as you are, coupled with the inability to see yourself as the rest do, may shed insight into your sociopolitical-imitable attitude. You are indeed a classic lid, but more telling, is the definition that applies to your behavior you have failed to mask in your misdirected anger........"redneck."

The redneck belongs to a larger pool of genes in this day and age. Rednecks now span all races. They are everywhere. They exist in the New England States, Pa., out west, up in Pa and Delaware, Pa,. Jersey, Pa., Washington D.C., Pa., the tarheel, Pa., and everywhere in between, including Pa..

Some, like you, N3CVJ, N8, and Lelnad have abused the system. You have abused the system in place to an extent and manipulated the government into coddling you, conning your way into being supported each month at the expense of tax payers because you claim you are disabled. You remain a true redneck exhibiting the redundant traits that cause you to be such a failure in all facets and aspects of your life..

You appear to be not only uncontrolled, but frustrated crossed with fits of anger, disbelief, and uncontrollable fear. Lids like you are easy to spot. You all share the same traits..most notably the communication deficit that causes your errant selves to lash out at those you admire and most aspire to be like. Bigotry and the inability to control your hatred and anger are also usually present with the lid.

You are so confused over where this anger originates that the phenomena of such causes your type to be easily bothered, full of hate, and not able to control what goes on around you leaves you with a feeling of helplessness,,,IMPOTENCE..resulting in more anger.
The fear stemming from 911 has left folks like you and N3CVJ with uncontrolled emotions of uncertaintly and stupidity arrived through ignorance.
Your agenda is misguided to such a state, that you seek through blind rage to remove one of THE most cherished liberies afforded us..the right to dissent and speak out. That you seek acceptance and support for this position illustrates you not only are aware of the popularity of such extremism, but of the danger as well.

As Lelnad clearly stated is preference for violence, some of you would murder others for not sharing your myopic views and distorted realities, if you thought you may get away with it. Your repeated failures at accomplishing the same goal: silencing what you can not handle, is telling. Just as you are confused about why you are angry, you would more than likely not know who to kill in order to satisfy your lustful misguided and misdirected anger. Staying with your tradition, you can always kill those who are invisible to your impotent selves..,,LOL,,,.attacking and expressing your desire for violence against those that you identify only by what is directed and allowed you.

Anger from lids and rednecks like yourself demand one be attacked and as shark illustrated, it matters not who it is. The attention received assists somewhat in making up your inadequacies self-destructed reputation, and incredibly low self-esteem.

Radio Shaft (Shack) used to sell a neat little misc pack of photo transistors. They haven't carried them for some years now. We used them by the bag full to repair video type game controls. Jameco possibly sells them (still).

The resistive photo cell type are slow (speed wise) in comparison. Radio Shaft still carries them...

There's no spin. It's a direct comparison. Since the FCC does not consider illegally operating stations on 10 meters to be "legitimate", they do not consider interference to them to be "harmful". In the same vein, since an illegally operating CB station is deliberately violating part 95, they also cease to become legitimate users of the service, and any interference to them would not be considered "harmful".

Consider ordering from one of the more established US based CB dealers such as:

There are plenty of others though I know this dealer has been around for some years.

And advice, from N3CVJ:
my best advice to you, would be to build either a sweep generator, or a white noise generator, and unleash it on his receive. If you're that close to him, you should be able to effectively plug his ears, with signals of over +10db over S9, with less than 100 mW (Which keeps it within part 15 regs).

Well you all have been very helpful. It has been an interesting excercise and it appears what I want to do isn't going to work. well atleast very easily.

If I had different bands it would be a lot easier.

However I recently bought an old marine radio on ebay that needed repair beore it would work and I had my tech mate look at it. I didn't realise till then how the PLL chip had binary pins to select channels etc. So he agreed at my suggestion I could make up a microprocessor to select the channels and efectively make a scanner. I am going to try this method. Have an external circuit scan the channel banks for me.

I will post a note when I get it to work.

Regards, Peter.

This lack of self-control you have been demonstrating is mildly amusing.
What began as a source of amusement has rapidly escalated to a case of concern for you, by only you. Go figure.

Unsophisticated and limited in depth and perspective as you are, coupled with the inability to see yourself as the rest do, may shed insight into your sociopolitical-imitable attitude. You are indeed a classic lid, but more telling, is the definition that applies to your behavior you have failed to mask in your misdirected anger........"redneck."

The redneck belongs to a larger pool of genes in this day and age.
Rednecks now span all races. They are everywhere. They exist in the New England States, Pa., out west, up in Pa and Delaware, Pa,. Jersey, Pa., Washington D.C., Pa., the tarheel, Pa., and everywhere in between, including Pa..

Some, like you, N3CVJ, N8, and Lelnad have abused the system. You have abused the system in place to an extent and manipulated the government into coddling you, conning your way into being supported each month at the expense of tax payers because you claim you are disabled. You remain a true redneck exhibiting the redundant traits that cause you to be such a failure in all facets and aspects of your life..

You appear to be not only uncontrolled, but frustrated crossed with fits of anger, disbelief, and uncontrollable fear. Lids like you are easy to spot. You all share the same traits..most notably the communication deficit that causes your errant selves to lash out at those you admire and most aspire to be like. Bigotry and the inability to control your hatred and anger are also usually present with the lid.

You are so confused over where this anger originates that the phenomena of such causes your type to be easily bothered, full of hate, and not able to control what goes on around you leaves you with a feeling of helplessness,,,IMPOTENCE..resulting in more anger.
The fear stemming from 911 has left folks like you and N3CVJ with uncontrolled emotions of uncertaintly and stupidity arrived through ignorance.
Your agenda is misguided to such a state, that you seek through blind rage to remove one of THE most cherished liberies afforded us..the right to dissent and speak out. That you seek acceptance and support for this position illustrates you not only are aware of the popularity of such extremism, but of the danger as well.

As Lelnad clearly stated is preference for violence, some of you would murder others for not sharing your myopic views and distorted realities, if you thought you may get away with it. Your repeated failures at accomplishing the same goal: silencing what you can not handle, is telling. Just as you are confused about why you are angry, you would more than likely not know who to kill in order to satisfy your lustful misguided and misdirected anger. Staying with your tradition, you can always kill those who are invisible to your impotent selves..,,LOL,,,.attacking and expressing your desire for violence against those that you identify only by what is directed and allowed you.

Anger from lids and rednecks like yourself demand one be attacked and as shark illustrated, it matters not who it is. The attention received assists somewhat in making up your inadequacies self-destructed reputation, and incredibly low self-esteem.

I have a this radio:

40 channels.

Only $35.00 US$ plus shipping from Canada.

For $45.00 US$, will throw in a TRC 212 for repair or parts (does work at times).

All the noise was gone, Its so quiet that I have to look at the meter

How does violating part 15 rules also violate cb and part 97? it has nothing to do with part 97 why can't you see that concept it is quite easy, when your a ham and use amatuer freqs you are governed by part 97 any other band you use your governed by those rules, part 97 doesn't carry over your getting real queer over this and it is a simple concept to understand.

Why are people so eager to change the name of the French Fry when it refers to the way the potato is cut, not to a country of origin. And while so many people seem to be so intent on bashing the French, I'm surprised they haven't thought about where a certain statue came from. Why aren't these over-patriotic fucks demanding the Statue of Liberty be taken down because of it's tie to France? They probably didn't make it through enough history classes to know where it came from, while something that happens to have no ties to France except for a word in the name is changed because the people of that country don't support our idiotic war.

The problem is the US thinks the world revolves around it, not that France thinks so.

(Speaking of history, does this seem like the whole "Liberty Cabbage" type name switchery sort of thing that went on during WW1?)

But a comparison to them has been made to illustrate the where the FCC's thinking is, when it comes to what they consider legitimate stations, and how they feel about interference to stations that they don't consider legitimate. Can't you understand a simple comparison?

> We are talking about a HAM building a "part 15" device to interfere

An ILLEGALLY operating CBer, who, by virtue of his illegal power, forfeits any protection that he would have under part 95 or 15.

If you take the FCC's apparent position on interference, as illustrated by how they've defined harmful interference on 10 meter intruders, one can make the assumptiuon that they don't consider interference, to an illegally operating CB station to be "harmful". So if the interference from a part 15 device, is not considered "harmful", it is NOT illegal.

You have still failed to back this up. Part 95 does not apply to CB transmitters covered by part 15. That's why part 15 "walkie talkies" did not have to identify, nor required a license, were not limited to the "5 minute on, 5 minute off" transmission rule, could use any channel, and language and obscenity rules generally did not apply.

Part 97 is only concerned with ham radio. If you are at the controls of a CB, you are a CBer, not a ham. If you are operating a part 15 device, you are merely the operator of that device.

Part 15 allows for low power experimentation. There is nothing to stop some kid down the block, from locking the transmit button down, and playing music all night long. That's why they are low power. The stipulation that part 15 devices not cause interference, is clarified as "harmful" interference. I do not think the FCC would consider the interference to an unauthorized, illegally operating station, to be "harmful", and that's the key.

Besides, even if you are right, and assuming the illegal CB station is stupid or brazen enough to report you to the FCC (Assuming he's even smart enough to figure out what's happeneing), and assuming the FCC would think that a part 15 device's interference ranked higher on their priority list, than that of the illegal CBer's interference to other homes, the worst that would happen, is that you'd receive a warning. That's been the justification from all the illegal freeband proponents. That first "bust" will just be a warning.
I'd say it's an acceptable risk to take, to minimize the interference coming from the illegal, high powered CB station.

the world does revolve around the united states.......where else in the world does a taste of real freedom take place..???? there is no place in the world like this. the american tax payer and worker feeds the world with food stuffs grown on american farms. the american tax payer contributes mightedly to the world bank. the american tax payer has to support foreign aid, etc., etc. ......without us, no one would help a lot of these places. we are the center of the world. yet the world does not like us, because they are jealous of our power. well.

so youre a certified field agent for the fcc. you work for the fcc.
you are also part of the federel court system? you are now being considered a vigilante if you start useing your noise toy and dont contact the fcc before you do that.you also will probally be charged with some form of violation considering you are trying to promote intentional interferance.

Actually, the GMRS Band is considered the original Class A CB Band, some of us had horible Vocaline Regenerative Radios to try and use it in the 60's.

Then Xc would be greater then the speaker coil's X and it wouldn't be good. It's better to place filters in the preamp circuit then PA.

The first is the good Twisthed, who believes in freedom of speech on the air and would never hurt a fly. He knows there is no harm in saying FUCK on CB with 1KW. May he always buy cheap and sell dear.

The second is the evil impostor, who keeps stealing Twisthed's ID... this one is a good ol' boah who thinks freedom of speech is the Devil, and hates everybody including himself. Saddam Hussein is his idea of a great guy.

Incorrect. A valiant and noble effort has been mady by your fellow clean up the dog pile mess you made in giving advice to another that was for an illegal act.

That was the only reason 'ol Oxendine brought up cb.

And in a post farther up, I stated that I "stand corrected" because I missed the subject of the original post. I also stated that I would not be thinking about how to jam someone because I was not taught that way. Several people posted in such a way that made me think that the rule was being interpreted as tho it would be OK to cause interference by unlicensed stations-- such as that caused by 10 Meter stations. The real truth is that it is not OK to create interfer-others, I corrected

my position and stood down from the thread.

Still doesn't matter as long as it is not used on Ham frequencies it doesn't matter if he is a Ham or Not, he is just another person using a part 15 device. Get that out of your head.

LOL! Sure it does..pull your head out of my azz and get an upperclassmen to educate you. A hammie may not deliberately interfere with a legal service,,,

Pull my fist out of your face assclown, A person operating or who operates a part 15 device is governed only by part 15 rules, a person who holds a ham license is governed only the devic he is operatings rules. A ham who operates a CB is a cber and is only governed by Part 95 of the FCC rules , he is not a Ham when he uses his CB radio he is a CBer as claimed by SSB and now it seems like you are also claiming the same. I doesn't matter what license they hold Fireman, Ham, police, radiotelephone, ship to shore what ever band they operate on is the rules they must follow
I never said a hammie could but when he uses another device which is governed by other rules they are the rules he must follow, he doesn't follow amateur radio rules using a part 15 device. Your to stupid to see that and would prefer to argue for the sake of being an asshole.

Jerry, SSB is making the false claim that a person who uses a CB and also holds a ham license is governed by part 95 and part 97 while he uses his cb.

TWISTEDHED SAYS HE WILL STAY AND FIGHT

USENET (March 18) - Twistedhed rejected an ultimatum to quit and vowed on Tuesday to fight an AKC-led invasion that could start in just over a day.

Busch gave the Keyclown leader 48 hours -- until early Thursday -- to flee or he would unleash AKC forces massed rec.radio.cb.

"The wives and mothers of those AKC who will fight us will weep blood, not tears," Twistedhed's acolyte, Nebo said. The AKC disagrees and is banking on the swift victory it will need to mend fences with critical allies.

"The tyrant will soon be gone," Busch said in his brisk, 13-minute address from the White House on Monday night. He urged Twistedhed sycophants to surrender rather than be eliminated by high-tech firepower. AKC officials said they were bombarding keyclowns with leaflets and emails with the same message. "The FCC has not lived up to its responsibilities, so we will rise to ours," he said.

"Twistedhed and his acolytes must leave rec.radio.cb within 48 hours. Their failure to do so will result in ISP action, commenced at a time of our choosing."

Neither was I. But when you have people who obviously think little of the rules, who hide and draw their strength from the FCC's seeming anemic enforcement abilities, giving them some of their own medicine back, is one sure way to solve the issue. A part 15 jammer, is certainly safer than tresspassing on their property, to pin a coax, or tear down an antenna. I certainly find it ironic, that those who defend their "right" to selectively break the law, are now the ones arguing so vehemently in favor of it, when the shoe is on the other foot.

The key word here being "legitimate". Would you consider a station running several hundred watts, who is himself, causing interference, and is in violation of part 95, to be "legitimate"?
Like the comparison to the FCC's take on the 10 meter intruders, if a station is somewhere they aren't supposed to be, and are otherwise not following the rules of their service, they lose their protection from interference, that adherence to the pertinent rules of the service normally provide, including that from a part 15 device.

In comparison to the illegally operating CB station who is ALREADY interfering with neighbor's radios and TV's? If you were truly an advocate for strict adherence to the rules, we wouldn't be having this discussion, because there wouldn't be a need to build a part 15 jammer in the first place.

If the jammer results in the illegal CBer not causing as much of his own interference (if he can't hear, who's he going to talk to?), then the aggregate level of interference, to all parties involved, will have decreased. I'd say that's an improvement.

I am enjoying this little philosophical quagmire. Seems that there is no shortage of people, selectively breaking the CB rules, when it suits them, People who regularly thumb their noses at neighbors, when they complain about TVI from their illegally modified, and amplified radios.
Yet, when a practical "fight back" solution is offered, the same people, come out of the woodwork to say how illegal it is. They're ready to send someone to the big house, for running a part 15 device. But nothing is said about the illegality of "Big Bubba" and his "leen-yer". If that doesn't smack of hypocricy, I don't know what does.

If you truly believe in the rule of law, then you agree that there should be no freebanding, or amplifiers on CB, and that those who do run them, are criminal in nature, and should be prosecuted.

If, on the other hand, you believe that the rules are bogus, and you also believe that you have to "right" to do what you want on CB, then you have no right to complain if someone else execises their "right" to do something about it.

A HAM with a clipped radio? Isn't that illegal?

Removal of TR24 causes a wide signal and warble on SSB.

This is especially so with the new 148's. The regulator is a type that supplies less current then the 8 volt type. .01uF caps on the input and output are almost mandatory. Find the mod that removes the final from the regulator and attaches to + 12V.

Put TR24 back and remove R181 instead. That will disable the limiter on AM and keep it for sideband.

You need to find your way to www.cbtricks.com for the right "mod package".

IN REC.RADIO.CB, PEOPLE PREPARE FOR CONFLICT

By R.F. Watts (AKC NEWS SERVICE)

REC.RADIO.CB, March 18. The people of rec.radio.cb hastened today to prepare for war. The residents of the newsgroup had little official information about the events that made war appear imminent, notably Busch's announcement that he was calling a halt to months of diplomacy over Twistedhed's regime.

All that rec.radio.cb'ers learned from came in the form of defiant statements from Twistedhed and his ministers, who vowed in vitriolic language that the AKC would be defeated. Keyclowns such as Twistedhed have had decades of practice in evading government controls, relying on bravado and doubletalk to defy severe government penalties. From the moment that newsgroup woke up today, it was buzzing with talk about what AKC plans might portend.

As best an outsider could judge, the mood was one of deep apprehension of the immediate consequences for ordinary rec.radio.cb'ers. But coupled with that, though barely whispered, there was a suppressed but fevered anticipation of the changes for the better that could come if the AKC could accomplish Mr. Busch's aim of toppling Twistedhed.

Last week, Twistedhed set the tone by vowing that the AKC "should realize that the battle between us will be waged wherever there are hammies" suggesting that keyclowns could somehow strike far outside rec.radio.cb, perhaps even in the amateur newsgroups. That was coupled with remarks in which he again denied that he had any banned gear, and rants in which mocked Leland, Dave Hall, and other pro-legal advocates.

Today, Twistedhed followed up with a welter of attacks on Witchdoc and others. He described the AKC as individuals having a "comprehension deficit" and "deep seated needs" who had failed to produce any proof that he promoted illegal CB operation. In an interview on outlaw frequency 27.555, he said, "I promise Busch and Prime Minister Leland that Twistedhed will still be here long after they leave."

Scott is right. Here is more info on TR24:

http://www.radiomods.co.nz/cobra148gtlmods.html

If differs, from Scott, but at least it doesn't require clipping. I have heard about 50/50 from people who don't like to clip the mod limiter, and from people who do clip. But almost all have said the same thing, clipping it kills your SSB.

IN REC.RADIO.CB, PEOPLE PREPARE FOR CONFLICT
By R.F. Watts (AKC NEWS SERVICE)
REC.RADIO.CB, March 18. The people of rec.radio.cb hastened today to prepare for war. The residents of the newsgroup had little official information about the events that made war appear imminent, notably Busch's announcement that he was calling a halt to months of diplomacy over Twistedhed's regime.
Diplomacy? From you? Never had it, never will, wouldn't be prudent...

>All that rec.radio.cb'ers learned from came in >the form of defiant statements from >Twistedhed and his ministers, who vowed in >vitriolic language that the AKC would be >defeated.

Ummm.......I like the AKC,,,,,,and you can't defeat something that has self-destructed, such as your reputation :).

>Keyclowns such as Twistedhed have had >decades of practice in evading government >controls,

It's called "selective disobedience". Never did like to be unde3r "control". That makes me dangerous to totalitarian tyrants not unlike like yourself.

>relying on bravado and doubletalk to defy >severe government penalties.

Don't forget denial,,you deny and lie. But you are correct, I do rely on your doubletalk..Dave's too.

>From the moment that newsgroup woke up >today, it was buzzing with talk about what >AKC plans might portend.

Ask Lelnad for the URL to "Cats" magazine.
Why not "earn" as you "yearn" to be like me?

>As best an outsider could judge, the mood >was one of deep apprehension of the >immediate consequences for ordinary >rec.radio.cb'ers.

Deep apprehension? Mmmmph! Turn your radio on,,we're having a blast.

>But coupled

"Coupled"? Oh sh..!
How proud I am.....like a proud papa...!

LOL! I do have that effect on those who are against American liberty that was fought for. That you mock one of the most cherished liberties this country can possess is of no great surprise to anyone. Really,

The battle is invisible ghosts all around you...oh..and cartoon characters,,,,double twistedheds,,,,several twistedhedss on the radio..it is but of little wonder you are coming apart at the seams and have acquired such an affinity for me. This is quite common, actually, in the world of academia. The student suddenly finds themself attracted to the teacher.....alas for you, I need remind you, not only am I unflattered, but happily married for many many years. If you were to be so fortunate, your life would not be geing sucked out of you, slowly, day by day, by devoting your world to me. Not a problem, though,,I accept such devotion,,it goes with the RF territory.

>perhaps even in the amateur newsgroups. >That was coupled*

*there is that word again. Good student.

Mocking the impotent is impolite. I mock no one. I merely point out their transgressions. Oh, wait, I forgot, my power forces y'all to remain juvenile . <g>

After you get the schematic plug it in and check voltages. If you find any that are bad correct the problem. Inject audio into the volume control. If you dont get anything out troubleshoot the audio circuit. Also check to see if all the right tubes are in the right places, this is a pretty common problem with old tube stuff when you get it.

No doubt. When stated it was looking better, the negative activity increased..besides.....we do, on occasion receive such well thought out, philosophical gems by George and company, such as:
"The FCC has not lived up to its responsibilities, so we will rise to ours."
>

Ol' Riley condemned this exact behavior, going as far as saying "the vigilante type are occasionally worse than the problem."
Most agree.
The ever-present lust for power is not lost in his post.

"To announce that there must be no criticism of the president...or that we are to stand by the president right or wrong...is not only unpatriotic and servile, but is morally treasonable to the American

ON THE FRONT (March 19) - AKC advanced toward Twistedhed's lair Wednesday, positioning themselves as Busch's deadline for Twistedhed to leave the NG ran out.

"Busch is like the sherrif who gave the bad guy 48 hours to get out of town" said an AKC spokesman, "The bad guy said the town belongs to him. The sherrif said 'not any more'".

As the troops moved forward, there were reports of as many as 17 keyclowns surrendering to AKC forces. The commander of the headquarters company of the 1st Brigade, 3rd AKC Division, told reporters that both freebanders Tim Nebo and Moparholic had been turned over to FCC authorities. An AKC official said on condition of anonymity that notorious Texas keyclown Cheesecutter had "given up" and "tossed in the towel".

Meanwhile, Twistedhed hurled barrages of epithets and accusations at AKC members, keyclown radicals, and pro-legal moderates alike. He called Busch a "redneck" and accused retired AKC Sparky of "secret attacks". Hours after his erroneous fratricidal assault on Witchdoc he widened the gap between possible allies with attacks and accusations. "These are the last, desperate acts of a dying regime", observed Busch.

AKC officials also continued planning for governing the newsgroup after Twistedhed. The man who would be rec.radio.cb's civil administrator after the AKC takes control, retired Gen. Jerry O, is in the wings as those preparations continue.

The terrible conflict is at hand. Who's fault is it?
Your resident tyrant TWISTEDHED'S, that's who.

Read his last post. Did it make any sense? No. You can see the man is out of control. He's paranoid. He imagines enemies. Maybe he will even turn on YOU next.

You can see for yourself, he's a TRUE LOONY and will never stop his bufoonery. The flames will rage forever.

But there IS a way out. The conflict will cease totally WHEN THE NOBLE PEOPLE OF REC.RADIO.CB DEMAND THAT TWISTEDHED LEAVE THE NEWSGROUP.

If he won't leave ON HIS OWN, then you can MAKE HIM simply by complaining to his ISP. Write to:

abuse@webtv.net

Tell them "twistedhed" fills the newsgroup with wild, off-topic, profane and argumentative posts - and you want him gone.

Make him leave, and you will enjoy peace and a revitalized rec.radio.cb.

Name calling. That's YOUR style. If you think I read the ENTIRE thing, you're a resistor short of a divider.

BTW, I like all your choices of words, all wrong, IE: hear for here, your for you're, there for their. Your posts show your level of education, at least how much you paid attention in class. I was a total goof-off at school. I did however, pay attention and listen to what the teachers said, learned the rest of the stuff they skipped in history, and turned out OK. What's you're excuse?

And is it Bush or Busch?????? Don't ignore the question or edit it out.

A little old man from Debonair,
Was banging his girl on the stair, when bannister broke,
he doubled his stoke,
and finished her off in mid air!

There once was a man from Nantucket,
Who's dick was so long he could suck it,
He said with a grin,

Style, what style? It's a simple search and replace of key words, from authentic political or news articles. Replace "Bush" with "Busch", "Saddam Hussein" with "Twistedhed", and "USA" with "AKC" etc.

Uh, here is the original post that I responded to:

I'd say that the implication here, about hearing someone on a "toaster", the spectrum splatter, and not being able to hear on 6 or 2 meters, is not descriptive of a legally operating CB station. A legal, type accepted 4 watt CB, will not blank out a neighbor's ham station on 6 or 2 meters, nor be heard on non-electronic appliances. That, and the mention of channel 6, which is notorious for harboring the dregs of society, who regularly run high power, is all the "evidence" I need, to determine that the station in question is in fact, illegal, and is therefore not a legitimate station, and has no protection from part 15 interference.

Since the station is operating illegally

What the hell did they do to that radio? It used to be a good design.
Most "warble" problems (At least on earlier designs) are the result of a faulty 8V regulator, which rises to about 11V. That 8V line is critical, if good SSB is on your slate.

As a general rule, clipping a mod limiter is never a good idea. Besides the obvious problem of excessive splatter, you also put extra strain on the audio chip, if the radio uses a high level modulator (The 148 does not though), and you really don't improve your signal. While a box stock radio's limiter is set a bit conservatively, and increasing to the full 100% or a tad over, will make a big difference, anything more than that only increases splatter, and distortion. I've always found it more effective to set the limiter to 100% and then running the mike gain up, so that average modulation runs between 60% and 80%.

CB voo-doo, Dave,,and you;'re failing at propagating it. NO amount of power will bring a voice across a toaster, Dave..that should have been your first clue. This was a HUGE cb voo-doo legend that went around in the seventies. But you ran with it, advised one to commit an illegal act based on your mere interpretation. Is it possible it was illegal? Of course. Is it possible it was legal. Of course.
You assumed toward the side you usually do, with nothing other than your own personal feelings dictating such. No matter. You had no way of knowing whether it was legal or not and gave advice contraindicated in the matter of conducive hammie behavior.

ALT.RADIO.PIRATE OFFERS EXILE TO TWISTEDHED

Alt.radio.pirate is ready to offer sanctuary to Twistedhed in a desperate effort to avert a Busch-led war. The official pirate radio news agency FRN.COM said: "Alt.radio.pirate is ready to host Twistedhed if he wants to reside there with all dignity."

The AKC had given Twistedhed and his two acolytes until early Thursday to go into exile or face war. Twistedhed has rejected the ultimatum.

The pirate newsgroup's offer came just hours after amateur newsgroups appealed to Twistedhed to go into exile, but did not offer to take him in.

Notorious Texas keyclown Cheesecutter said it was "unthinkable" that Twistedhed would comply with any ultimatum to flee rec.radio.cb. He said in a post the other day: "We pledge to you that we will follow the path of heroism and martyrdom and we will all be martyrs defending illegal CB."

Some folks that are mildly retarded cling to that of which has or had a profound effect on their psyche. I can see how some may mistake George's daily rants and attacks on the first amendment for those of a drug induced stupor.
He's really upset with me. He hates the light. The sheer amount of posts he focuses on me and not any type cb or radio enjoyment whatsoever illustrates the nuts that feel some type retaliation is in order for those who they can not move beyond. Perhaps if there existed a license or something similar similar for those who wish to vanquish their communicatin deficit, some things may improve. Absolutely astounding.

Kinda sounds to me as though the FCC may just expect that if one is so inclined and puts forth the effort, not to mention gains the knowlege and assumes the responsibility of obtaining his ticket, whatever the class may be, that he ought to run his entire station with a certain amount of respect for others that may want to share the airwaves. This would seem to include any device that could create interference of any kind that may be interpreted as malicious.
It would also be my understanding that creating white noise on ch.6 would effect ch.6 rather than effecting another operator. From a legal standpoint, anyway.
It all seems a bit silly to me.

There once was a man from Peru,
Who fell asleep in a canoe.
He dreamed of Venus,
And played with his penis,
And woke up with a hand full of goo.

There once was a genie
With a ten-foot weenie
And he showed it to the girl next door.
She thought it was a snake,
And hit it with a rake,
And now it's only five-foot-four.

You asked for it!!!!!!!!!!!!

There was a young lady called Sue Who's boyfriend liked eating her poo when she fancied a shit on his face she would sit and he'd suck on her arse and then chew

there was a young lady who's cunt was wide and not quite at the front when viewed from beneath you could see it had teeth and when fucked it will moan and then grunt

It is good luck that your knob fits nicely inside a girls gob while they grip on your bum rubbing hard with their tongue you would pump their mouth full of your cum

TWISTEDHED GETS BLASTED, GROUND WAR STARTS

(AKC NEWSWIRE) As night fell on the newsgroup, eyewitnesses told Reuters that Busch-led AKC forces had launched an attack near the rec.radio.cb/rec.radio.amateur.policy border, and large explosions were reported in the direction of Twistedhed.

Twistedhed responded to the attack with several insults on his enemies. All missed their targets or were intercepted by AKC rebuffs. The keyclowns also said they shot down an AKC ISP complaint but there was no confirmation.

"Twisty is blasted out of his skull on Boones Farm wine" remarked an AKC spokesman.

Twistedhed appeared in rec.radio.cb three minutes after the first strikes on him, denouncing the ''criminal, reckless little Busch.'' He urged freebanders and radio pirates to resist the coming invasion and promised a historic victory.

Little miss Muffet sat on her tuffet, her knickers all tattered and torn.
It wasn't a spider that sat down beside her,
but Little Boy Blue with his horn.

Jack and Jill went up the hill, to fetch a lump of cheese.
Jack came down with a smile on his face, and his trowsers down to his knees.

Old mother Hubbard went to the cupboard, to get her poor doggie a bone.
When she bent down, the dog came around,
and gave her a bone of his own.

Regards,

Peter.

(Chuckle) The honorables among hammies have given it some thought and have found those with the impotence and lust-for a bit of power, any power, are responsible for most of the vitriol on this group,,,,,,,most of it from yourself, the wannabe moderator,,LOL..in other words..LID Bucsh, your problems are within your deep-resented anger you harbour from traumatic childhood abuses.

Most mature folks possess capabilities far beyond what you know exist. The communicate with no deficits, unlike yourself.
They have no interest in censorship.
Mature folks don't cry or worship in public that which they are enamoured with. Hey, it's not me, the entire group has been making fun of your inabilities of self-control..LOL...just like I pointed out years ago....you don't play with a full deck...the wheel chair is polished and your tooth is brushed,but you still smell..LOL!
Repeated crying can work for babes in their mother's arms, butI'm not your mother and have no interest in coddling you, despite the way your hurl yourself at me. Nevertheless, crying is not the effective tool that eludes you for manipulation...it merely reinforces your weaknesses, highlights your inabilities, and illustrates your deficits, impotences, and personal challenges you have not yet learned to overcome. Crying to the publisher about the information gained in a book or magazine because you can not comprehend his position is extremely childish.

Most of this is pretty simple for those not suffering from communication deficits... the internet is, and has always, been borne of unfettered, free access of information. The internet has swollen to astronomical proportions because many folks, for he first time, can communicate about anything they select. That lids like yourself wish to take away that right because you claim my mere words are too much for your multi-challenged self to deal with on a rational and intelligent level, tells me everything I say, everything I do, is not only 100% correct, but extremely and profoundly effective. Thanks for the daily words of encouragement that serve as the reminder of my effectiveness.,

Busch is full of discontent and is destined to fail merely because his endeavor is based in malice and not good will, pleasantries, or helpfulness. His is one of a misguided mission, like a mildy retarded child looking for their lost ball on Thursday in SchaumBERG when they lost it in Palatine on Wednesday. <g> They are merely in need of a little assistance.
Those who utilize hatred and discontent as their motif of choice, will not only stir up the same, but receive it several times over.

Lids like yourself and N3CVJ, N8, Nad, Sparky and now that we see the thoughts that are on Griffey's mind, have your egos so heavily involved that y'all are blind to how far y'all have fallen.

You remain ignorantly determined that you somehow have the right to tell others how to post, what to post, where to post, and when they should or can post .

Your failure at telling folks what should be posted or shouldn't, is not only cotraindicative in the matter of a free country with each citizen afforded the right to freedom of speech, but behavior non-conducive of a hammie such as yourself, Herr Busch.

It also is against the very nature of what the internet was founded on..free to exchange ideas and beliefs, free from censorship from net nazis lie yourself. You and your lid-sheoples wish to kill those rights.
You take issue with someone, fall madly in love with them, your homosexual advances rebuffed, so you attempt a failed hate-filled, campaign to censor the one who damaged your ego.
If you lived in Iraq, your campaign may have a chance in hell.

Here in the wonderful land of the free, you are destined to fail. Americans will not put up with nazis like yourself messing with liberties that people dies to give you. It's why you are a failure.

Until you realize such, you will continue to be the marvel of the group, allowing such mundane matters to eat you up. Magnificent failures illustrated appropriately.

Fix that browser, curious Jorge..you forgot to switch it back...your posts are falling out of synch and are not being posted properly.

(Gasp) NO! Not one person agreees you are capable of such things as "attacks" curious Jorge. The group understands you are an unwilling participant and victim of your own ignorance.

Walter Mitty daydreams are quite healthy for some. It gives shut-in invalids such as yourself reason not to committ suicide.

> The keyclowns also said they shot down an >AKC ISP complaint but there was no >confirmation.

_
If it's that important to you to share your failures with the group, I would be more than happy to share some of the violations you have commited.

>"Twisty is blasted out of his skull on Boones >Farm wine" remarked an AKC spokesman.

Ahh,,yes,,the temper problem that clings to your hairy back as a monkey you just can't tame.....must insinuate, obfuscate, and when such tactics fail, reduce yourself to outright fallacies. It is the only thing that soothes the ego of a defeated wildebeast, albeit temporary.

>Twistedhed appeared in rec.radio.cb three >minutes after the first strikes on him, >denouncing the ''criminal, reckless little >Busch.'' He urged freebanders and radio >pirates to resist the coming invasion and >promised a historic victory.

The victory was several years ago by the mere mention of your "AKC". As usual, you are a dollar late and a day short.
Your failed atempts at trying to catch "ol twist doing any of the things you falsely attribute to him have left you quite susceptible to control by others (snicker)

Your fallacies and obsessions with my doings are surpassed only by your ignorance of such. I realize the magnitude and effectiveness of my posts when I see the lids coming out of the woodwork to support each other and clowns such as Brian Grifffey showing his true nature and that of which is on his mind.
What tangeld webs y'all weave. See, lid, I do plenty of posting, and unlike you, have many, many friends here. Those that do not suffer deficits such as you display on a daily basis are usually silent..you do not see them,,but they work tirelessly behind the scenes to undo the damage to hammie radio you and your ilk do.
Now run along and go back to fantasizing you are the net nazi censor of rec.radio.cb...go back to your war that rages inside you because you realize you have not the maturity needed to hold intelligent dialect....and your jealousy,,mustn't forget your jealousy of my world and work. :) Alas,,poor curious Jorge....LMAO!

It sort of grows on you after a while. Scary.

After jamming cordless phones and farting around with modded ham gear and bootleg TV transmitters for a couple of years, radio-ness is forcing my subconcious to morph me into the Ultimate Netcop... I have a sudden urge to go out and finally buy that Knight .50-caliber and some AP shells for it... and buy a uniform and a brass star badge from the army surplus store... and I must not forget the dentures and the Confederate flags either. And shave my head so I no longer look like Manson. Why I have these sudden urges is beyond me...

My subconscious is telling me to remove the doctored 706 and the TV transmitter from my car and replace them with a sophisticated GPS and triangulation system... this will make it all the easier to track down and blow away anyone cussing or using illegal power... and I always thought the Nazis were pretty despicable dudes up until now, my subconscious is telling me they were the ideal... I have an urge to pester the gods in Congress to overturn that dastardly, bastardly 1st Amendment that teaches our kids it's OK to cuss... I am suddenly convinced that Riley is a traitor who isn't going far enough with enforcement... and what was the deal with that bumbling gumshoe Erin Boobner?

But I guess radios tend to have this uncontrollable morphing effect on anyone who gets involved with them. Scary. (hey, it happened to KE6VRK...)

Aw,,come come, "Guy" (mmmph),,,all your alter egos have noticed. Your "Sudden urge". Now you sit with Lelnad,,seeing as how I am the only one

"forcing" such urges upon those that have no freedom of thought or

Alas, I must depart the sheopled flock of curious Jorge Busch and company for a few days. Mucho DX awaits this weekend and I love hearing certain hammies on the air, attempting to take to the freeband...it is oh-so-much more gratifying than on usenet, as the desperations ring through the ignorant stutters quite nicely.
It's all elementary, as the nocodes are obvious,,they haven't a clue concerning HF and their transmissions show it.
You yankees keep paying those outrageous prices for Blue Crab, I may retire in a year or so...it doesn't get any better,..out on the water talking DX, laughing at certain hammies on the freeband, and making ridiculous money for doing what I love.....what a great country we live in!! Curious Jorge Busch, I will accept no less than 9 (nine) prayers to me daily, and they must be shared with the group to illustrate the influence and "force" I maintain over you. Twithed may be blasted on Boone's farm, but don't forget the drugs and the jizz that he also prodigiously consumes. For further reference look back a few months to his vacation journal that he posted.

With all of this talk of impending war, many of us will encounter "Peace Activists" who will try and convince us that we must refrain from retaliating against the ones who terrorized us all on September 11, 2001.

These activists may be alone or in a gathering.....most of us don't know how to react to them. When you come upon one of these people, or one of their rallies, here are the proper rules of etiquette:

1. Listen politely while this person explains their views. Strike up a conversation if necessary and look very interested in their ideas. Calmly explain the 9-11 attack was the second attack on the WTC by the same people. They will tell you how revenge is immoral, and that by attacking the people who did this to us, we will only bring on more violence. They will probably use many arguments, ranging from political to religious to humanitarian.

2. In the middle of their remarks, without any warning, punch them in the nose.

3. When the person gets up off of the ground, they will be very angry and they may try to hit you, so be careful.

4. Very quickly and calmly remind the person that violence only brings about more violence and remind them of their stand on this matter. Tell them if they are really committed to a nonviolent approach to undeserved attacks, they will turn the other cheek and negotiate a solution. Tell them they must lead by example if they really believe what they are saying.

5. Most of them will think for a moment and then agree that you are correct.

6. As soon as they do that, hit them again. Only this time hit them much harder. Square in the nose.

7. Repeat steps 2-6 until the desired results are obtained and the idiot realizes how stupid an argument he/she is making.

8. There is no difference in an individual attacking an unsuspecting victim or a group of terrorists attacking a nation of people. It is unacceptable and must be dealt with. Perhaps at a high cost. We owe our military a huge debt for what they are about to do for us and our children. We must support them and our leaders at times like these. We have no choice.

We either strike back, VERY HARD, or we will keep getting hit in the nose.

any licence changes affects everyone.

if you bothered to heck this you might just understand.

so extending this arguement then the RAE unfairly keeps CBers of the Amateur bands and should therefore be also scrapped.
so to level all playing pitches everywhere...lets give away Amateur radio licenses to everyone...and the best way of doing this?
print them on the back of a corn-flakes pack.,..which is what i predicted 3 years ago

> They're a beginner on HF though, which as we know is so much harder than poppycock... any B-licence since the B-licence started has known that a morse test is required to be passed to get a hf license.

only when the FL arrived did 2800 rush forward and do the easy way and by doing so display that they were not preapred to do a test but were only too happy to do an assessment - an assessment designed for BEGINNERS thats the joke that has been allowed to persist.

and some of these 2800 have openly declared their out and out objection to a morse test get the hf bands and still they line up to do a morse assessment which as we all know 8 year olds can pass.

First off, I'm not against the war, so don't criticize me on this. However,
Iraq has little or no ties to al Qaeda.
Iraq was not responsible for September 11,2001, and we are not in Iraq because of 'terrorism'.
We are in Iraq to disarm Saddam, to dislodge Saddam from power and to liberate the Iraqi people.

Sure has a helluva lot in common with him, LOL! Twisthed's "teranews" sounds a lot like Rev. Stang's concept of "slack", and both are geniuses from another dimension! I'm just a harmless Curly, but Rev. Stang/Twisthed is definitely a Moe.

I'd betcha any money the irrepressible Rev. Stang has been moonlighting away from the Church of the Subgenius, and has been playing Great Explorer of the Airwaves under the pseudonym Twisthed.

Of course if they AREN'T the same dude, and one of them reads this (and I'm sure one of 'em will), just remember it's all in fun.

Maybe not directly, and maybe not at all. But 9/11 was a wake-up call for America to see just what is possible with state-sponsored terrorism.

> and we are not in Iraq
>because of 'terrorism'.

You bet we are. Before this conflict Saddam made no bones about supporting suicide bombers against Israel, writing a check to each of their families for $25K. And that's just his public support -- nobody knows how much he is supporting terrorists behind the scenes. But if he publically supports them with money you can bet that he is willing to covertly supply them with chem/bio weapon technology.

>We are in Iraq to disarm Saddam, to dislodge Saddam from power and to >liberate the Iraqi people.

Also true. And I'm sure there are other reasons that are less virtuous and more economic. Time will tell.

>Please educate yourself before posting.

That is a truly ignorant statement since it's obvious that the public doesn't have all the facts. There is no doubt that there are issues that will be revealed only after the war, and even then perhaps many years afterwards.

A lot of people don't realize that there is much intelligence gathering technology that can't be revealed without sacrificing national security. If we reveal the proof that was gathered with these methods we also reveal the methods of gathering it. If that happens there will be a lot of nations -- even friendly nations -- that might get really upset knowing just how much we can find out. For example, should we show a satellite photo where you can count the lice on top of Saddams fat head it might inspire less-than-friendly states to develop the same technology, which would be bad.

National security is based on a "need to know" system, and we have been told only what we need to know -- nothing more. You will have to wait months, or even years, until all the facts have been declassified before you can really "educate yourself".

Unfortunately the war in Iraq is at best a tactic to draw attention from the search for Bin Laden.
We have not been able to pinpoint one ruthless individual so we go after another. Although I don't have any sympathy for Saddam. He is getting what he disserves, but it has been publicly known for some time that Bin Laden despises Saddam for his secular believes. So you can see how it is nearly impossible to link al Qaeda, 9-11 and Iraq. I also believe that Bin Laden has publicly made comments along the lines to the Iraqi people that they need to overthrow Saddam.

The only reason relating to terrorism and Iraq is that we don't want any other terrorist groups such as Hamas, etc to get their hands on the possible biological and chemical weapons that Iraq may have and use them on our allies in the region such as Israel for example.

Realistically, Iraq does not pose any threat to the US directly or through terrorist means. But Iraq does pose a threat to our allies in the region.

Two weeks ago, was my forty-fifth birthday, and I wasn't feeling too hot that morning anyway. I went down to breakfast, knowing my wife would be pleasant and say "Happy Birthday," and probably have a present for me. But she didn't even say "Good Morning," let alone "Happy Birthday."

I thought, "Well, that's wives for you. The children will remember."

The children came in to breakfast and didn't say a word.

When I started off to the office I was feeling pretty low and despondent. As I walked in the door, my secretary, Janet said, "Good Morning, Boss, Happy Birthday." And I felt a little better -- someone had remembered.

About noon, Janet knocked on my door and said, "You know, it's such a beautiful day outside and it's your birthday, let's go to lunch, just you and me."

I said, "By George, that's the greatest thing I've heard all day. Let's go."

So off we went to lunch. But we didn't go where we normally go; we went out into the country to a little private place. We had a couple of martinis and enjoyed ourselves tremendously.

On the way back to the office, she said, "You know, it's such a beautiful day. We don't need to go back to the office, do we?"

I said, "No, I guess not."

She said, "Let's go to my apartment."

I nodded and smiled. After arriving at her apartment, we had another martini and then she said, "Boss, if you don't mind, I'd like to slip into something more comfortable."

"Sure," I excitedly replied.

She went into the bedroom and, in about six minutes, she came out carrying a big birthday cake, followed by my wife, children, and dozens of my closest friends. All were singing Happy Birthday.

And there I sat on the couch with nothing on but my socks.

And that is why I fired my secretary.

AMERICA AT WAR: HAM RADIO PREPARES

America's terror threat level has again been raised to "Code Orange." This in the wake of President Bush’s ultimatum to Iraqui dictator Saddam Hussein. And with our nation on high alert for terrorist attacks, Homeland Security Secretary Tom Ridge outlined a national plan Tuesday March 18th. One that he said would increase America's at-home defenses. Part of it is in the area of personal communications. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Norm Seeley, KI7UP, has the latest on this and the way ham radio can be prepared:

The plan, which Homeland Security Secretary Tom Ridge has named Operation Liberty Shield heightens security at the nation's borders, airports, seaports and railways. It also provides additional security at nuclear and chemical plans along with protecting elements of the nation's food supply and distribution system.

As you have probably heard in other n ews reports, vehicles are again will be subject to random inspections on roads leading into and out of airports, sea-ports and similar facilities. Most of those who will making inspection stops are probably unaware of ham radio equipment and why hams have it in their cars. Akll they will sdee is a different kind of radio that they have never experienced before. So, for the forseeable future Amateur Radio operators would be well advised to carry a copy of their license with them if they are driving a vehicle equiped with an antenna array anyplace close to a high security area. Its much simpler to show you ham ticket to the inspector than to try to explain the hobby while a long line of cars behibd you are honking their horns.

Also suggested by Holeland Security is for every family put in place an emergency communication plan. This plan should be specific to a given family unit, understood by all of its members and practiced regularly.

Some experts have recommended that a family communications plan not be totally dependant on land based or cvellular telephones that can easily become overloaded in an emergency. Recommended are forms of personal radio including FRS and the new M.U.R.S. service. Families where all members are licensed radio amateurs have a definite advantage here. If your wife and kids are not yet hams, now might be a hood time to make getting them all tickets as a super high priority. Three places on the web you can find training information are www.arrl.org, www.w5yi.org and www.gordonwestradioschool.com. And gordonwestradioschool is one word.

Radio amateurs involved in civil defense and disaster preparedness should now be on high alert as well. Radio gear should be in tip-top shape, tested daily and H-T batteries should be maintained at full charge. Do the same spare battery sets. Also, have one or more sets of alkaline cells ready to go. If the power goes out you will have no way to quickly recharge your NiCad or NiMH packs.

If you belong to an emergency service group like ARES or RACES, make sure your leaders know how to contact you 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Take part in regular any scheduled on-the-air drills so that you will be knife-edge sharp if your services are needed.

And if you have never had Emergency Communications training, don’t wait. The ARRL is the only national Amateur Radio group certified to provide you with the schooling you need and courses are available right now. As soon as this newscast is over we urge you to go to the League’s website at www.arrl.org and to sign up.

Meantime, the American Red Cross is urging families and individuals across the nation to make appropriate preparations. The relief agency suggests everyone follow the Red Cross Recommendations for the Homeland Security Advisory System. It’s on the web at www.redcross.org.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Norm Seely, KI7UP, reporting.

We will have more on ham radio and its part in defending America against the threat of terrorism in future Amateur Radio Newsline reports. (ARNewsline™)

AMERICA AT WAR: PROTECTING THE NATIONS COMMUNICATIONS

With war now reality and the possibility of terrorism, leaders from the telecommunications, Internet Service Provider, satellite and cable industries have begun consideration of widespread recommendations to help restore communications services in the event of an attack on the nation’s communications infrastructure. Some of the recommendations were presented by members of the Network Reliability and Interoperability Council at its quarterly meeting March 14th at the FCC.

In developing what the group calls its best practices for service continuity and disaster recovery, the industry representatives identified and analyzed more than 200 such concepts. These cover a wide range of scenarios. And for the first time in the area of cyber security the communications industry has conducted a thorough assessment and analysis of its vulnerabilities.

The 56-member council vote on which recommendations to put in place will be completed on March 28th. (Published news reports)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: ARISS TO CONTINUE WHILE SHUTTLES ARE GROUNDED

The grounding of America's Space Shuttles following the February 1st Columbia disaster has not had any major impact on Amateur Radio. Roy Neal, K6DUE, brings us up to date on whats happening in the shuttle program and with manned ham radio in space:

The announcements by NASA that its having Boeing build a new Orbital Space Plane and that it hopes to have the remaining Space Shuttles back in the sky by this fall signal a turning point for the space agency. It is telling the world that things are getting back on track.

But in there here and now there are still several months before full space operations resume. Amateur Radio on the International Space Station Chairman Frank Bauer, KA3HDO, says that ARISS is prepared for any eventuality.

According to Bauer, until the shuttles fly there will be less scientific work taking place on the International Space Station. This is because of the reduced on-orbit staffing of two member crews.

Bauer believes the most probable scenario for a crew change will be what we reported two weeks ago. That U-S Astronaut Ed Lu, KC5WKK and Russian Cosmonaut Yuri Malenchenko will fly to the I-S-S on a Soyuz rocket to become the Expedition 7 crew. But Bauer adds that Astronaut Mike Foale, KB5UAC, is a back-up for the crew -- also in training -- just in case he is needed. He also notes that Astronaut Pedro Duque, KC5RGG, who planned to use the ARISS equipment on the upcoming Soyuz transport flight, will now probably fly in the fall.

Baueer says that the only major setback for ham radio so far concerns upgrading the I-S-S ham station itself. According to KA3HDO, with the shuttles not flying, consumables like food and water are the highest priority items to be launched on the upcoming Progress re-supply missions. This means that the ARISS hardware that was planned to be flown this year will probably be delayed. The gear waiting for transport includes the Slow Scan Television equipment, plus Kenwood D700 and Yeasu FT-100 radios and the Naval Academy's P C Sat 2 ham satellite. Bauer says that this equipment will be kept ready for any upcoming transport flight opportunities to the I-S-S.

The good news: Bauer says that the opportunities for school contacts will remain at the same. Look for them at a rate of at least two a week. Maybe more if the Expedition 7 crew finds itself with extra free time.

Right now, it appears as if ARISS operation from the I-S-S will continue on as it has since operations resumed. This, as investigators on the ground work to determine what caused the Columbia to disintegrate as it attempted to land last month and get ready to return the rest of the shuttle fleet to service later this year.

The only item not touched on by Bauer was open contacts with the ham radio public. These tend to occurr only when the crew has some unscheduled free time. (ARISS)

RESCUE RADIO: UK RADIO CLUB FIRE

Back on Earth, a radio club meeting is interupted by a fire. It happened in the U-K and Jeramy Boot, G4NJH, joins us from Nottingham Englanmd with the details:

--

The Bredhurst Receiving and Transmitting Society's quiz night on the 6th of March was interrupted by what all members present assumed to be a power cut. However, club member Terry Wheeler, G7MIM, went out to investigate and discovered that a fire had broken out in the room above the club. He calmly asked the members to leave the premises and the evacuation of the building took place in a swift, orderly and calm manner. Richard, G7PPE, tried to open the door of the flat above the club room where the fire had started as the occupant was still inside, but was unable to break down the door. Fire crews arrived in a matter of minutes and the occupant was rescued and taken to hospital. Jeramy Boot, G4NJH.

Jean Darley, G1DLL, the Secretary of the Bredhurst Receiving and Transmitting Society says -- and we quote: "It's never a dull moment if you're a member of our radio society." G1DLL is also now trying to find an alternative venue for the club to meet. (GB2RS)

RADIO LAW: ANTENNA PROTECTION - CALIFORNIA TRIES AGAIN

If at first you don’t succeed, try again. And that’s exactly what hams in California are doing as they try to convince the state legislature and the governor that its time to offer protection for their antennas and towers. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Bruce Tennant, K6PZW has more:

March 26th is the date for a legislative hearing on California's latest attempt to pass an Amateur Radio antenna protection bill. The ARRL Letter says that Assembly Bill 1228 was introduced February 21st by Assemblyman Bob Dutton. It has been referred to the Committee on Local Government for consideration.

ARRL Pacific Division Director Bob Vallio, W6RGG, and the League’s antenna expert Dean Straw, N6BV, are among those scheduled to testify on behalf of AB 1228. Several others also plan to attend.

Back in 2000, the California Legislature passed a bill incorporating the essence of PRB-1, but Governor Gray Davis vetoed the measure. At that time the Governor said his opposition stemmed from a lack of budgetary funds to complete the required studies and his personal belief that amateur antennas should be considered a local rather than a state issue. The earlier California measure had carried a price tag of between $70,000 and $100,000 to fund studies and a model ordinance that lawmakers required.

Organizers behind the current bill say the new measure, being called "The Emergency Communications Enhancement Act," will not carry any price tag. A copy of the current legislative proposal is available on-line the California State Legislature web site.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, in Los Angeles.

So far, 16 states have incorporated the essence of PRB-1 into their laws or have approved Amateur Radio antenna legislation that includes minimum regulatory heights for antenna structures. (ARRL)

RADIO LAW: CALIFORNIA WORKING TO MOBILE CELL PHONE BAN

Still in the Golden State, a bill requiring cell phone users to use handsfree devices while driving has been adopted by a powerful California Assembly committee. Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, has been following the story and has the latest developments:

The measure passed the California Assembly Transportation Committee on a 14 to 5 vote on Monday March 10th. This, after falling a single vote short of passage for the past two legislative sessions.

The bill's author is Assemblyman Joe Simitian, of Palo Alto. He has called the committee's approval the first step to saving lives on California roads and highways.

Under the Simitian's bill a first offense for using a cell phone while driving a motor vehicle would result in a mandatory $20 fine. Subsequent violations would carry a maximum fine of $50. Drivers could use handsfree cell phones without threat of a penalty.

The measure is exclusive to mobile cellular telephone use. It reportedly excludes all other forms of two-way radio communications. The bill now heads to the state Appropriations Committee for further hearings.

Reporting from near the city of Valencia California, I'm Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, for the Amateur Radio Newsline.

If the measure eventually becomes law, California will become the second state to require handsfree use of cell phones by drivers. New York was the first back in 2001. (ARNewsline™ from various reports and sources.)

ENFORCEMENT: FCC ALLEGES NUMEROUS VIOLATIONS ONB MICHIGAN REPEATER

A pair of Michigan repeater operators have been told to cease operating their systems under automatic control. This, as the FCC launches an investigation into charges of several rules violations. The agency's Daryl Duckworth, NN0W, has more;

Duckworth: "The Detroit District Director issued an order to cease autonmatic control of Amateur repeater station K5YHA to Sheri Gilbert and an order to cease automatic control of Amateur repeater station K5EKP to William Gilbert, both of Lupton Michigan. Both stations are under review by the Enforcerment Bureau for apparent violations of the Commissions rules inccluding inadaquite station control and deliberate interference."

In a letter February 24th letter to the Gilberts, FCC Special Counsel Riley Hollingsworth alleges that numerous rule violations have taken place on the repeater. Also that the repeater is the source of interference to the K8GER system. He said that Violations on the repeater consisted of failure to identify by some users, use of false or misleading call signs by users and failure to have a control operator for the repeater. Hollingsworth alleges that back in January the Gilberts' apparently turned the operation of the repeater over to a car rally. During that time several of these type of rule violations occurred for more than 12 hours during a two-day period.

The letters warns the Gilberts' that that if they are unwilling or unable to prevent violations on their repeater, then their Amateur operator and station licenses will be subject to enforcement action by the Commission. This could include a fine, operator license suspension or station license revocation. The Gilbert's have since informed the FCC that the repeater has been taken off the air. (FCC)

AT THE FCC: NOW WE HAVE COALS

The acronym laden Federal Communications Commission has added COALS to its dictionary. This, as the regulatory agency begins implementation of the Cable Operations and Licensing System by Report and Order on March 13th.

With COALS the FCC has expanded its electronic filing capabilities to make it easier for multichannel video programming distributors to submit applications, reports, and other documents. The FCC says that COALS also makes license and cable operational information more accessible to FCC staff. This in turn makes for more efficiency in monitoring spectrum usage and competitive conditions in the cable and multichannel video marketplace. The FCC adds that the introduction of COALS represents more progress in the FCC’s own modernization initiative. (FCC)

RADIO RULES: MEDIA OWNERSHIP HEARINGS

It looks like there will be more public hearings on media ownership restrictions. A Democrat on the Federal Communications Commission plans to hold two more hearings, sidestepping the wishes of the agency's Republican chairman.

Commissioner Michael Copps says he will hold hearings at the University of Washington in Seattle and Duke University in Durham, North Carolina. Copps is seeking public input on the F-C-C's review of whether decades-old media ownership restrictions are appropriate in a market altered by the growth of the Internet, satellite boadcasting and cable television.

FCC chairman Michael Powell had previously said that the hearing he held in Richmond, Virginia, on February 27th is all that's needed. Powell said that the agency has received 13 thousand comments from the public, most filed electronically. (FCC)

HAM RADIO CUDOS: PAUL HARVEY HONORS HAMS

Radio commentator Paul Harvey dchose Wednesday, March 19th to honor ham radio. In his broadcast, Harvey described radio amateurs as America's quiet warriors. He said that there are 700,000 of them who are unpaid, uncelebrated, civilian, radio operators, who are there during and after floods, fires and tornadoes. And says Harvey, after the 911 attack hams were indispensable in reuniting families.

It was a very unexpected salute to the nations ham radio community. You can find it on the web at www.paulharvey.com. Look for the show dated March 19th. (W6RCL)

CHANGING OF THE GUARD: MARC TONNA, F9FT, - SK

A pioneer in antenna design has passed on. According to a notice on thew A.F.T. antenna wwebsite, company founder Marc Tonna, F9FT died on March 2nd at the age of 91.

Way back in 1946, Marc Tonna revisited the design described by the Japanese searchers Yagi and Uda in 1926. Tonna brought to the Yagi improvements that made his antennas famous among the radio-amateurs, as well as in the field of the then uprising commercial TV. He later went on to become the co-founder of the company Antennes Tonna which today is known as A.F.T.. (AFT)

NAMES IN THE NEWS: NEW ARKANSAS SM

Dennis Schaefer, W5RZ, has been appointed as the new Arkansas ARRL Section Manager. He succeeds Bob Ideker, WB5VUH, who first served as Section Manager from 1991 through 1995 and who returned to office in 2001.

And heres where it become rather uinteresting. Ideker had decided to not run for another term. Eldon Bryant, K7ZQR, was elected to replace him. But Bryant later decided not to assume the office and Schaefer was named as his replacement.

Schaefer’s term begins on April 1st. Arkansas ARRL members -- or anyone elser can contact him by e-mail to w5rz@arrl.org (ARRL)

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: CALL IT MC INTERNET

Hungry? You may soon get a surprising bonus when you dine at the Golden Arches. This, with word that McDonald's restaurants in three U.S. cities will be offering one hour of free high-speed Internet access to anyone who buys a promotional meal.

Ten McDonald's in Manhattan New York began offering wireless WiFi, or 802.11b, Internet access on Wednesday, Matrch 12th. By the end of 2003 McDonald's plans to extend the access to 300 restaurant locations in New York City, Chicago and a yet to be announced California city. Window signs will alert customers to which restaurants have WiFi wireless access. After using the hour of free access that comes with a meal, customers can pay $3 for another hour online or get more time by purchasing another extra value meal

Besides McDonald's, Internet surfers will also be able to tote their laptops to 400 U.S. Borders book stores, hundreds of hotels and a pair of U.S. airports where WiFi access will be available this summer. (Published news reports)

SPACE AND SCIENCE: MORE ON SETI@HOME

Last week Amater Radio Newsline’s Henry Feinberg, K2SSQ, brought you the latest news on a project called seti@home. Henry is back this week with some background on the project and how it got stasrted:

SETI@home first offered its screensaver to the world in May of 1999 as the first example of wide-scale distributed computing. Its aim was to link idle computers through the Internet to tackle large computational problem involved in searching for intelligent signals from space.

The key to its success was the collaboration between two people who would become the principal architects of the project. David Anderson is a computer scientist who was one of the principal developers of distributed computing. Dan Werthimer is a physicist with two decades of experience collecting radio data and parsing it in search of unusual signals from space. Together, they have drawn in not only the computer community, but many others as well. This includes thousands of ham radio operators interested in offering use of their spare computer time to benefit worthwhile projects.

Werthimer, who serves as chief scientist for SETI@home has conducted his own Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence for the past 24 years. For 11 of those years he has been able to use the giant 1,000 foot diameter radiotelescope at Arecibo Puerto Rico to look again at promising locations and frequency ranges. This, to determine if a strong radio signal is more than random noise or a transmission from an orbiting satellite.

So far no luck but Werthimer is not disappointed. This is because SETI@home has mobilized so much more computing power than has ever before been thrown at signal analysis. Also, the team has been able to perform much more detailed and complicated computations on the radio data than now possible with Werthimer's own ongoing SETI project, called Search for Extraterrestrial Radio Emissions from Nearby Developed Intelligent Populations. Thats SERENDIP IV for short.

What is important is that SETI@home has performed the most sensitive and detailed SETI sky survey to date. It has also demonstrated the power of the Internet for doing scientific distributed computing, and has allowed the general public -- and the ham radio communuity to participate directly in an exciting research project.

And the success of SETI@home has also spawned numerous other distributed computing projects. These include Folding@home -- a distributed computing project to calculate the three-dimensional structure of proteins and climateprediction.net to improve scientific forecasts of 21st century climate. And scientists say that there is more to come.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Henry Feinberg, K2SSQ.

So far, 4,287,000-plus users have lent thir spare computing time to analyze radio data for the SETI@home team. You can become a part of the project by taking your web browser over to http://setiathome.ssl.berkeley.edu. And if you missed that U-R-L you will find it in the print edition of this weeks amateur Radio Newsline report. (W6RCL, Published Reports)

DX

In D-X, word that A35KB has gone QRT -- probably for good! Paul Kidd, A35RK, told the Ohio Penn D-X newsletter that he hasn't heard Father Kevin Burke, A35KB, on the air for some time. So, last week telephoned Father Kevin only to learn that he is very busy with his duties as parish priest on the Island of Eua. Because of this, he is no longer able to operate on the radio, has allowed his license to expire, his station is dismantled, he has no intention of getting back on the air any time soon. Nor can he any longer respond to QSL requests. (OPDX)

On a brighter note for D-X'ers, the OPDX also reports that SP9FIH will be active from Tonga through April 14th. He already has verbal permission to operate and his license will be given to him after arrival on the island. Activity will be SSB on 80 through 10 meters including the WARC Bands. QSL to P.O. Box 480, 44-100 Gliwice, Poland. (OPDX)

And lastly word that Meanguera Island in the Fonseca Gulf will ba activated by DL7IQ, DL7IO and YS1CF from march 27th to the 28th as HU1M. Modes used will be SSB, CW, SSTV and RTTY. On the 29th and 30th the same call letters will be from San Diego Beach El Salvador. Full information is on the web at www.dl7io.de. (The' Modern DX'er)

THAT FINAL ITEM: SWLFEST 2003

And finally this week, hams are not the only radio hobbiests who get together at conventions. Shortwave listeners recently had a major get-together in Pennsylvania that saw guests and presenters from around the world. Steve Coletti of WBCQ was among them and has this in-depth report on SWL Winterfest 2003:

The listening side of the radio hobby made its 16th pilgrimage through the snow to the little town of Kulpsville, PA., for the annual SWL Winterfest hosted by NASWA. Although SWL stands for short wave listeners, the fest activities cover DC to daylight as again there were the usual demonstrations of overseas TV via satellite, the activities of the group who we affectionately call the "Scanner Scum", and a demonstration of DRM, the European digital shortwave broadcast standard by Jan Peter Werkman of Radio Netherlands, James Briggs of Merlin Communications and Kim Elliot, KD9XB, of the Voice Of America with additional help of a PC loaned by attendee Eric Cottrell, WB1HBU, to decode the broadcasts beamed specifically to Kulpsville.

This year, Bill Whitacre of the International Broadcast Bureau, parent of the VOA and other US international broadcast ventures, was able to schedule it's annual meeting of radio monitors to coincide with the Winerfest and 26 professional listeners from around the world joined the crowd in Kulpsville to explain that their job was more than just making sure that the signal was heard in the target area.

Although the Fest has been a listener only event, over one third of the attendees every year are hams and this year new ground was broken as Skip Arey, N2EI, ran an introduction to Ham Radio forum. Not only the first time for this discussion, but it was also one of two first time evening forums held on Friday night.

The international broadcasters were represented this year by Adventist World Radio and Radio Free Asia in the forums as well as live broadcasts over WBCQ. In addition to some regularly scheduled programming that went remote on Friday night, WBCQ had a Saturday marathon broadcast by the station's engineering magician, "Tim Tron" Smith, WA1HLR.

Other forums featured reports on listening tips, a summation of a DXpedition to Australia, and a report on overseas SWL group, the European DX Council's annual meeting.

Last year, Bob Zenotti, HB9ASQ, co-host of the now gone Shortwave Merry-Go-Round on Swiss Radio International made his first appearance at the fest as a guest speaker. This year he came on his own as regular attendee.

Zenotti: “This is one of the best ones I can remember. Great bunch of people, fantastic discussions, and a lot of excitement here….and very little sleep.”

--

The fest was not without it's humor. The hotel has the Stockholm, Copenhagen, and Oslo meeting rooms. In honor of the delegation from Finland that attends every year, the hosts of the event, Richard Cuff and John Figliosi, unofficially named the fest's hospitality suite, the Helsinki room.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Steve Colletti a-k-a Big Steve Cole of WBCQ Radio reporting fot the Amateur Radio Newsline.

The 2004 S-W-L Winterfest is slated a year vfrom now on March 12th to the 13th at the same venue. You will find lots more about it on the web at www.swlfest.com. (Strve Coletti for ARNewsline™)

They have a common enemy. Perhaps you have forgotten that the US and USSR were fighting on the same side in WWII for the very same reason.

Your point is well taken, and while Iraq may not have any direct ties with al Qaeda, they have clear and definite ties to other terrorist organizations.

>Realistically, Iraq does not pose any threat to the US directly or through >terrorist means.

Saddam has been openly hostile to the US because we keep interfering with his plans to dominate the region. For many years he has actively sought nuclear, biological and chemical weapons, and has no shame about using the latter to put down a revolt. The world now knows what a handful of terrorists can do with a few hijacked jet-liners, and there is no doubt that 9/11 has inspired other terrorists to attempt large-scale attacks. Terrorists make excellent delivery systems for these weapons, and you can bet that Saddam would be more than happy to supply those terrorists with the weapons and funding to carry out such attacks. The fact is that if he thought he could deliver a crippling blow to the US he would do so, even if it involved terrorists. I would consider that a direct threat.

> But Iraq does pose a threat to our >allies in the region.

Also true.

My main concern is that when his WMDs are found they will have instruction manuals written in French.

well arabs have never got along anyways but they do have a saying, the enemey of my enemey is my friend.....when it boils down to it, sure bin laden doesn't like sadaam but they do have a common enemey ....the united states......sadaam doesn't like the plo either but he helps them......all because of one thing......israel......sadaam likes to think of himself as the new king nebuchadnezzar. he thinks he should be the new arab leader to lead the arabs in a holy war, against israel.........oh well ....his dreams are about to come to a end.........so be it......so sadaam is hip deep in all of this......the war on terror does have a lot to do with him.........during the first war in 1991, sadaam had planned on using nerve agents and chemical agents against us troops if they had continued their march toward bagdad......i hope he is not successful this time on that account......he had a plane waiting for him with the engine running, to take him to algeria if swartzkopf had continued on to bagdad.......this is a known fact......so now , we are there again because we did not finish the job the first time.....

after the first gulf war, iraqi 'political' refugees were allowed to imigrate to the us.....within that group were members of the iraqi intelligence community, known as the mukhabarat. these fine gentlemen , set about devising means of getting revenge on the united states, per direct orders from sadaam hussein. so they hooked up with certain right wing nutts, who had similar ideas about the united states government......the iraqi agents trained these guys to make a fertizer bomb. then they used mcveigh and his accomplice, terry nicols to carry out this scheme....this was the first terrorist act perpetrated on us civilians. i find it amazing how quickly they wanted to execute this mcveigh guy........seemed awful fast to me...almost like they wanted his secret to die with him. incidentally, terry nicols just so happens to be married to a filopina woman who was in contact with filapino moslem terrorist, and while they used to go to the philpines obstencibly to visit her folks, they would meet with these people. remember also there was some discussion about a john doe #2.....who was this guy???? it has been speculated and collaberated by eye witnesses that this man was of middle eastern desent. if you remember for a while after the bombing, they were looking for middle eastern guys about this but suddenly they dropped it........why??? there is a connection between the ultra right wing fanatics in this country and the islamic terror network....remember, the enemey of my enemey is my friend. sure they don't like or trust each other, but they have a common goal......incidentally the terror network extends to south america, where terrorist are trained in doing what they do best, by ex ira men........for money of course.... ....all these things are true........the fbi knows a lot more about oklahoma, and the first bombing of the wtc, and flight 800......than they are willing to admit.......it is cover my backside time.............it was during a administration when they were told to look the other way on islamic terror and blame it on white guys......it was politically expedient to do so at that time because for some reason clinton wanted to appease the arabs.............so like good bureaucrats........they did.....and some of them are still around and should be found out and at the least fired ......for this crap....

there are many other things i could discuss about this, but this should give you at least something to chew on.......

they want to and leave us out of it.......and of course , the 750 million dollar anual payment........forget it......the american taxpayer should not have to fund such a pathetic group of rats who try

I am reluctant to jump into this discussion--but one point of clarification needs to be made because I think Roger has made ONE serious mistake. The mistake is to lump the illegal activities of "freebanders" into the group defined as CBers.
There are really three groups that have been improperly grouped together by Roger.

CBers--Those people operating within the CB band in accordance with the regulations. I encourage them to enjoy their hobby and I will do what I can to help them gain an amateur license and enjoy MY hobby, if that is what they want to do. There are many great amateurs that have come up through the CB ranks. Unfortunately there are relatively few of these legal operators left because they have been driven away by the illegal activities within the band.

Illegal CBers--Those people operating within the CB band but running excessive power. They have given CB a bad name.
And have driven away many of the legal CB operators of the past.
Their activities--although confined to the CB band has a negative impact on ME because the public often does not differentiate between CB and Amateur Radio. Hams often get blamed for Illegal-CB interference. And this is one thing that has led to the increase of covenants making it very difficult for a ham to be able to put up an antenna in many neighborhoods.

"Freebanders"--CB-LIKE activity, but usually running high power and outside of the authorized CB band. These are the worst offenders and they are NOT CBers. And to refer to them as CBers is a grave injustice to the legal CBers that WOULD make good hams. The "freebanders" are PIRATES. No license and no authorized frequency for operating. I have no use for them and firmly believe that their blatant disregard for the regulations makes them a very poor candidate for amateur radio--a hobby that is generally regarded as being self-policing and law-abiding. The "freebanders" not only impact me with negative public opinion because of the public's lack of differentiation between a "CBer" (freebander) and a ham.

But they also impact me directly as they move into the 10M ham band--specifically the CW segment. Making it become more and more difficult for me and all licensed amateurs to enjoy OUR hobby.
As PIRATE radio stations, operating outside the law, I think that resources SHOULD be brought to bear upon them to remove them from the air.

Here is a brief analogy that might make it easier to relate to my differentiations. Admittedly a bit oversimplified--but it does help to make my point.

CBer = licensed driver who drives (operates) on the roads and highways
(frequencies) and generally obeys the driving laws

HAM = a CDL-licensed driver who drives (operates) on the same roads and highways (frequencies) and has passed a more comprehensive test and has received more privileges for his efforts such as the right to drive an 18-wheeler

ILLEGAL CBer = a licensed driver who tends to exceed the speed limit, roll through a lot of stop signs, and generally disregard the rules

FREEBANDER = an unlicensed driver, who totally disregards the laws and the welfare of the public. All reasonable efforts should be made to remove unlicensed drivers from the public roads

BUT THE AMPS REFLECTOR IS NOT THE PLACE TO DEBATE
THESE ISSUES. Although helping unlicensed operators to break the law MIGHT be analogous to aiding and abetting illegal activities, the information provided on the reflector is available from other NON-restricted sources such as engineering textbooks. So it is hard to make a case for banning a specific group.

If the debate of the issues and their remedies IS important then an appropriate reflector should be established. In any case, the debate does not belong on the amps reflector.

heck or check? Can't be BOTHERED to check your own postings?!

NO, licence changes that allow more people to start off in the hobby more easily don't really affect you. How could they? More crowded bands?
Just stick to your beeping - you won't be bothered there.

Do you have to be so ridiculous? The RAE is relevant to getting a licence, Morse is not relevant to other modes on HF.

NO, they did yet another 'test' to improve their licence arrangements - to gain access to more bands. Sounds like progress to me.

You're having trouble with logic again. Which is it to be :
a) HF needs an extra test, so Class Bs are beginners on HF

b) HF doesn't need extra test, so Morse testing can be scrapped either way I'm happy... you're WRONG as usual

Ahoy Friends and Family...

Just a quick note to ask if you know any amateur radio operators (known as 'hams') in your area?

If so, could you do me a small favor for a very good cause?

We've become very good friends with an Indian ham (VU2ITI) named T.K. Mani who lives in Cochin, India.

He helped us out tremendously by fixing our SSB radio aboard Wild Card----and refused all payment.

Once we started hanging out with him we discovered what a wonderful guy he truly is. (See the story, which follows).

In any event, he and his entire radio club is in need of any-and- all-types of amateur radio magazines... like CQ, QST, or 73.

Is there is any chance that you could collect some of these magazines... or contact some local amateur radio group to do so... and mail them to the address which follows?

I know it would take a little time and some money----but, believe me, it would be greatly appreciated by the amateurs of India.... and by me personally.

It doesn't matter how old or ripped up the mags are... they'll read whatever you send them to tatters!

Thanks so much.

Here's the address:

T.K. Mani

Thanks again.

Cap'n Fatty Goodlander
Sailing Yacht WILD CARD
Cochin, India
Indian Ocean
Earth

On Radios, Indian Friends and Electronic Heros Copyright 2003 by Cap'n Fatty Goodlander

In the last few years, we've sailed to dozens of counties, many of which are reputed to be the friendliest in the world. Nowhere, however, have we made more wonderful friends quicker than in India.

Take electronic guru and university professor T. K. Mani as example: once he heard there was a visiting American yacht '...stranded without a radio,' he dropped everything and rushed down to the Cochin harbor to help.

My wife Carolyn and I happened to be away traveling inland at the time, so he kept returning day after day until he found us aboard----despite the hour-long, heavy-traffic commute.

I was, frankly, somewhat suspicious of him at first. Without even looking at the radio, he assured us he could fix it. His only question was, "Do you need it back tomorrow, or can I have a couple of days?"

To dampen his optimism, I warned him that the radio had not worked since we'd been hit by lightening and that I had no idea what was wrong with it, no schematic diagram, no parts list, etc.

He just shrugged.

I didn't know it at the time, but T.K. Mani had every right to be confident.

About thirty years ago, when he was a teenager, he saw a newspaper ad for a small radio receiver for 10 rupees, about twenty cents American. He wanted that radio so bad he could taste it, and began bugging his hardworking-but-nearly-penniless father day after day. His family was VERY poor and often hungry----and his father told him repeatedly that it was too expensive. But Mani wanted it, wanted it, wanted it... so badly that his father ultimately relented and gave Mani the 10 rupees.

Mani sent away for the radio, and waited. And waited. And is still waiting. "It was a rip off... a scam," he told me. "I never got the radio. I was furious. My father said, 'I told you so!'"

Mani could not believe it. His chance to own a radio and to hear beyond the front door of his tiny rural shack... was gone forever.

Or was it?

Mani decided to build his own radio. He collected old television sets and gutted them for parts. He went to the library and read dozens of books on amateur radio. He visited every radio repair shop within hiking distance of his house----and silently watched/questioned the technicians hour after hour after hour.

"One old radio guy lent me what we both thought were enough parts to build a radio -- but we were wrong. Dozens of times, I put it together... and nothing. It was discouraging. I spent all my spare time working on it, soldiering different parts together... testing my circuits. Then I got a new carton of used stuff... transformers and tubes and copper windings... and exactly two years after I started... I heard a faint signal through my headphones! I'd done it. I'd built a radio."

No one has ever built a radio in Mani's village before----or even heard of anyone doing so. Mani immediately became famous. He soon built a transmitter...

"It was supposed to be two watts," he said, "but it was actually a little less than one. But I had my amateur radio license (VU2ITI) by then, and I made a lot of contacts with that crude little x-mitter.."

Suddenly, Mani's world was huge. Every day he talked to sophisticated, educated people from around the world----and was taken seriously by them.

It dawned on him that electronics could be his ticket out of the grinding poverty of his youth.

Mani ceaselessly built radio after radio... all from scratch, with salvaged parts... and soon headed off to college to study electronic theory. Eventually he got his master's degree, a teaching job at the local university, and now, when I meet him, is only a few short months away from receiving his doctorate.

Along the way he invented the 'acoustical ocean rain gauge' which remotely monitors the amount and location of rainfall at sea-----a very important device in drought-stricken India.

Anyway, Mani knows his stuff -- and proved it by returning to Wild Card a couple of days later with the repaired radio... and installing it in such a manner that its output was radically higher than ever!

"How much do I owe you," I asked.

"How 'bout," he said with a sly smile, "the privilege of your company at my home for a traditional Kerala feast?"

How do you repay such a person... a total stranger in a completely foreign land... for such a kindness? For not only fixing something important for you, but also welcoming you into his heart, home and life?

It was a challenge. Since Mani refused all payment, we made a sizable donation to his amateur radio club -- for an upcoming hamfest.

After meeting his lovely wife Sheela and partaking of her wonderful food-----we returned the invitation and had them both aboard Wild Card for a 'typical American meal' of meat-and-mash- potatoes and, of course, hot apple pie.

Learning that Mani was involved with fund-raising for a school for children with 'special needs,' Carolyn and I decided to sponsor a deserving child by paying a year's tuition.

But most of all, we just enjoyed each other's company. Mani was very interested in our voyage, and Carolyn and I were very interested in his life. He stopped by Wild Card almost daily, and introduced us to his entire family, many friends----and even roped me into giving an hour long lecture on marine electronics to his eager students.

One of Mani's teaching assistants was getting engaged, and we had a seat of honor at the day-long party -- during which one hundred people taught us to eat with our hands... amid much laughter and love. (The marriage was an 'arranged' one: the groom's parents had found the bridge via a newspaper advertisement and this was only the third time she and the groom had ever met... always with both sets of parent's present, of course!)

Perhaps the nicest moment came when I held his lovely, laughing daughter Krishna (she's mentally challenged) in my arms and sang 'Sweet Adeline' and 'On Moonlight Bay' and 'Old Man River' to her.

In essence, we became fast friends. We relaxed and luxuriated within each other's presence. Mani showed us his world, we showed him ours. Sure, we mostly talked -- but after awhile the pauses were as comfortable as the conversation.

That's the very best part of sailing around the world... meeting wonderful people like T.K. Mani of Cochin, India.

Is the question.....Does Kid Rock & Sheryl Crow have talent?
Do they make music?

The question should be......What depth have you fallen to with your closed mind? The closed mind that defines talent and music?

Hummmmmmmm, Oscar Meyer? The sad thing about this conflict is that we are losing more soldiers to friendly fire than the enemy.
Well, that's going to happen in an operation of this size anyway.
We should take all the French wine in America, air drop it to the Iraqi troops, let them get drunk and then take control of that area.

Was watching the news this morning, most of the alphabet channels have reported that the pentagon says that the pictures on Al jazeere is of American soldiers and it looks as thought they were executed.
I can think of nothing more to enrage the American people and soldiers than the deliberate executions of captured servicemen or women.

The Tinsel Town Hollywood set live in a dream world encompassed by their own egos and false belief of their importance. They should stick to the only thing they know, acting. No one really gives a rat's ass what they think or cares about their stupid opinions.

After listening to Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld today one thing he said struck home. He said in essence that terrorism does not need provocation. How true that is. Terrorist will strike without any provocation at all.

Terrorist strike at big targets. These big targets are the best bang for the buck. Freedom and power make for a jealous terrorist.
That is why the U.S. will always be a prime target for terrorists.
A terrorist is a lot like a bully.

If a terrorist organization feels the need to strike the U.S.then should we be.....

There will always be losses because of both, but I think it's amazing that we have such a fine military that the casualties from combat are LESS than those from friendly fire.

the information I have came directly from a communications lawyer right here in phoenix. I will not dispute it, nor do I need to provide any further proof. you want it, go find it.

Suffice to say, regardless of the service (CB, HAM, MURS, FRS, etc), we Do you know anything about contractual law? I've got 2 years of it under my belt as part of a course curriculm in Business Administration (required for a degree). Its a lot more than opinion.

Please don't try the old "he failed to provide his own proof, so he's a liar" bit. It won't work. if you want to see it, go find it yourself.
otherwise, all you are doing is spiiting in the wind and trying to imflame a situation.

on the surface, yes. However, having seen this a few times over the years here in phoenix, I can tell you, such things often lead to "on the air feuds" (the more famous of which was the Kingston Vs. Frank Burns and company). Another I can think of back in 1982 actually resulted in a close friends death. so, is it an improvement?

well, therers a funny bit about that. I haven't owned a CB radio in a good long time (one that works anyway). I use ham gear here form 6 meters and up. Last time I was on a piece of 11 meter gear, I got so fed up with all the heat and discontent that I left and never did go back

There are those here in the phoenix area that still blame me for problems they allowed to happen in the first place (and others who actively promoted such problems as part of their psychological games) (see FCC V. Timothy Harold Hoffman, 1995). It wasn't until death threats were made over the air on an autopatch in my name (my call having been "appropriated" by a bootlegger to do just this) that any action was taken.

so... having been there, I can tell you, any action outside of the rules will only do more harm than good.

I wish the FCC would hurry up and do its job with this regard (I guess freebanders, illegal operators are not on the priority list just now given the war in the middle east).

hmmmmmmm. however, in order to change the rules, you have to abide by the rules of the system. otherwise, you will get nowhere.

Based on my own interpretation of the rules, I don't believe it is.
Anyone can operate a part 15 transmitter for experimentation purposes (IOW: the burden of proof would be on the complainer, assuming there was one, to prove the interference was "intentional"). Secondly, part 15 specifically prohibits "harmful" (key word) interference. A part 15 transmitter, interfering with a station, operating outside of the rules of the service, may not be considered "harmful". This based on the FCC's clarification of illegal 10 meter intruders, and how legal ham stations could "interfere" with them, as they are not supposed to be there anyway.
In any case, assuming the illegal station had the cajones to complain to the FCC about the part 15 transmitter interfering with his illegal CB station, and the FCC actually investigated, the worst that would happen would be a warning to stop. The FCC people aren't stupid. They'd understand the mitigating circiumstances, behind what it was the jammer was doing. They may publically have to reprimand you, but off the record, they would most likely understand and support you.

I'd call natural selection, and ridding the gene pool of idiots, to be an improvement.

But once again, how can one "feud" with a jammer? Especially one that sounds like white noise? How can he effectively feud with anyone, when his meter never drops below +20db over S9?

Your story is not unique. There are many hams who tell similar tales.

For you to be the focus of this "trouble" they must've had some reason to target you. Perhaps you let your feeling be known a few too many times?

When you're dealing with idiots, they don't play be the rules of decency and courtesy. If you stoop to their level, then you become no better than they are. If you don't though, you'll never win the battle on their turf. That's why I always believed in covert techniques. I have used jammers against many people in the past. The frustration factor eventually works, and they give up. Remember, usually the most disruptive people are idiots, and they are not smart enough to figure out what you're doing (Unless you're stupid enough to brag about it).

> so... having been there, I can tell you, any action outside of the rules

Small comfort, when the "rules" don't seem important enough, to the people entrusted with enforcing them. People, like the aforementioned Frank Burns, had operated for years without hassle from the FCC. Lack of enforcement only validates their position, and drives them on.

I don't know about you, but at one time, CB was too important to me, to be allowed to be wrecked by the idiots, and our group was not about to allow it to happen. We fought back in our own ways, and for a while it worked well. As the years went on though, the amount of idiots grew beyond our ability to contain them. That's why most of us fled to ham radio.
But as the recipient of RFI, you certainly have the right to fight back. He's interfering with you, so you shouldn't sweat interfering with him...

Ever since the FCC abandoned licensing for the CB service, you could just hear the door closing on CB enforcement. They couldn't justify spending budgetary resources on a service that makes them no money. "Yer buy's your rig, and youse takes your chances".
Unless the interference is on a grand scale, or involves a municipal service, the chances of the FCC interviening are slim.

That's true. However, the rules are fine. We just want someone to enforce them.

Be serious. I would'nt give him the ego boost, that he certainly craves, but does not deserve, by comparing him to someone like Stang.

Twisty is nothing more than a common sociopath, who own life's failings, have driven him to lash out at anyone, who is seen as representative of what it is, he despises the most.

You kidding? They never cancel sporting events! Sports provide a distraction for the public. (I'm not sure what the Academy Awards provides; maybe comic relief?) Besides, whatever would those TV networks do with all the unused time if they did cancel sports? Sign off?

I am reluctant to jump into this discussion--but one point of clarification needs to be made because I think Roger has made ONE serious mistake. The mistake is to lump the illegal activities of "freebanders" into the group defined as CBers. There are really three groups that have been improperly grouped together by Roger.

CBers--Those people operating within the CB band in accordance with the regulations. I encourage them to enjoy their hobby and I will do what I can to help them gain an amateur license and enjoy MY hobby, if that is what they want to do. There are many great amateurs that have come up through the CB ranks. Unfortunately there are relatively few of these legal operators left because they have been driven away by the illegal activities within the band.

Illegal CBers--Those people operating within the CB band but running excessive power. They have given CB a bad name. And have driven away many of the legal CB operators of the past. Their activities--although confined to the CB band has a negative impact on ME because the public often does not differentiate between CB and Amateur Radio. Hams often get blamed for Illegal-CB interference. And this is one thing that has led to the increase of covenants making it very difficult for a ham to be able to put up an antenna in many neighborhoods.

"Freebanders"--CB-LIKE activity, but usually running high power and outside of the authorized CB band. These are the worst offenders and they are NOT CBers. And to refer to them as CBers is a grave injustice to the legal CBers that WOULD make good hams. The "freebanders" are PIRATES. No license and no authorized frequency for operating. I have no use for them and firmly believe that their blatant disregard for the regulations makes them a very poor candidate for amateur radio--a hobby that is generally regarded as being self-policing and law-abiding. The "freebanders" not only impact me with negative public opinion because of the public's lack of differentiation between a "CBer" (freebander) and a ham. But they also impact me directly as they move into the 10M ham band--specifically the CW segment. Making it become more and more difficult for me and all licensed amateurs to enjoy OUR hobby. As PIRATE radio stations, operating outside the law, I think that resources SHOULD be brought to bear upon them to remove them from the air. Here is a brief analogy that might make it easier to relate to my differentiations. Admittedly a bit oversimplified--but it does help to make my point.

CBer = licensed driver who drives (operates) on the roads and highways (frequencies) and generally obeys
the driving laws

HAM = a CDL-licensed driver who drives (operates) on the same roads and highways (frequencies) and has passed a more comprehensive test
and has received more privileges for his efforts such as the right to drive an 18-wheeler

ILLEGAL CBer = a licensed driver who tends to exceed the speed limit, roll through a lot of stop signs, and generally disregard   the rules

FREEBANDER = an unlicensed driver, who totally disregards the laws and the welfare of the public. All reasonable efforts should   be made to remove unlicensed drivers from the public roads
BUT THE AMPS REFLECTOR IS NOT THE PLACE TO DEBATE THESE ISSUES. Although helping unlicensed operators to break the law MIGHT be analogous to aiding and abetting illegal activities, the information provided on the reflector is available from other NON-restricted sources such as engineering textbooks. So it is hard to make a case for banning a specific group.
If the debate of the issues and their remedies IS important then an appropriate reflector should be established. In any case, the debate does not belong on the amps reflector.

More information about the Amps mailing list i disagree with the analogies used here in this thread.....

Yea..why not...mailing list.
As is the norm here, this hammie crying about the freebanders makes many erroneous assumptions and not only does some "lumping in" of his own, but displays myopic views.

Erroneous assumptions: He wrongly assumes the majority of freebanders automatically use more than stock power. He has no way of ascertaining such claims other than his own biases and prejudices.
The mere fact I know many more freebanders who run barefoot (old coots) as opposed to power, illustrate my beliefs on the matter. Triple 5 gang excluded.

Lumping in: He lumps in freebanders as if they were exclusive. His speed to attack is partly to blame for his ignorance. I use cb on a daily basis. To this day, in these parts, many folks remain in touch outside the metropolized area via cb. Fishing boats use it, as do charters. Farms use it, as do certain agricultural, fish, and game commissions. This is all done legally. The poster negates your "average" freebander, if there exists such a thing. Your "average" freebander may be a hammie (above nocode status) enjoys cb and ssb, and escapes to the freeband on occasion. He is not interested in holding court, like some of these lids do themselves, and would have us believe.

I also must point out that among all that open available spectrum, there exist a myriad of dirt-bags on as many frequencies...2 meter comes to mind immediately.....consider the number of frequencies they have to play on, the number of "hotspots" one will find, then compare it to the tiny freeband directly above and below the cb band , which is a plethora of pleasantries, with the exception of the usual given....there are way more folks jammed into a fraction of the frequencies on the freeband compared to the hammies spectrum, yet one is hard-pressed to find hate and discontent, again, with the obvious exception of a certain frequency that today is maintained for that purpose alone. Do the math. Any valid points he may have been close to making were dulled and diluted by poorly selected analogies having no merit other than in the mind of the poster.

There have been many accusations by certain hammies, sharing their social dilemmas and personal problems concerning disagreement with the first amendment. We have all read them. The point I wish to illustrate, is these are the same few who have screamed the loudest at freebanders and DXers, telling them there is a right way and a wrong way to approach such matters. They go on and claim if we wish to DX or freeband, we need petition the law to have it amended or changed, if we do not recognize such.

Yet, when it comes to their tactics, they wish to take another road. They not only do not practice what they preach by not following their own advice, they effectively, intentionally, and selectively attempt to violate the first amendment rights of other citizens. We have all seen them do it.

The law is cut and dried, and a snippet appears below. I suggest these lids that experience such personal spasms over the freedoms the law allows us, "petition that of which they do not agree with". After all, it was their suggestion and their self-offered solution to the plights they suffer that this is the only avenue to follow, as they claim there exists a 'wrong way" and "right way". Reek of stinkin' hypocrisy? You betcha!!!!

From Mcintyre VS. Ohio
Anonymous pamphlets, leaflets, brochures and even books have played an important role in the progress of mankind. Great works of literature have frequently been produced by authors writing under assumed names. Despite readers' curiosity and the public's interest in identifying the creator of a work of art, an author generally is free to decide whether or not to disclose her true identity. The decision in favor of anonymity may be motivated by fear of economic or official retaliation, by concern about social ostracism, or merely by a desire to preserve as much of one's privacy as possible. Whatever the motivation may be, at least in the field of literary endeavor, the interest in having anonymous works enter the marketplace of ideas unquestionably outweighs any public interest in requiring disclosure as a condition of entry. Accordingly, an author's decision to remain anonymous, like other decisions concerning omissions or additions to the content of a publication, is an aspect of the freedom of speech protected by the First Amendment. U.S. Supreme Court, McIntyre v. Ohio (1995)

NEWSGROUP (March 21) - Pinpoint strikes targeted a key Twistedhed facility as AKC forces seized important ground in rec.radio.cb.

If Twistedhed survived, AKC officials hoped the surprise attack at least would leave him distrustful of his inner circle and suspecting betrayal by one of his advisers, leaving him less able to command.

An important part of the plan laid out by the war's commander, Gen. OldKeycollector, was to use AKC special forces to shut down sensitive facilities such as auctions of keyclown gear and suspected amplifier and export radio sites.

In alt.radio.pirate, just across the rec.radio.cb border, keyclowns watched and in some cases helped as AKC Marines rigged chains to giant portraits of Twistedhed and tore them down. Keyclowns mostly hid from the occupying force. Some patted their stomach to beg for food.

Gen. OldKeycollector, pumping his fist in the air, led a milling crowd of citizens in chants of ''AKC! AKC! AKC!!'' A young man in a headscarf told Gurfein: ''No Twistedhed. Busch!''

I dunno about the bunker buster, but if folks start dancing in the street ... as they did after 911 ... please, please give us a reason. Yeah, try a chemical attack. Then pull out the troups, open a couple of silos, and launch. Next?

The film clip showed 3 people that appeared to have been shot in the head. The really enraging thing was the damn diaper head with the grin on his face. So much for Al Jazeere just covering the news as they claim.

Sad to say, but a chemical attack is probably whats going to happen. After We take control of Baghdad saddam and the rest of his worthless camel jocks will launch a chemical attack against the city.
Killing not only our troops but a bunch of civilians.
This is turning out like another Viet Nam, politicians telling the military what they can and can't hit. If we want to win this war they need to turn the military loose, blow the hell out of everything and apologize after its over.

Hardly. It's just that I have little regard for a liar, a BS artist, and a general troll, who tries to play the part of the "wounded victim", when taken to task for his transgressions. In fact, he's nothing more than a person suffering from Anti-Social Personality disorder. In his mind, he's right and the world's crazy.

Your APD is showing again. The first amendment was created to give individuals a voice, and to let that voice be heard. It was not created to allow slithering low-lives, that don't have the guts to show their faces, an anonymous method of subverting the established order, while escaping retribution, nor was it intended to allow people to conduct themselves in a manner that is inconsistent with civility and proper manners.
In other words, you can't act like an idiot, and then hide behind the first amendement, as some sort of justification.

Like those clueless anti-war protesters. While they have the right to protest the war, they don't have the right to endanger public safety by blocking traffic. There is a fine line between "peaceable assembly" and "disturbing the peace".

I also find it amusing, in an ironic way, how people who are supposedly protesting a war, sometimes resort to violent actions. So much for their core beliefs.

But I digress......

You have something to say? Good, say it. But don't expect the rest of us to take you seriously or even consider what you say at all, if you hide behind a fake name. That kills your credibility. Anyone with a serious position, who's committed to their goal, is not afraid to reveal themselves, for open debate, and to counter serious challenges. Those who hide behind their anonymity, are mentally weak, and not truly committed to their objectives, or are more interested in creating chaos, rather than pushing for true social change. A true crusader welcomes the challenge, and looks to opposition with excitement.

Now go back under your rock.

Another Vietnam? After only 6 days? Surely you jest. Are people really so clueless about the realities of war, that they expect this to be like a some sort of video game? War is hell. People will die. It will likely take a month or two to accomplish our goals. But what other major war, has this country been involved in, that took less time? How long was Vietnam? 13 years? WWII? 4 years? Don't complain after only 6 days.

We are deliberately mounting a precision attack, to show that we indeed care about the civilians, and that we are only after Saddam and his minions. The last thing we want is to kill innocent civilians. That will really bite us in the butt, as far as future mid-east relations.
If we pull this off, and oust Saddam, and help with humanitarian aid, and rebuild their country, and help to install a more "compassionate" leader, we might win a few brownie points from them. Otherwise, it will be too easy to paint us as imperialistic aggressors.

Surely you jest, I was refering to the "politicians" telling the military how to do their job. Thanks to Johnson every North Vietnamese was perfectly safe in a out house. I'm not complaining about the 6 days, I can see this turning out just like Viet Nam. WWII was more than 4 years, but that war was fought like a war. Where the goal was to win, not look like the good guys with their white hats that never killed a non-combatent.
Why do you need to show you care about non-combatents? They don't care if we are there, in fact most of them would cut our throats if they had the chance. All those innocent civilians are going to be the ones biting us in the butt. Why do you want to win brownie points with them? Where do you get the idea they have noting but comtempt for every american? Have you been over there, or is this from watching TV?

you know what the answer to this is don't you??? the backdoor.......the kurds damn it, the kurds........think about it......they have everything to gain and nothing to lose....it is in their best interest.....they hate sadaam as much as we do.......they are not arabs......they are not moslems..........think about it......and yet we screwed them the last time on this deal.......maybe they will forgive us...........watch the north..........watch the backdoor........they keep talking about 3 id and 1 mef.........but watch the backdoor.......no one is talking about it......are they??? perhaps that is where sadaam's weakness is.....because he too , is watching the heavy amour as well. he too thinks the main attack will come from the south............just a thought.........

Sadly, this thread has now turned into childish pranks with a single individual posting using half a dozen names. And that is something I have no tolerance for, so I'm out of this discussion.

how can you say this is turning out like vietnam. are you blind.
vietnam went from the late 50s into the early 70s with thousands killed or missing and thousands of pows. they should allow more unrestricted warfare but wait for the first chemical attack then there will be hell to pay.

Not with my experience. You can call him directly, and he resolve any problem. If anything, I have experienced the exact opposite. And many others have to. He is very honest. My Galaxy CB went out of alignment, and he realigned it. No questions asked. If I sent it to Galaxy, it would take up to 8 weeks. He had it back in less than a week, and 4 of those days were shipping.

If you want to tell about crooks, look up Copper. They sell broken CB for parts at up to $75. What a rip. They also don't want any unit back for warranty repair.

What do you think we will do if they use chemical weapons? Nuke them? Or just keep on like we are with our soldiers hands tied. You need to read up on your history. There quite a few similarities.
So what do you monitor in the rec radio groups? I'm quite really? what about parts A and B of part 15? those that stipulate that:

a. this device may not create, or have cause to create, harmful interference
b: this device must accept any interference, even if it causes harmful operation to the device.

Jamming is, by definition, harmful interference. rehardless of the part rules you build the device under, its intent is still to "plug the ears"
of the offending party.

well, considering things, I have a lot to lose (like my ticket). so, I will abide the rules. if he wants to cause problems, he's got 12 other neighbors to deal with (and they aren't near so friendly).

besides, my room mates here also have in interest in this as they are also affected by this nutcase living behind me here. they have a security cam setup because we've seen some recent damage to the car and some missing tools (turns out it wasn't him, but its still not a bad idea to have security around).

well, we've all made our mistakes at one time or another. However, I digress, using a part 15 device to intentionally jam (use the excuse of "experimentation") I am committing a breach of those rules, plus they may also involve other specified parts of the 1934 communications act.

The problem is, the idiots outnumber the sensible ones by more than 10 to
1. They also breed like rabbits. In any case, 11 meters is a dying hobby.
I'll give it 10 years and most everyone will be moving to personal communicators like MURS/FRS or even the net via wireless devices.

part 95 still exists and is still enforcable. Regardless of what the FCC did, or did not do with regards to liscensing the 11 meter band, those rules are still in force.

I was talking about from the point that America joined WWII.

Vietnam was a political war. Iraq is not. We clearly want to win, and we WILL. We have been making huge inroads toward our objectives. Saddam has not been seen since our first sneak attack, and it is doubtful he is in good enough shape to be seen.

> Where the > goal was to win, not look like the good guys with their white hats

In case you haven't looked we are not exactly viewed as "the good guys" by much of the rest of the world, and a fair amount of clueless freeze-dried hippies in this country. If we simply blow away anything that moves, it will paint us in a very dark light, that will damage our credibility with the rest of the world, for a long time to come.

> Why do you need to show you care about non-combatents? They > don't care if we are there, in fact most of them would cut our throats > if they had the chance.

That depends on who you talk to. Many Iraqis are in favor of us ousting Saddam. They're just in fear for their lives, if they publically express that thought, before Saddam's control is removed. We let them down before, in 1991, and many Iraqis paid with their lives. They don't trust us yet. Once they feel that we're in this for the long haul, you will see more groups of Iraqi's revolting.

> All those innocent civilians are going to be > the ones biting us in the butt. Why do you want to win brownie points > with them?

Not just them, but the rest of the world. If we truly are in the position of "policeman of the free world" then we have to show that our intentions are altruistic, and genuine. It's far too easy to be cynical and claim that we're only in it for oil, or such.

> Where do you get the idea they have noting but comtempt > for every american?

Why do you think they have contempt for America? Because they see us as only looking out for our own selfish (From their perspective) interests. If we can show that we actually CARE about human rights, then this will do much to correct that contempt.

> Have you been over there, or is this from > watching TV?

So you are of the opinion that no one, who hasn't actually been there, is entitled to form an viewpoint of their own? While it is certainly true that the major media outlets tend to slant their coverages to serve their own agendas, and to spread propaganda, of whatever government is housing them, if you take many different sources, boil away the fat, and only look at those "facts" that are common, you can get a fairly realistic picture of what is happening.

Unless all of those said neighbors are CBers, they wouldn't even know there was a jammer. Not since the 70's, has there been a high enough density of CBers in one neighborhood, that this would be a problem. If that were the case, then I would agree that this may not be the best solution. But bear in mind, the range of a part 15 device, is going to be less than 1/2 mile. As an effective jamming signal, the range is probably best measured in yards.

I think it's something along the lines of: "Malcontents of a feather, should stick together, and to cite the works of older, dead malcontents, as validation."

Who's next, Abby Hoffman? Ira Einhorn? David Koresh? There ceratinly no shortage of those anti-social types who cannot "go with the flow" of the established society.

There's a thin line between evolution and revolution.

Is this what you are talking about?

=======
Sec. 15.5 General conditions of operation.
.....
(b) Operation of an intentional, unintentional, or incidental radiator is subject to the conditions that no harmful interference is caused....
=======

The issue is the disagreement on the definition of "harmful interference". Your claim is that...

>Jamming is, by definition, harmful interference. rehardless of the part >rules you build the device under, its intent is still to "plug the ears"
>of the offending party.

...but the FCC has already defined the term:

=======
Sec. 15.3 Definitions.
.....
(m) Harmful interference. Any emission, radiation or induction that endangers the functioning of a radio navigation service or of other safety services or seriously degrades, obstructs or repeatedly interrupts a radiocommunications service operating in accordance with this chapter.

=======

Notice the phrase, "...operating in accordance with this chapter".
That means only a legally operating station can experience "harmful interference". A keyclown has no legal recourse against interference from a Part 15 device. End of story.

I bought a base from pacetronics with no problems. STAY AWAY FROM COPPER. I bought a 2950 from them that went DOA in four months. My E-mails now go unanswered now that my big 30 day warranty is up. I wouldn't buy a jumper from those crooks.

Yeah. From what I can tell, these coils do not like extreme temperature changes in cars. I had an external freq counter on mine, and over the course of this winter, it drifted slowly, a little each day. And since I drive a ton all day, and heat the car up several times a day, the coils didn't like it going from 10 degrees, to about 60, back to 10, back to 60. Now, the weather is warm, and they have been stable. When the temperature hits 80-90, it will probably drift the other direction. These coils only require the ever so slightest expansion/contraction, to go off.

I also did a bit of asking around to confirm this. Mobile used as bases don't have this problem, and people in warmer climates don't have nearly the drift I do.

And that has been my point from the beginning. How can you cause "harmful interference" to a station that is not abiding by the rules of its own service? By choosing to operate illegal power levels, you basicallly give away any protection that part 95 or 15 would provide you as a legitimate service station.

I realize that this is a small loophole and many armchair communication's lawyers will nit-pick it. But all that aside, in all practicality, if the only person receiving the interference is the illegally operating CBer, who's going to complain? If that same station can operate above the law, with seeming immunity, why should anyone be concerned about a low power transmitter, that only interferes with one (illegal) station?
If the chances are slim, that the FCC will cite you for freebanding or operating with illegal power, just how great would you think your chances would be for running a part 15 "jammer"?

RE: Communications Power Inc., Model CP-2000

I have the above CB Radio and factory service manual.
However, I need specific data regarding the CPU chip and how it is wired on the bottom side of the circuit board.

Someone performed surgery on my radio, with intent of modifying the frequency reange. I want to return this radio to it's original factory stock condition. In order for me to do this, I need to locate someone who has the same radio and is willing to take a detailed picture of a circuit board.

Removing the top cover and you will see three boards. The board in the middle is of particular interest to me. Directly under the channel selector is a large IC chip, identified as:
MM5221EHW/N, the EHW/N may vary in production.

Remove the bottom cover and locate the same IC chip. It is the only one that has 24 pins(two rows of 12 pins each). It is also the one located closest to the front panel. Looking at this 24 pin IC chip from the bottom of the circuit board, the upper left is pin #1(counting to the right to pin #12), the lower right is pin #13(counting to the left to pin #24).

Please take note of pin #13 through #17. This is where someone did some cutting on the circuit board traces. Rather having someone explain how and where these pins are connected to each other, a closeup picture would resolve my problems. I'm sure you have heard the phrase that "A picture is worth a thousand words". Well, that certainly true in this case.

Any help that you can provide will be of great value to me. I will be glad to pay for whatever postage is necessary for the information regarding my problem. I already have the service manual for this radio, but there are some noticable printing errors, such as readability and pin indentity.

They used the european FM Frq's. They also require a license to work those frq's.

That's from my personal observations from being at Al Jaber AB, Kuwait.

Hi Ray,

I used to service CPI Equipment way back when... The chip you mention is the National Semi Prom which has the channel selector "map" table.

Someone tried to mod the radio when the prom didn't need anything additional done to it. Just the right switches and jumpers...

I don't have the address lines handy, but there is a guy in the Concord Walnut Creek CA area selling the service manuals on Ebay. I've bought stuff from him in the past, his copies of the CPI 2000 manual are well worth the money. Just do a search for CPI in the Radio Equipment Section of Ebay. His 2000 copies should be readable. I don't have a 2000 anymore, but I probably have some 2500 and 300/400 models around. I'd have to find one and open it up to give you the address line routing..

Hope you are able to find what you need.
cheers

Nope, nonsense. There are no clipped components inside, and I checked for myself. They don't clip for modulation mods. Secondly, all the clipping mods I have seen online for the Galaxy, were not done to my radio. Thirdly, and get raves from truckers telling me how loud I am, and also from the sidebanders. And since most clipping causes warbling on SSB, I don't have that problem.

>they start that frequency drift
>crap..........

Galaxies have been known for that. And the alignment is fairly simple. The drift is caused mostly from the weather changes.

>that is a radio that is to be sold and not

Nonsense. The radio works great. You have no clue how the radio works. Please don't make shit up.

>it is nothing but a lemon and pain in the ass and a >overpriced one at that......

Actually, lemons don't work. Mine works well. And the drift problem is far less severe in recent weather we have had. In fact, there has virtually been no drift since the weather has warmed.

Now, if you want to know what I did to that radio, I will tell you. I unlocked the clarifier. And I added Schottky Barrier Diodes for ANL and noise improvements. That is it.

Gilliland offered his own incompetence with:
Notice the phrase, "...operating in accordance with this chapter". That means only a legally operating station can experience "harmful interference". A keyclown has no legal recourse against interference from a Part 15 device. End of story.

>And that has been my point from the >beginning.

You're a liar.
In the beginning, you gave advice for INTENTIONAL intereference to a station that was not defined as illegal. That you ASSume all cb stations are illegal is your handicap that not many share.

> How can you cause "harmful interference" to >a station that is not

You can't,,,which is why you made a desperate grab for a loophole when it was pointed out your advice was not only illegal, but piss-poor advice for a hammie to be giving, period. It's behavior akin to no-codes who suffer lifer-tech syndrome,,but coming frm anupperclassmen not unlike yourself merely illustrates the lid status ingrained in your miserable world and psyche.

> By choosing to operate illegal power levels..,

,,,,the subject you desperately now switched to gives you a stark chance to absolve yourself from the ludicrous and self-exposing poor advice you gave for someone to break the law. Hypocrite. Lid.

Your advice to build an intentional transmitter to interfere with another service is illegal once put into action. That you personally feel the cb MAY have been illiegal is irrelevant,,,you really need to learn to let go of those personal feelings,,they;re partly responsible for your oppression and deficits in communication..

Point taken, and to his prose I will respond with exerpts from "History and Rhymes of the Lost Battalion" by 'Buck Private' McCollum (a British soldier in WWI):

"Gassed"

I've gone all day in sort of a daze,
Have felt the horror of death,
Don't mind the fight 'cause know I'm right,
But I'm worried about my breath.

It feels like a ball of red-hot fire,
Turned loose from hell's own door,
There seems to be no relief for me,
It's hurting me more and more.

I can feel myself go crumpling,
And fall in a sudden heap,
Slowly the truth dawns upon me,
"Gassed last night in my sleep."

Doctor sayd I'll pull thru all right,
Will be good for a few more years,
I'm thinking of my mother dear,
And I just can't keep back the tears.

I've paid the debt that manhood brings,
To make an ideal stand true,
If perhaps I forget how to smile,
Remember, 'twas all for you.

****

"We Are Coming Back"

It's the coming back I hate worst of all,
It grates on my nerves worse than gall;
"A wreck," they will say, when I land today,
With sighs of pity they'll turn away.

With empty sleeve and my face a mess,
I'm no more than half a man, I guess,
And it's tearing my heart slowly apart,
And I wonder how I'll make a new start.

I left these shores not so long ago,
As fit as any man who would go;
I held my head high as could be,
Was proud to fight for Liberty.

For it isn't so hard to go in and fight,
When you know your couase is more than right;
And it isn't so hard for men to die,
Hardest of all is to hear folks sigh.

To help me forget, don't sympathize,
I can't get cheery on long-drawn sighs,
Just take and shake my one good hand,
Then I'll know that YOU understand.

>Your APD is showing again.

Still insist on discussing my personal ways in a vertical positon... LOL! Tsk Tsk.....I'm a heterosexual male, Hall, and have no interest, despite your self-incluson of inserting yourself into such intimacies of my world. No wonder you get along with wa3moj and defended n8 with vigor,,y'all share the same sick sex perversions.

Well, that certainly was a blow to your ego.
Thats exactly what it as created for..dissent and criticisms that phony purists such as yourself consider the demise of society...HAHAHHAHA!
And anonymity among the first amendment go hand in hand, as the Thomas Payne Papers show,,,I suggest you move to a country that has the views you hold dear, as your flowing and frothing ignorance concerning published anonymity is against everything freedom of speech stands for..again,,read the Payne Papers, and his published yet unidentified authors..some of those men helped shape the country...to see you take issue with the exact actions our forefathers founded this country on serves several purposes,,it not only illustrates your self-purported education in such matters such as the history of media in the US, it also shows your temerity of disagrement with views other than that of what you share. That you know nothing of Payne, except that you prefer the opposite of such, has me grinning like that cheshire cat, ear to ear...you have a tendency to such do things when you get on an angry roll of ignorance......

>In other words, you can't act like an idiot, and >then hide behind the first amendement, as >some sort of justification.

Sure one can. there is no law against acting like an idiot, or you would be doing life. That one can be an anonymous idiot that somehow manages to be your Jim Henson is YOUR problem and dilemma, Davey, no matter how loud you scream, cry, lie, and obfuscate.

>Like those clueless anti-war protesters.

What arrogance....last I checked,,,over one billion people were against this war worldwide....there is your problem manifesting again,,not only is it with OUR society, but the world in general is clueless...LOL! You are exactly why the world views us as they do..you are pompous, arrrogant, ignorant, and unwilling to listen to any expressed views except your own myopic views. That you further retard your position through telling others their views are somehow less "correct" than your own, merely broadens my grin.

>While they have the right to protest the war, >they don't have the right to endanger public >safety by blocking traffic. There is a fine line >between "peaceable assembly" and >"disturbing the peace".

All over the place,,,you sound like a speed freak.

>I also find it amusing, in an ironic way, how >people who are supposedly protesting a war, >sometimes resort to violent actions. So much >for their core beliefs.

You find that somehow more ironic than you and your lids stated preferences for violence against internet strangers for merely exercising their first amendment that you already stated you feel should not extend to those expressing dissent and information you are not capable of comprehending? <g>

>But I digress......
>You have something to say? Good, say it. But >don't expect the rest of us to take you >seriously or even consider what you say at all, >if you hide behind a fake name.

I don't hide at all. Several have met me and know me fairly well. That YOU ask and do not receive personal info on me, such as my name, age, employment, address, family members, education, and many other things you obsess on and have inquired about, does not qualify you to use the word "we" in any manner whatsoever..it has been demonstrated time and time again you have nothing in common with cbers present, nor the hammies, no the majority..most have ostracized you for your choice of self-alienation via lid-dom. That you redundantly attempt self-inclusion, as far as inserting your name among real techs and half-hoping and half ass-expecting thatq your name would somehow be uttered among those you mentioned, is plenty roof of your sagging ego in dire need of a boost by those you admire most...otherwise,,you would not have mentioned them, and you damn sure wouldn't continue obsessing on me in a vertical position..LOL!

>That kills your credibility.
Only to communists like yourself...read the Payne papers and the history of them, then come back here and cry some more ignorant crocodile tears concerning that of which you are not permitted to have, like a spoiled child that can't get their way. What it "kills", is your curiosity factor as a legitimate concern..bwaaahaaaa!...LOL!

>Anyone with a serious position, who's >committed to their goal, is not afraid to reveal >themselves, for open debate, and to counter >serious challenges.

And therein lies another of your dilemmas......I have no stated goal, and most of us don't, unlike your ignorant self who takes this recreation as some sort of crusade, but ends up utilizing these pages as a way for your daughter to look back and be embarrassed that she was ever kin to you.
_

>Those who hide behind their anonymity, are >mentally weak,

The "mentally weak" is those, again, such as yourself, who haven't a clue about the history of anonymous media. That you take the opposite position of all the internet security specialists, and that you disregard the advice of privacy advocates worldwide, once again, has me doing the perpetual grin...I sure don't remember hearing or seeing your name anywhere in the public eye concerning such endeavors and paid information personell.....could it possibly be because your ignorance precedes your reputation, along with all your defcits? Maybe..but it's usually because you haven't a clue what you talking of......

(Chuckle) The honorables among hammies have given it some thought and have found those with the impotence and lust-for a bit of power, any power, are responsible for most of the vitriol on this group,,,,,,,most of it from yourself, the wannabe moderator,,LOL..in other words..LID Bucsh, your problems are within your deep-resented anger you harbour from traumatic childhood abuses.

Most mature folks possess capabilities far beyond what you know exist. The communicate with no deficits, unlike yourself. They have no interest in censorship.

Mature folks don't cry or worship in public that which they are enamoured with. Hey, it's not me, the entire group has been making fun of your inabilities of self-control..LOL...just like I pointed out years ago....you don't play with a full deck...the wheel chair is polished and your tooth is brushed, but you still smell..LOL!

Repeated crying can work for babes in their mother's arms, butI'm not your mother and have no interest in coddling you, despite the way your hurl yourself at me. Nevertheless, crying is not the effective tool that eludes you for manipulation...it merely reinforces your weaknesses, highlights your inabilities, and illustrates your deficits, impotences, and personal challenges you have not yet learned to overcome. Crying to the publisher about the information gained in a book or magazine because you can not comprehend his position is extremely childish.

  Most of this is pretty simple for those not suffering from communication deficits... the internet is, and has always, been borne of unfettered, free access of information. The internet has swollen to astronomical proportions because many folks, for he first time, can communicate about anything they select. That lids like yourself wish to take away that right because you claim my mere words are too much for your multi-challenged self to deal with on a rational and intelligent level, tells me everything I say, everything I do, is not only 100% correct, but extremely and profoundly effective. Thanks for the daily words of encouragement that serve as the reminder of my effectiveness.,

Dr. Smartass sez he's gonna read this on CB. I say more wattage to him.

Better have yer defibrillators handy, antikeyclowns. Heh heh heh.

i sing of Olaf glad and big
by e.e. cummings (1931)

i sing of Olaf glad and big whose warmest heart recoiled at war:
a conscientious object-or his wellbeloviï¿½d colonel(trig westpointer most succinctly bred) took erring Olaf soon in hand;

but--though an host of overjoyed noncoms(first knocking on the head him)do through icy waters roll that helplessness which others stroke with brushes recently employed anent this muddy toiletbowl, while kindred intellects evoke allegiance per blunt instruments-- Olaf(being to all intents a corpse and wanting any rag upon what God unto him gave) responds,without getting annoyed
"I will not kiss your fucking flag" straightway the silver bird looked grave (departing hurriedly to shave)

but--though all kinds of officers (a yearning nation's blueeyed pride) their passive prey did kick and curse until for wear their clarion voices and boots were much the worse, and egged the firstclassprivates on his rectum wickedly to tease by means of skilfully applied bayonets roasted hot with heat-- Olaf(upon what were once knees) does almost ceaselessly repeat
"there is some shit I will not eat"

our president,being of which assertions duly notified threw the yellowsonofabitch into a dungeon,where he died

Christ(of His mercy infinite) i pray to see;and Olaf,too preponderatingly because unless statistics lie he was more brave than me:more blond than you.

Not only that, but I later learned to do an alignment sent to me by Galaxy Tech support. What I found out was the clarifier pot itself was not linear. The mechanical center of the at 12:00, was not the electrical center. It more play downward, then it had upwards. So if the vendor did align it with it at 12:00, he couldn't have known that when the procedure tells you to put it at 12:00.

Now, when I did my own alignment just to practice it, I found the actuall pot center was about 1:00, and that gave it even adjust upwards and downwards. This radio is known to be an great AM radio, and a so-so SSB radio, because of the drift. I don't see how Pace would be responsible for that.

>Is that bad service?

Of course not. And the best thing is, this guy is hands on. You can call him whenever you want and talk to him. He tells you what to avoid. The first thing he told me when I got back into this was, to avoid a newer Cobras. Even though he sells them, he recommends others first. And like Steve said, he had my radio back in a week. Four of those days were just shipping time, and 1 day was a Sunday. So he gave me 2 day response.

I do not understand what it is this man known under the name supports of "twistedhead". On the one hand, he is complains about the free speech against him what is given by another individual. On the other hand, he speaks in favour of the free speech by himself. I would say the man is downwards charged with contradictions and inversions. The insults and the argument is the foreground constantly. What is true is that the marks of man for a situation unpeaceful here and the enemies of him take place more in a number like days of the calendar.

Yeah, in about 2 days. His shipping was a bit high, but I saw why. The thing was insured and had confirmation tagged to it. So, it was a good deal, and very quick service. I will definitely buy from him again.

I will admit I have jammed a few illegal op's before , remember those old rc controllers just change the crystal in it to the channel of interestand turn it on have fun experimenting with part 15 devices.

My Maycom (I know) AH27 is playing up.

When you turn it on you get the nice beep to say its on but that's it...
NOTHING.

I know its not the speaker as it beeps so im stuck.

I wondered if anyone had any tips or tricks before I spend loads on repairs.

THANKS

the problem is, when a part 15 device is used SPECIFICALLY to interfere with a part 95 service, then it becomes a problem on 2 services (and both sets of rules then apply. so, even if it meets part 15 rules, if it causes interference to a part 95 device, it violates both sets of rules.

The funny thing is, it doesn't matter if the "keyclown" is legal or not, causing him interference by virtue of his illegality is no excuse.

As it is, the local police were forced to pay him a visit about 2 hours ago in any case. Seems his foul mouth was heard in at least 2 homes where there are children. He is now off the air for the remainder of the night (and probably the weekend judging by the fight he put up verbally when the cops arrived).

Secs. 15-3 and 15-5 state that a Part 15 device may not cause interference to any authorized service. Therefore, if no interference is caused to any authorized service (and all other requirements are met), it is absolutely impossible for the Part 15 device to be illegal. IOW, if the station being interfered with does not comply with Part 95 (or 97, or even 15) then no rules have been violated by the device causing the interference.

And maybe you missed this, but if a device meets Part 15 rules it necessarily cannot be violating them. OTOH, the station being interfered with, if violating Part 95 and/or 97, is also violating Part 15. Chew on that for a while.

>The funny thing is, it doesn't matter if the "keyclown" is legal or not, >causing him interference by virtue of his illegality is no excuse.

Part 15 deals with any EM radiator, intentional or not. That's why your computer and monitor are supposed to be Part 15 compliant. Now if anyone is going to complain to the FCC about interference from a Part 15 compliant device, operating intentionally or not, one of the prerequisites to prosecuting that complaint is to prove that the service being interfered with has legal grounds to complain. If that station is operating illegally they do not have legal standing.

Let's try an analogy: Suppose your garage gets broken into once every week. So you finally get smart and install a burgler alarm. Does the crook have legal standing to complain to the police that the burgler alarm is interfering with his burglary activities? Of course not! There is no law preventing you from taking any legal action to protect your peace and property from illegal activity.

>As it is, the local police were forced to pay him a visit about 2 hours >ago in any case. Seems his foul mouth was heard in at least 2 homes where >there are children. He is now off the air for the remainder of the night >(and probably the weekend judging by the fight he put up verbally when the Federal laws are one issue, local laws are another. Anyone that attempts to deliberately interfere with a keyclown (or any other service, legal or not) may have other problems, such as causing a private nuisance, harassment, libel, etc. That is for the local courts and lawmakers to decide. It may even go to a federal court under another jurisdiction if the offence involves such things as racial or religious harassment, terrorist threats, etc. If that happens then you can find yourself in really deep doo-doo.

Yes I am. We have used this technique against some of the more "chronic" idiots in our area, back in the day. It's fairly effective, and it doesn't involve criminal trespass, or destruction of property, like other methods like cutting coax or antenna removal.

It's called disturbing the peace, and as one local in my area found out a few years back, it is a citable offense. That's one way the locals can win the war against rampant illegal CBers. If the FCC can't/won't enforce technical rules violations, the locals can intervene on more "civil" grounds.

Don't feel bad. Most normal people find the incessant rambings of a sociopathic mind, to be a bit confusing. If you sift through the words, and filter out the sophomoric attempt at the dramatic use of hyperbole and adjectives, what is left, is nothing more than an abused sole crying "Someone look at me".

And you have underscored the real irony of his whole situation.

But this is not about someone's rights, nor the core beliefs of the first amendment. Rather, it's about someone, who cannot play by the rules of society, somehow trying to provide testament (however poorly) that his anti-social behavior is somehow justified, and even encouraged, by the first amendment.

"See, I, twistedhed, have the right to be an idiot. And if you don't agree with me, you have a communication's deficit."

Abbie Hoffman -- anarchist with serious drug problems, arrested and convicted of numerous crimes (the Chicago 7 riot conviction was overturned on a technicality), jumped bail and hid for many years to avoid prosecution for cocaine, then committed suicide;

Ira Einhorn -- smashed the skull of his girlfriend, crammed her body into a steamer trunk, then ran away to France (strange how they fought so hard to keep him....);

David Koresh -- failed rock star and self-proclaimed 'messiah' who attempted the murder of his dead girlfriend's son, stockpiled illegal weapons, abused children, used deadly force to obstruct a federal warrant, then barbecued 80 members of his flock.

Are you actually defending the actions of any of these people? Maybe you better check your facts before you accuse someone else of ignorance, Twisty.

And if you actually spent a little time and effort to understand what cloak of superiority -- which, by the way, desperately needs mending.

This guy was lonely and so he decided life would be more fun if he had a pet. So he went to the pet store and told the owner that he wanted to buy an unusual pet. After some discussion, he finally bought a centipede, which came in a little white box to use for his house.

He took the box back home, found a good location for the box, and decided he would start off by taking his new pet to the bar to have a drink.

So he asked the centipede in the box, Would you like to go to Frank's with me and have a beer? But there was no answer from his new pet. This bothered him a bit, but he waited a few minutes and then asked him again, How about going to the bar and having a drink with me? But again, there was no answer from his new friend and pet. So he waited a few minutes more, thinking about the situation. He decided to ask him one more time; this time putting his face up against the centipede's house and shouting, Hey, in there! Would you like to go to Frank's place and have a drink with me?

Scroll down!!!!!!!!!!!! YOU ARE GOING TO LOVE THIS!

A little voice came out of the box:.....

I heard you the first time! I'm putting on my fucking shoes.

How did you ascertain their illegality? Nevertheless, Herr lid-Hall made no qualification of an "illegal" op when he gave the advice to jam. Highly indicative...:)

Yes I am. We have used this technique against some of the more "chronic" idiots in our area, back in the day. It's fairly effective, and it doesn't involve criminal trespass, or destruction of property, like other methods like cutting coax or antenna removal.

I really hate posting this....But it has come to this...

To the imbred moron from the Detroit area, that has been ringing my cellphone, well, Buddy your time has come... you made the fetal mistake of forgetting to Block your Caller ID last night. I got your number boy... 1-313-962-7331...

I see that it's a unlisted number, Well, If there's anyone in here that is good at obtaining this sort of information... please feel free to e-mail it to me, at k8cpa@yahoo.com and I'll be glad to inform the owner of the line... me thinks it's some idiot calling from a business, and they think they're being funny... tis okay... I've got your number now, in fact, I called it today... seems it's a FAX Machine or an answering Machine with no message...

1-313-962-7331.....anyone wanna see what you can find?

Thanks,

You need to be more specific about the model #.

I have in my lap:

TRC-422 R/S CAT # 21-1531 PLL: uPD2814
TRC-422A R/S CAT # 21-1503 PLL: LC7130

They have different boards inside. They both cover 26.965 to 27.405 in 10 KHz steps skipping the five "A" channels. They are AM only units with a power output of 4 watts RF.

Be realistic and specific in what you ask for.

The LC7130 chip can't be modified. (Loop crystals maybe?) The uPD2814 should use the Expo 100 "N" kit. This chip is like the 2816 in some Cobras and the 2824 in the PC-122.

Vinnie, go grab a PC-122, get it tuned up to factory specs, attach it to a TS-250 to it, run the amp on low, and talk forever! My pair is like the Energizer Bunny. Keeps going and going...

An older Grant or 148, unclipped and factory spec tuned, would probably work OK as well. The larger, heavier radio would get more stress then the smaller 122. YMMV.

My first CB. Has no real value. Does work well. Only keeping it because my father bought it for me when I was a kid. Ebay value is $10-20. Also, I have read it doesn like a power mod.

Scott, Cheesewhiz is talking out his ass. There is nothing wrong with the Galaxy. Is it the best radio? No. It is a exellent AM radio, and a so-so SSB radio. That is no secret. It certainly is not sophisticated. He makes it sound like it's a microprocessor controlled Lincoln, which it is not.

Just a standard, run of the mill, USA specification CB radio.
Amplitude Modulation (AM) only.

Since it is not FM, or on EU frequencies, good luck in using it.

Too old for an FCCID. It's not on the RS website, either.

Shows "FCC DATA: 21-1503" on the back plate.

He was never absolved. The conviction was overturned because of problems with jury selection. The option to retry him was always available, but they would have had to jump through the hoops all over again, complete with the despicable courtroom behavior, but also including the classic double-jeopardy stall tactic. Try educating yourself with facts not sourced from pro-drug propoganda campaigns.

So far you have proved that you have absolutely no clue what you are talking about. There were many true activists that worked within the system and harbored no alterier motives. Their activities were done legally, with honor, integrity, and respect for the lives that were sacrificed for the rights they exercised. Although Abbie Hoffman was an interesting and charismatic personality, his intentions were never as altruistic as some (dopeheads) would like you to believe.

Hardly. GW is no intellectual giant, and neither was Henry Ford. But give credit where credit is due as both of them had the wits to surround themselves with some of the best and brightest people in their respective careers (with a few exceptions: whoever is in charge of this military campaign is grossly incompetent, and GW's economic advisors eat paint chips). Overall, I think he is doing a pretty good job of cleaning up the mess left by Clinton.

You took up the issue first, but in your classic Twisty style you didn't understand the issue before injecting yourself into the conversation with your paranoid rant. You probably still don't understand Hall's comment, but as soon as you do I'm sure you will try

There was also a receiving tube number used in color demodulator service in tv sets that was similar to the 7360. Think it had the same pinout and was much cheaper.
Probably hard to find now, I forget the number.

How did you ascertain their illegality?

Cursing, dead carriers, amplifiers, keying up on people, deliberate interference. Pretty simple deduction they are multiple rule violators

Yes I am. We have used this technique against some of the more "chronic" idiots in our area, back in the day. It's fairly effective, and it doesn't involve criminal trespass, or destruction of property, like other methods like cutting coax or antenna removal.

well this might seem a good idea, but if you study the beginnings of this stuff you will find that dave came here and started jacking with people..........he is a ham radio op and really doesn't belong here.........i am surely not going to sit here and defend twist, he doesn't need it, he does a good job on his own, but in principle, this stuff was started by dave hall.........i mean what is right is right.
i have not seen twist go somewhere and start stuff with hammies, but they have come here to start stuff.........that is what i think
....

Unless it's a common fault, that's not much to go on.

Does the display light up, can you see what channel you are on?
Is there the background noise?
Is it showing signals coming in (if there is anyone in your area)?
Does it transmit OK?
Have you checked the squelch and the microphone?
Does it have a PA switch? I have had radios in for repair when the only fault was that the user left it on PA.

You could also try on the "uk.rec.radio.cb" newsgroup, someone on there may have seen it before with that model.

Regards,

Peter.

Funny, he seems to think the point I was trying to make, was that those people named were all criminals. But that wasn't it at all. I only mentioned them as examples of malcontents, who could not function within normal society. It's only an interesting coincidence (Or is it?), that they all ended up on the wrong side of the law.....

Amen to that. He's nothing, if not predictable. In fact, his responses are so narrow and almost scripted in nature, that someone, could capture his most often used (abused?) sound byte answers, and create an "Elisa" or "Oracle" type computer program, which would probably be indistinguishable from the real thing.

> >Are you saying all three were convicted felons like your lid pal Hall > >that hasn't a clue, frank?

Notice that nowhere, did I ever make that claim. More of Twisty's usual inferences, that aren't really there. It's no wonder he's so confused. He sees words that no one actually says. Must be the written form of schizophrenia....

> I see you have learned a new word in the past few weeks -- 'lid'. It's > worth this time, eh?

He learns new words from time to time, usually from guys like you and me, who have wasted our time, doing the intellectual equivilent of "bitch slapping" him into reality. When he uses his newly learned words (Which he usually doesn't quite get the context quite right initially), and someone else uses them again, he then accuses the other person from stealing the word from HIM. Unbelievable, to say the least. I guess he feels the word "lid", has some special meaning and might elicit some response. Personally, any insults that come from someone, as confused, sociopathic, and delusional as twisty, mean nothing to me. No more than something a 5 year old child would say. He doesn't carry enough credibility to be seriously considered.

Excuse me? When did I ever "jack" with anyone, who didn't deserve it?
If someone is going to spread misinformation and nonsense, I'll be sure to correct it. And like I've said many times before, I don't mollycoddle people. I assume we're all adults here, and that we don't need the teletubbies version of the world. If what I say, doesn't sit well, then that's not my problem, but it also does not diminish the validity of what I say.

And for the record, I've been a CBer for over 30 years now, so don't even try that "Ham bashing CB, angle". It doesn't wash. I have a vested interest in this hobby, and I'm not about to roll over and let the uncouth element of our society, take over what was once a useful and enjoyable service, and then attempt to paint the image that they're the ones on the right side.

Twistedhed has serious mental and emotional issues. If anyone is still unconvinced of this by now, well, then maybe they need the same treatment. I apologize for all of the time wasted, trying to "get though" to him. But it's a losing proposition. I can only hope that he never gets into a position to hurt someone.

Perhaps.. I wasn't serious about the fingerpoint anyway.. Just making

I'm not so sure about that... But even so, like I said.. it wasn't a

The only thing coincidental is that Twisty defends anyone that breaks the law in the name of freedom, but only when the rights of others are being violated in the process.

The Oracle at Delphi has two words: "Know Thyself". If Twisty were to take such wisdom to heart he would be paranoid of himself!!!

You know that; I know that; the newsgroup knows that; but Twisty must have his delusions.

Really, he's not confused at all. He takes it upon himself to try and confuse those that would interfere with his attempts to vaidate his own anti-social behavior. Or haven't you realized that much yet?

Even better, he has other identities on the net, and when posting under those names he uses the words he has learned (and I use that term loosely) on this newsgroup with the the same ignorance that he demonstrates here daily. The problem is that he's to conceited to look up the proper definition and usage of words that he only knows how to spell. If you know that much about him you can find out that he's a ham (quite a loudmouthed ham on other newsgroups) and look up his callsign.

Yeah, but playing with Twisty's mind is a unique experience: kinda like catching the same fish over and over with a barbless hook -- you keep throwing him back and he keeps swallowing the bait -- he is nothing more than a dumbass large-mouthed bass!

twist have you wondered if you stopped bashing dave maybe he would stop responding.
What I wonder is why you feel the need to lie pathologically..I was gone the weekend, as usual,,nothing was said to Dave before I left. He came at me, as usual, while I was asea and unable to respond. Dave "bashed" me, I responded in kind.....
Do try to inject the element of truth into your posts.

>Just a thought this shit is getting real old.

Not as old as the "shit" you are attempting to say. Try the truth, no matter how much it pains you.

TWISTEDHED FORCES KEYCLOWNS TO FIGHT?

REC.RADIO.CB (March 27) - Twistedhed is harassing newsbies and threatening cb'ers with twistification if they don't fight for illegal CB, AKC officials said Thursday.

''Once again, we see twistie'st tactics, where he brings the innocent onto the battlefield as he tries to do anything to stay in power''.

Air Marshall OldKeyKolletktor, the top AKC commander, also reported Thursday that keyclowns loyal to Twistedhed were forcing CB'ers into combat with the threat of harassing them or their families.

''Twistedhed's options are now limited. He doesn't know what to do and he's guessing. It shows the command and control exercised by keyclowns has broken down. It's a suicidal approach which is irrational with no logic to it. Cohesion is sadly lacking.''

N3cvj laughingly asked:
Excuse me? When did I ever "jack" with anyone, who didn't deserve it? If someone is going to spread misinformation and nonsense, I'll be sure to correct it.

I don't look down from my holy perch of hamdom to other radio users. I interact with them.

_

Unlike CB, hams aren't a bunch of mentally challenged people >waiting to cause trouble with this information.

_
"Peaking a radio is NOT recommended. It's more trouble than it's worth. Go with the small 2 pill amp, and let IT do the work.

That's an export radio, so he's already a >criminal. So go ahead and modify the clarifier!

it is much safer for a >CBer to run power from the mobile. That way >you never interfere with the same people for >very long.

Here is a prediction you made illustrating just how clued in you actually are to the real world:

"The government can't stop illegal drugs, so if the CB market is big enough to justify the risk, people will still sell illegal radios, but they will become more scarce, and more expensive as a result."

(Chuckle) Just the opposite happened.

Here is N3CVJ speaking on (snicker) "elmering" LOL LMFAO!
"The first step in the "elmering" process, is to show the person, the error of their ways, and the path to legality"

_
I have 2 Dave Made amps.

I would recommend finding a mail-order stre that carried a Uniden Grant XL. This radio can still be modified via the PLL for out-of-band operation,

It's true that some hams do feel cheated, when they are bound by the rules, that they feel an obligation to obey, while freebanders operate outside the law, seemingly with immunity,

But none of them are as sick and perverted as:
Who needs "Melrose Place" when you have a scanner? My neighborhood phone traffic was no less juicy at times. Teenaged girls talking about their first time with sex,

Most local police departments would welcome such information of knowing one that thinks like you lives within their enforcement area.....you ain't right. Couple this with the info that you shared with the group concerning your business partner in the illegal cb business and his perverted deviant sex problems, and it becomes crystal clear why you two found each other.
You claim you're in your forties and you write shit like this? No wonder you are only allowed supervised visits with your kid. You shouldn't be allowed around them period, since teenage girls excite you. A forty some year old man that uses the term "juicy" when referring to teenage sex has many problems.

Amateur Radio Newsline™ Report 1337 March 28, 2003

Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1337 with a release date of Friday, March 28 2003 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T.

Keeping a repeater on the air in New Zealand could become very expensive and Australia considers complete restructuring of its Amateur Radio service. Find out the details on Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1337 coming your way right now

RADIO REGULATIONS: NEW ZEALAND MAY START REPEATER LICENSE FEES

Ham radio operators could soon be paying a lot of money to keep a repeater on the air in New Zealand. This as government regulators down-under look at instituting a new license fees that could make keeping a system on-the-air prohibitive for many clubs that sponsor multiple machines. Amateur Radio Newsline's Jim Meachen, ZL2BHF, is in Auckland New Zealand with the rest of this breaking story:

NZART stands for The New Zealand Association of Radio Transmitters and it is the official national ham radio society here in New Zealand. It also functions much the same as the ARRL in the United States and is a member of the International Amateur Radio Union.

NZART has received proposals from government telecommunications regulators that could cost hams in this nation a lot of money just to stay on the air. What the New Zealand regulators want to do is go to lifetime licensing with a one off license payment, That's the good idea. But there is more.

Regulators have also proposed fees for repeater and beacon licenses that are just plain unacceptable to NZART or the New Zealand ham radio community. Right now there is no repeater or beacon license fee. Under the proposed revision, there would a NZ$250 initial fee to put a one on the air and an on-going annual NZ $200 charge per system to keep it on the air. Currently the NZ to US Dollar exchange at just under 2 for 1.

The current no fee for beacons and repeaters was introduced some years ago for good reason. This proposal is a very significant policy change with what NZART says are serious and unacceptable implications. This is because, by definition and by international agreement, the Amateur Service is non-pecuniary and by international agreement cannot be used for money-making. Unlike other services that can pass on costs to others, in the world of Amateur Radio, there are no "others". As a result, the NZART intends to oppose this one, all the way.

Reporting from below the Southern Cross in Auckland New Zealand, I’m Jim Meachen, ZL2BHF, for the Amateur Radio Newsline.

An example of what Jim was talking about? Since each repeater would pay the $200 license fee, a club with 5 systems -- which is quite common -- would be paying $1000 New Zealand dollars every 12 months. (NZART)

RESTRUCTURING: WILL AUSTRALIA CHANGE ALL?

The debate in Australia about the need for a new Entry Level license has now been expanded into a call for the review of the entire amateur licensing system. Q-News Graham Kemp, VK4BB, in Brisbane is here with the details:

A research report entitled "Amateur radio and the challenge of change" has been co-authored by Jim Linton VK3PC and Roger Harrison VK2ZRH. Here is Jim Linton VK3PC giving a summary report of the Linton-Harrison Paper 2003.

--

(Note: This is an expanded version of what is found in the audio newscast)

VK3PC: “Amateur radio is at the crossroads, it can continue straight ahead down hill and virtually disappear, or set its own path by changing the amateur licensing system.

The time to act is now. When the UK Foundation License was introduced at the beginning of last year, there was not instant support for Australia to take a similar approach. However, some 15 months later there is majority support for a new license in Australia.

What the Linton-Harrison Paper 2003 does is to refocus the debate on the entire licensing system in Australia, the types of licenses, the syllabuses and examinations. We must not be tempted to simply copy the UK Foundation License. It does not meet Australian conditions and needs, and will not provide the necessary sustained growth for amateur radio here.

Australia's new Entry Level License should not be strictly an "operators' license" - a simple permit to use a type-approved transceiver. Entry Level Licensees should be able to enjoy the thrill and satisfaction of operating a radiocommunication system under as many circumstances and conditions and on a wide variety of bands across the RF spectrum as they wish to explore. This should be in keeping with long-standing amateur radio tradition and in line with the ITU definition, which says amateur radio exists for the purpose of self-training, intercommunication and technical investigations.

There will be changes to the licensing system as a direct result of the World Radiocommunications Conference in Geneva later this year where the mandatory Morse code testing requirement is to end.
The amateur radio community and the Wireless Institute of Australia must be ready to take action to revitalize the amateur radio licensing system at the earliest opportunity.

If the right action is not taken, the decline of amateur radio that the Linton-Harrison Paper identifies as being in now its 6th year, will lead to its ultimate demise.

Again, sustainable growth is absolutely essential. It is important to encourage people into the hobby who retain their license and their interest in amateur radio. A hobby that continues to interest, challenge or reward them.

Linton-Harrison advocates a two license system. An Entry Level with a syllabus set at a basic standard, along the lines of the original intention of the Australian Novice license. An Unrestricted License with a syllabus that is revised to comply with the ITU Recommendations for amateur licensing.

The Linton-Harrison Paper describes the current Novice and AOCP syllabuses as being "bloated" and beyond what is expected internationally. The WIA Federal Council agrees.

The current Novice license standard is recognized as being too high. It should not take 40 weeks study to get an amateur license. The Novice license is equivalent to the United States Technician License.

The current AOCP examination is also not relevant to the needs of today, and is at least two decades behind the times. The Linton-Harrison Paper calls for the whole licensing structure, the examination system and syllabuses to undergo a fundamental rethink. In its 8-pages the Paper covers much more than I can in this audio report.

Linton and Harrison wrote a similar paper in 1985 that is still being referred to today. (Q-News)

RESCUE RADIO: THE PARTNERSHIP FOR PUBLIC WARNINGS DRAFT IS NOW AVAILABLE

Here in the United States as well as around the world, letting the public know that an emergency situation is taking place can save lives. Because of this government agencies as well as the private sector are always trying to find betters methods of issuing alerts.

Now, comes word of a draft document for a new United States national emergency warning strategy from a group called the Partnership For Public Warning. A plan that some say holds the potential to truly modernize the way the public is informed.

For those not aware, the Partnership for Public Warning is a national organization formed in November of 2001. Its Board of Trustee’s include representatives from every area of public warning communications including at least one radio amateur. The stated goal of the Partnership for Public Warning is to promote and enhance efficient, effective, and integrated dissemination of public warnings and related information so as to save lives, reduce disaster losses and speed recovery.

This document they have released is said to represent the first time anyone has proposed an overall emergency warning strategy for the United States. The concepts outlined help to look ahead to more advanced warning systems than the current E-A-S, weather service products, and other offerings. After reading it, the Partnership for Public Warning invites your participation and comments. You will find it in cyberspace at:
http://www.ppw.us/ppw/docs/nationalstrategy.pdf (GCC, PPW))

RESCUE RADIO: S.DAKOTA EMERGENCY COMMS LOOSE TOWER

The town of Mitchell South Dakota has last its 180 foot communications tower used for public safety and public radio. According to Jeff Pierce of the South Dakota Bureau of Information and Telecommunications, the tower fell Tuesday, March 18th after a ground anchor rotted and gave way.

Pierce said it knocked out State Radio communications used by law enforcement and other agencies, though nearby towers picked up that radio traffic. South Dakota Public Radio in the area was off the air until a portable tower was put up the next day but reception of weather alerts will not be possible until the fallen tower is replaced. Also, Mitchell police have not been able to use handheld radios and instead must rely on radios in their cars. A replacement tower should be installed and operational the week of April 1st. (CGC)

RESCUE RADIO: NJ HAMS RESPOND FOLLOWING PROPANE BLAST

New Jersey radio amateurs were called up following a large propane explosion in the city of Newton the weekend of March 8th. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Ken Locke, N8PJN, has the rest of the story:

--

It was Robert Stepanek, N2TTT who put out the call for more assistance. Stepanek is the ARES District Emergency Coordinator of Susan County who requested assistance in the form of additional operators after a propane tank exploded in the town on Newton New Jersey on March 14th. Hams from several other New Jersey counties responded.

Amateur radios' primary role was to provide back-up relief shelter communications. Many of the evacuated residents were sheltered by the Susan County Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Pat Day is the Executive Director of that Red Cross chapter. According to Day, about 1000 residents who were forced out of their homes. Those who did not have other places to stay went to nearby shelters operated by the relief agency where some stayed until March 16th. Hams from Somerset, Union, Morris and Hudson counties volunteered during the emergency.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Ken Locke, N8PJN, reporting

--

Rich Krajewski, WB2CRD is the Public Information Coordinator for the ARRL's Northern New Jersey Section and provided most of the information for this story. (WB2CRD)

RESCUE RADIO: KILLER TORNADO HITS GEORGIA

Amateur Radio operators in southwestern Georgia have been helping in the wake of tornadoes that hit the region on March 20th. The storms left six people dead and over 200 injured. Georgia's Governor has declared a state of emergency in two of the hardest hit areas.

According to an ARRL Bulletin, ARES was activated in Mitchell, Worth, Lee and Dougherty counties. There, hams have been assisting various relief agencies including the American Red Cross, the Salvation Army and Georgia Baptist Disaster Relief.

ARES members of the Albany Amateur Radio Club also responded. Most of them are Red Cross volunteers. They took emergency response vehicles to the affected areas to feed victims and provide communications.

The ARRL Lee County Georgia Emergency Coordinator is Bob Smith, K4PHE. He says that several ARES members have been volunteering continuously since the tornadoes hit. (ARRL)

ENFORCEMENT: NY HAM WARNED ABOUT INTERFERENCE

A Patchogue New York ham has been told that he could face a fine of up to $7500 if he continues to violate the Amateur Service Rules. The FCC's Daryl Duckworth, NN0W, tells us who and why:

Duckworth: "Anthony Satornino, N2QPY, was issued a Warning Notice concerning deliberate interference with other licensees' on the 2 meter Amateur band and engaging in unlicensed operation in the 10 meter band.”

Satornino was also asked to clarify his actual address for FCC records and to do so within 20 days. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: THE FCC VS. K1MAN - AGAIN

The FCC has again written to Maine radio amateur Glenn Baxter, K1MAN, regarding he operates his Amateur Radio station. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Paul Courson, WA3VJB, is in Washington with the details:

In its latest letter to Glenn Baxter, K1MAN, the Commission says he has not corrected problems that prompted their letter in January, which was based on monitored information and numerous complaints to the FCC.

The FCC claims that Baxter’s Amateur Radio station is apparently being used for broadcasting non-ham radio matter including programs, talk shows, and children’s shows. The agency also alleges transmissions from his station are being used for deliberate interference and for communications where Baxter apparently's trying to make money.

The FCC also notes that some of the transmissions start and stop erratically, and leave the air with no identification as required by Commission rules. An enforcement official who wrote the letter said such operation indicates the transmissions are not under the control of a licensed operator.

The FCC goes on to say that the transmissions from Baxter’s station are tape recordings, which themselves wouldn't be illegal, but that in some cases it sounds to the FCC as if the recordings may have been questionably taken from an answering machine and off the telephone and broadcast without full compliance with the law. Enforcement authorities also wrote some of the transmissions are repetitive, apparently for weeks, of the same telephone calls.

Baxter has raised controversy for years with what he portrays as a daily bulletin service on 14.272, 3.972 and 3.890 MHz, prompting interference complaints from sideband and AM communities alike.

Baxter has patterned his program to the style of commercial talk radio, right down to having a toll free telephone number for listeners to call in and chat. The FCC wants Baxter to respond to its latest letter to decide what if anything to do next.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Paul Courson, WA3VJB, near FCC headquarters in Washington.

This latest letter to Baxter came from Vincent F. Kajunski who is the FCC’s District Director in Boston Massachusetts. Kajunski also directed K1MAN to submit weekly reports detailing certain aspects of his stations on air operations. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: ALASKA BROADCASTER FACES FINES $137,000

A Christian broadcaster is facing up to $137,500 in fines for alleged wetlands damage on Alaska’s Kenai Peninsula. Fred Vobbe, W8HDU, of the National Radio Club’s D-X Audio Service has more:

The Anchorage Daily News reported on March 13th that Alexander Kozned of Ninilchik poured gravel and other fill into about three and a half acres of protected wetlands, as well as a stream and intertidal zone that drains into Cook Inlet.

The charges against Kozned come in a complaint filed this month by attorneys for the United States Environmental Protection Agency. The alleged violations are reported to have taken place during the summer of 2002 on Kozned's property a few miles north of Ninilchik. That’s a location where he reportedly wants to install a broadcast antenna array to broadcast religious programming to Russia and China.

An attorney for Kozned said the area affected is less than a tenth of an acre and that volunteers, not knowing about the wetlands, made an honest mistake. He also claims that the EPA's reaction amounts to overkill.

But officials at the federal agency said Kozned knew of the wetlands and filled them without a permit, despite a 1998 warning. The E-P-A and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers issued cease-and-desist orders at that time after discovering that Kozned used earth-moving and road building equipment on wetlands to build antenna pads. The E-P-A ordered Kozned to restore and revegetate the wetlands he harmed. Kozned complied and was not fined in that case.

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: A NEW KIND OF POP UP SPAM

As if junk e-mail and pop-up ads weren't annoying enough on their own, now there's pop-up junk e-mail. This, as the result of a developer of bulk-mail software has figuring out how to blast computers with pop-up spam over the Internet through a messaging function on many Windows operating systems. Amateur Radio Newslie’s Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, is here with more on how it works:

--
The software is called DirectAdvertiser. The company that developed it is reportedly based in Romania. In recent weeks, Internet users have reported receiving pop-up messages such as one touting university degrees without classes or books.

DirectAdvertiser does not hack into computers. Rather, it uses a part of the Windows operating system called Messenger. It comes turned on by default with many Windows systems including 2000 and XP. Its meant for system administrators to broadcast service notices and should not to be confused with the various other instant messaging programs.

DirectAdvertiser was first reported by Wired.com, and appears to represent the latest attempt to bypass the increasingly sophisticated e-mail spam filters employed by leading Internet service providers and individual users. It also appears to circumvent federal and state laws designed to curb junk e-mail.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, reporting

There is one major fault to DirectAdvertiser that makes it easy to beat. To receive the pop-ups Windows Messanger must be turned on. If you don’t want to get them -- just turn Messanger off. (OnLine Technology)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: AMSAT SPACE SYMPOSIUM SEEKS PAPERS

The 2003 AMSAT-NA Annual Symposium, scheduled for October 17 to the 19th in Toronto Canada has put out its first call for papers to be presented at the event. The subject matter should be of general interest to amateur radio operators involved in satellite communications.

Papers may be presented by the author during the Symposium or simply offered for inclusion in the Symposium Proceedings publication. A brief abstract of the proposed paper should be submitted as soon as possible. The final date for abstracts is June 15th with copy ready papers must be received no later than August 15th. Electronic submittal is preferred in Microsoft Word format. E-mail electronic submittals to Wayne Chandler at ve3whc@amsat.org (AMSAT)

INTERNATIONAL - AFGHANISTAN: NEW KANDAHAR RADIO STATION TO BE LAUNCHED

On the international scene, the Boston-based N-G-O Afghans for Civil Society has announced that former BBC producer Akhtar Kohestani will serve as station manager for Afghan Independent Radio or A-I-R. This is a new station which is to be launched this spring.

A-I-R will be the first independent radio station to be based in the former Taliban stronghold of Kandahar in southern Afghanistan. Plans are under development for program sharing with the BBC, Radio Free Europe, Radio Liberty, the Voice of America and Radio Afghanistan. (Stewart McKenzie)

INTERNATIONAL - POLAND: NEW BANDS FOR SP HAMS

Also, SP5HS reports that Poland’s new national frequency allocation table came into effect on February 27th and its pretty good news for that nations hams. The new rules allows S P amateurs to use the 136 kHz band, while the 50 MHz band is now allocated to amateurs in Poland on a secondary basis. 6 meters is still shared with government services. BEACONS: 2 METER K7XC/B ON THE AIR FROM NEVADA

A new 2 meter propagation beacon is on the air from the state of Nevada. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Don Wilbanks, AD5DW, tells us who put it on and where to find it:

Tim Mareck, K7XC reports that the 2 Meter beacon operating under is call sign is now installed at it's new mountain top home here in grid square DM-09. Tim says that its on 144.288 MHz and operating from 4900 feet atop Lahotan Peak. This is above the Lahotan Reservoir near Silver Springs Nevada. Currently, the beacon consists of a 10 watt C-W transmitter into a single K-Q Loop at the 30' level on the tower. If you hear it, you can be pretty sure that 2 meters is open to Nevada from where ever you are.

Tike adds that the next project is a 6 meter beacon from the same site. It will use a Yaesu FT-620B running at 10 watts into a old style KB6KQ loop. This antenna will be placed 2' above the 2 meter loop on the same mast. Tim's target date to complete this phase of the project? He says hopefully sometime in June.

Again, the frequency of the K7XC beacon is 144.288 MHz. If you hear it you can send Q-S-N reports to Tim by e-mail at timm@cccomm.net (VHF Reflector)

THAT FINAL ITEM: YHOTY 2003 NOMINATIONS SOUGHT

And finally this week, the nominating season for the 2003 Young Ham of the Year Award is now open. Our producer, Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, is here with the details:

Each year, we at the Amateur Radio Newsline join forces with Vertex-Standard and C-Q Magazine to honor the accomplishments of a young radio amateur who has contributed in some special way to the hobby or to society through the hobby.

The rules are still the same. A nominee must be age 18 or younger, hold any class of Amateur Radio license issued by the FCC and live in the contiguous 48 states. And this year, thanks to Kevin Boudreaux, N5XMH, its easier than ever to file a nomination.

Kevin was the 1993 Young Ham of the Year award winner. He has now created a new on-line home for the award that has all the information, rules and downloadable forms needed to submit a nomination. And Kevin has taken it a step further. He has also created our first-ever fill in the blank on-line nomination form. Just provide the information on-line, click at the bottom of the page and your nomination is on its way to us.

After you finish filing your nomination, please click on some of the other pages and take a look around. You will find it in cyberspace at www.yhoty.org/2003.htm . There is also a link to it from our website at www.arnewsline.org . Printed forms are available for an SASE to the Young Ham of the Year Award, 28197 Robin Avenue, Santa Clarita California 91350.

Our thanks to Kevin Boudreaux, N5XMH, of Dynamic Marketing for taking the time to create this new website. He is one Young Ham of the Year who is still an important part of the award. (ARNewsline™)

It all works as normal it just wont modulate, you can see the signal strength indicator going up and down but not even white noise.

I see your obsession and preoccupation, with the things that I say, is still intact, and still as predictable as ever. But even taken out of context, as you are prone to do, those small excerpts, of the things I have said, are just as true now as they were then. You never could grasp simple logic.

Have a good time this weekend, earning your keep. Maybe someday, you'll earn enough to buy a real computer......

I'm not that interested really. To me, he's either one of two things. 1, a totally confused and warped sociopath, or 2, a clever and manipulative troll. Whichever he turns out to be, is equally contemptable.

Hey,,,you really don't have to explain your perverted self to me, let alone the group, junior. I merely point these things out,,they were your words and choices, Stop worrying so much about the intimacies of my world and the manner in which I access or address this group,,it merely illustrates your inability of displaying any self-control and your communication deficit rendering you incompetent and incapable of discussing anything other than "me" :)!
Do try and muster the self-control needed this weekend to allow something other than my absence to occupy your idle, challenged mind...you're beginning to make others on the group confuse your posts between N8's.

Talk about obsession. You actually searched and counted?

Who really cares who posts about what.

They need you as a censor in some communist country.

The russians are no different then us:

Five Muscovites stole iznasilovali of two Tula schoolgirls

28 March 2003 g.

Tula.Five men were introduced to two 14- summer schoolgirls in the Tula cafe.Fellows asked to show another entertainment institution them. Girls agreed.

However, they did not leave in cafe the machine.Instead of this young people transported the schoolgirls through it was Novomoskovsk and Venev into Zaraysk of Moscow region.In the road they completed above the girls sexual violence in the separately distorted form of 29 times!!!! (My emphasis)

In house of one of the thieies in Zarayske it was proposed to kill girls; however, rest decided to let go them.Two delayed scum not only they do not deny their fault, but also they did recognize what pasttime is for them?usual phenomenon.The parents of girls fear, that the guilties will avoid punishment.Father of one of the malefactors?criminal authority,

TWISTEDHED'S PLAN: CHEAT AND RETREAT

Sometime this year Twistedhed was finally convinced that his keyclown friends could not buy him some extra time and that war was coming.

And he acted the way he always has by unveiling a plan based on his favorite tactic of "cheat-and-retreat".

Twistedhed's plan has three aims.

The first is to slow down the advance of AKC forces as much as possible. This, he hopes to achieve by creating a tidal wave of flame wars, including large numbers of hammie group deserters, in the densely populated rec.radio.amateur groups.

At some point he may use the threat of spam or email, or even such tactics, to forment discontent among the population and thus force them to strike out against hammies.

The second goal of Twistedhed's plan is to hide his destructive anarchy behind a concern for the CB hobby.

In a sense he is holding the newsgroup hostage in its own home. His hope is that the hammies would bear the brunt of any discontent.

The third goal of his plan is to maximise AKC ISP casualties in the hope of turning opinion, especially in pirate newsgroups, into even stiffer opposition to legal CB. This is why Twistedhed has positioned himself in a densely populated group like rec.radio.cb.

Twistedhed's address to the newsgroup this week included the same tired old phrases: "attention deficit" and "lid".

Most newsgroupers regard Twisty as a psychopath who is capable of disrupting large numbers of threads and blaming all on the AKC forces.

Once the AKC forces have extricated themselves from the chaos of the Twistedhed's rhetoric, they will have to pass through Cheesecutter to reach their goal. Cheesecutter's mission is clear: to slowdown the coalition advance by creating as big a mess as possible.

All this may be overcome. But Busch should beware. He should remember that Tim Nebo has vowed to do all he can to prevent Twistedhed's overthrow.

One scenario that Twistedhed is likely to pursue is to offer to leave the group at the last minute and hand over power to his aler ego Deck The Hall, who would immediately begin attacking AKC forces.

"I am 100% right," Twistedhed told the newsgroup on Thursday. "Whoever it is I am."

Twistedhed may have few supporters inside the NG itself. But he does enjoy widespread support in many anarchist philosophies because he has come to symbolise all strands of anti-social tendencies. All those who hate legal CB for whatever reason will do all they can to make sure that Twistedhed is not toppled.

(March 28) - Militias fighting in radio newsgroup's, guerrillas attacking AKC Members, the Republican Keyclown Guard moving to rec.radio.amateur to greet approaching akc coalition forces.

Twistedhed's war strategy may look chaotic from the outside, but military experts believe it's a carefully crafted plan meant to drag out the arguing, and prolong a Flame war crisis that would prompt the newsgroup community to push for a political solution.

''That's his only hope for survival,'' said retired AKC Maj. Gen. Jerry Oxendine, now a senior fellow at the AKC Council on Foreign Relations.

So far, Twistys tactics seem to be having an impact.

Lt. Gen. Dave Hall , the senior ground commander in the conflict, said Thursday that a longer-than-expected flame war now seems likely, in part because of the surprisingly tough resistance by forces loyal to Twistedhed.

Fighting in the rec.radio newsgroups provides two striking examples of Twsitys determination.

AKC forces traded fire with Twistys forces Friday in rec.radio.cb, site of some of the fiercest posts of the flame war. Coalition ground forces called in Cobra support radios in the battle, which drew almost continuous small watt fire and rocket-propelled noise toys.

In rec.radio. Basra, Iraq's second largest city, Iraqi forces said to be members of the paramilitary Fedayeen prevented British troops from taking the city and fired on about 1,000 civilians trying to flee.

AKC forces have encircled the newsgroup for days, but have been reluctant to post for fear of becoming trapped in verbal warfare.

In such a situation, the defenders almost always have the advantage and many believe that is why Twisty appears to be waiting for coalition forces.

Hall said that strategy would also ''give Twisty a decision point of whether he wants to revert to obfuscation verbal warfare.''

''When the AKC are gathering close together, they become a lucrative target. It's much harder to successfully strike at members spread across the newsgroups,'' he said.

Cheescutter, Twistys defense minister said the real fight will be in the rec.radio.amateur newsgroups - home to 500,000 amateurs.

''The enemy must come inside rec.radio.cb, and that will be its grave,'' Cheescutter said. ''We feel that this flame war must be prolonged so the enemy pays a high price.''

Defense Secretary Doug Adair , however, suggested AKC troops might lay siege to the newsgroup rather than invade, in hopes its citizens will rise up against the Twistedhed Regime. .

The AKC had hoped for uprisings in several small, newsgroups heavily populated by Shiite Muslims, who are culturally and religiously tied to Tim Nebo, not Leland .

When some of those communities rose up during the 2001 Flame War, they were left later to deal with an even angrier Newsgroup dictator who remained in charge when the fighting was over. The bad experience likely kept home this time many would-be supporters of the AKC. effort.

Uprisings would certainly help AKC troops avoid an urban-flame warfare scenario, where they could end up fighting in unfamiliar territory surrounded by a hostile population.

''AKC doctrine is not geared to urban flamewars '' said William Hopkinson, an analyst with the Royal Institute for Strategic Studies in London. ''Urban flamewars are very messy and fairly primitive.''

''If you are not terribly sophisticated in your equipment, bringing your opposition down to the same level and making them fight room to room with verbal grenades and one liners ... is a step in the right direction,'' Hopkinson said.

He said fighting in the open would be suicidal for Twistys brigades that lack the AKC coalition's sophisticated intelligence and equipment.

''Some of those (auctions) destroyed in the last week are cb amps which are really half a century old in design, not up to modern technology '' he said. ''They couldn't have a keydown out in the parking lot and hope to survive.''

AKC convoys, including supply vehicles and those carrying offensive forces, have been slowed since the beginning of the flame war by Fedayeen and other irregular newsgroup troops.

''At the end, the enemy will have to enter the newsgroup. What's important is that the enemy should pay a dear price to reach . '' Twisty said.

I am expecting to move (again) soon, so I will disappear for a while.
Those who need to contact me can do so by e-mail or by the E-mail page on my site, as I will still be collecting E-mails until I move.

As the new place doesn't have a 'phone line, I don't know how long BT will take to get out there and deal with it.

Catch you all when I am set up again.

Possibly a squelch or mic problem.

First check that the mic is all OK, as this switches the receive sound on and off as required. A broken connection in the mic can give RX sound problems.

Assuming that is fine and that the squelch is turned down, there could be a damaged control or the PCB may have a broken track or through board link.

At the moment, I am getting ready to move and I do not have a diagram for that model to hand. If I get the chance before I move, I will look for something more specific to that model.

Regards,

Peter.

Oh yeah, I forgot, hams are perfect radio operators. Silly me.

> And why are you listening to a Ham repeater ?

Entertainment factor. I guess the same law that says you must be a CB operator to post here, says that I must be a ham to listen to a ham repeater. I'll go and turn myself in. I'm calling 911 right now.

> Do you wanna be a ham?

No. Your chronic smell turned me off. The repeated derogatory comments and actions of yourself and other hams has left a permanent mark. Why would I want to belong to a fraternity that includes Doug? Your comments have a troll-like ring to them.
Back to the ignore bin for another few weeks. Don't tell Dogie

Well Scott has mentioned many times he doesn't want to be a Ham they are old boring stiffs, so why would he listen? perfectly good question to ask him.

A ham jammer, self-professed. You must be the type that kerchunks the repeater. This guy has gone so far as to wait for someone to start to call, and then start clicking. I hope someone nails him soon. If anyone is in the area, the "fun" is on 146.67 .

Hi all, I had this amp on ebay and after one day they killed the auction. Seems they don't allow ANY amps that can tune from 24 to 35 MHz. So now it's here...
It is for the 10 meter ham band only, it is illegal to transmit with this amp on 11 meters but you can use the receive preamp there!!! It works off a 12 volt power supply or it will work in your car also. It has a low power / high power switch with a high power LED, RF LED (lights when in transmit) and a receive preamp switch with a receive amp LED indicator. The receive preamp works very well pulling in those weak signals on the fringe. The transmitter amp works very well also. It is excellent condition. Not much more to say about it other than it is in perfect working and looking order. Will NOT be DOA!!
If you would like to see the pictures, just e-mail me direct and I'll send them to you.
I'm selling this amp for $99.95. You need to pay for shipping
I will be packed very well and insured.
Please feel free to check my Ebay feedback. You will see 343 positive feedbacks with no negatives.
Do a search on "sellers" then look up spock-
You need to put the dash in.

also, while you are there please check out my other auctions.
Thanks for taking the time.

I think that they use channel 20 on purpose. Seems to me that they can't hear anything over there with the channel 19 bleedover.
Some of these truckers need to learn how to use echo boxes and there are some who shouldn't have them since they are so nasal you can't understand them.

Scott, as much as the hams (including myself) might hate to admit it .... there it is in QST. Seems the biggest problem is with licensed amateurs (caught on CB channels and freeband). Granted there are a ton of other folks too, but I'm not taking sides here ... but it might make a whole ton of sense for some folks to get their story straight. Oooops, sorry. Sense? Likely the wrong newsgroup ;) ... Before the flames start, gentlemen (and otherwise), check page 78 of the April 2003 QST. Out of 10 individuals sited for operation on 26.540 and 26.555, EIGHT of them were licensed amateurs. Don't blame me, I'm only quoting QST.

So what are they Jim are they Hams or are they Cbers with ham licenses who don't use Ham radio but still use CB? And if you take a look most of those caught are of a Spanish decent look at some of the names.

I had a good time at the Toledo Hamfest, bought me a new radio, unfortunately it doesn't work right so I sent it in (It's under warrenty).
It was a bit colder there this year than last two years.

yeah it's like the clowns on CB channel 6 and other "channel masters" who run all that power so no one can talk across town w/o some juice. Imagine CB operators doing something like that :/

It takes a pretty dumb person to go to the effort to obtain an amateur license, which allows them many bands of frequencies to operate on, and then operate on illegal frequencies. The stupidity of such actions boggles the mind.

> regardless, they werent breaking any amateur radio laws at the time.

With these illegal activities they put their amateur license at risk as well, the FCC can yank it if they choose to do so, which would serve them right.

I hope you aren't suggesting that they shouldn't be prosecuted. I do believe one is supposed to know where one is authorized to transmit in the amateur bands (but, then again, codeless techs have been heard on 20 meters). BTW, freebanders aren't breaking any amateur radio laws either (hmmm ....). I am simply suggesting that the licensed folks should darn well know better.

no but they were still breaking the law, whats the difference between breaking amateur FCC rules or non amateur FCC rules, fines are same, punishment is same, and the principles are the same.

If you are going to be down on people for breaking FCC rules regarding CB (amps on 11m, out of band transmissions) you should be equally down on ALL who make such transgressions.

Even though I have him blocked... I see reports of the death of Voobner are premature.
That guy REALLY needs to get a life and stop badgering people. He's like the ham radio bully. Maybe if I give him my cb lunch money he'll go away... lol

Yup, for a guy who vehemently denied he was Voobner, sure uses his name a lot.

Jim was trying to make a point that they were Hams, I only made mention that they were also Cbers

> If you are going to be down on people for breaking FCC rules regarding CB

Yes but classify them as they actually are, if a ham operator is speeding and gets a citation will it also say he is a ham? No because it has nothing to do with ham radio, if they were caught breaking amateur rules then they are hams.

In a train carriage there was Bill Clinton, George Bush, Janet Reno and Bo Derek.
After several minutes of the trip, the train passes through a dark tunnel and the unmistakable sound of a slap is heard.

When they leave the tunnel, Clinton has a big red slap mark on his cheek.

(1) Bo Derek thought - "That sleazeball Clinton wanted to touch me and by mistake, he must have put his hand on Janet Reno, who in turn must have slapped his face."

(2) Janet Reno thought - "That dirty Bill Clinton laid his hands on Bo Derek and she smacked him."

(3) Bill Clinton thought - "George put his hand on Bo Derek and by mistake she slapped me."

(4) George Bush thought - "I hope there's another tunnel soon so I can smack Clinton again."

Yea, don't do it. SMT technology in CB's means that your local CB shop can't fix it when it has problems, because the parts are SO SMALL that you need special tools to fix them, which are duel sided circuit boards also. Duel sided boards have ALWAYS been more junky and had more problems than single sided boards (parts only on 1 side.

What is SMT technology? I first saw it in 1982 in a VERY SMALL cordless phone I bought to use. Very small items have to have this new technology to make them small. CB radios do NOT need this PAIN in da NECK technology, since CB's don't need to be smaller than a Pro-510 Uniden. You Hambos maybe need it to make your hambo radios more "dinky," but US CB'ers ain't da "dinky" type!

So what happens IF your Midland 79-290 or Ranger 10 meter radio has problems (if it has the dark green board--it is SMT)?
You have to send it back to da factory to get it fixed, OR send it to a place that has the NEWFANGLED equipment to fix it.

Look at the HISTORY of Radios. From 1920's to 1958 or the early 60's, you have "hard wired" radios (CB, ham, AM/FM band, TV or whatever thew freq.). Then the BIG revolution in '58 happened--the beginning of the transistor. Tubes are going bye bye. Remember hearing old TV technicians saying that "if it ain't tubes, I ain't gonna fix 'em"? Then there was tube and transistor CB's, TV's, Yaesu 101's, and the rest. Then comes ALL transistor. Then the lust for small comes in. Then comes SMT technology, which WILL ruin yo eyes, and is so small that even the japs are getting eyestrain!

SO what should we do? Write to CB manufacturers and TELL THEM that we will NOT SELL your SMT units. That's right--MIDLAND 79-290. Ranger too. Ranger is VERY SNEAKY about this--you can't tell SMT by model #----you have to look at or IN the radio to find out!

The CUSTOMERS are getting FED UP and more radios will be RUN OVER by BIG TRUCK tires soon!

What do you think about this, CB technician? I already know of one of the best ranger fixers that won't sell them any more either!
I won't too! I'm as FED UP as the customer! The future of CB technicians will be like the auto mechanic that has become just a "parts swapper" !

AT THE FRONT (with CBN.com) Possible Chemical Weapons
By Paul Strand
CBN News War Correspondent

March 26, 2003

PAT ROBERTSON: The Third Infantry Division has captured evidence of chemical weapons as they are fighting Iraq's Republican Guard just 60 miles south of Baghdad. The evidence has yet to be confirmed, but CBN News War Correspondent Paul Strand delivered this exclusive information by satellite phone early Wednesday.

PAT ROBERTSON: We are going to our CBN News War Correspondent Paul Strand, embedded with the Army's Third Infantry Division. That's the spearhead of the attack against Baghdad. Paul, we understand you have some shocking news about chemical warheads. Tell us about it.

PAUL STRAND: Yes, Pat, I do. First of all, I hope you can hear me because I am out in that raging sandstorm and it's hard to hear you. I hope you hear me okay. What I just heard from a highly placed source here is that they've discovered, they've captured chemical warheads, they're Russian, they have Russian writing all over them and they are chemical warheads. Of course, they can't get into them and find out if there's chemicals because once they open them they'd all die right there on the spot. But they're gonna ship them off for testing.

They also captured a launcher that was able to shoot these very munitions that they've captured. And they've captured a man who mixes the chemicals, that was his job with the Medina Division which is the division we're facing right now near the city of Karbala. So all these things leading the military here to believe we might have been hit by chemical shells any time now, and we're not sure we've got them all. So those are the developments here near Karbala about 60 miles south of Baghdad.

ROBERTSON: Paul, I can hear you loud and clear, so don't worry about that. Let me ask you this, are these the type of weapons of mass destruction that has been talked about so much by President Bush?

STRAND: I'm not sure, Pat. I've told you just everything I heard. It happened just a few minutes ago. I would think this is definitely the smoking gun. It's so strange, because the joke before this war was that Saddam says, "I have no chemical weapons, and if you invade I will use them on you." And now we find out they're right out there with the frontline troops.
And another disturbing thing I heard a few days ago, was that he has pushed the level of authority for using these weapons down to the commander level. Not up around him, but the very commanders out on the line, they can use these things, they can choose to use them. So that means young officers have the orders now that they can go ahead and use these things if they feel like they are about to be overtaken. So that's another disturbing development. Not only have we found the warheads, but officers out on the frontline can use them.

ROBERTSON: Paul, are you protected against this kind of thing? Will your suits do it and do you have some kind of an injection that can be used to counteract the effects of VX or whatever?

STRAND: Yes, Pat. We already, from the day we entered Iraq, we have had the suits on, the trousers and the pants, and boots, and gloves, and then we put the masks on. The mask fully protects us and the hood wraps around it tightly. And then we have in our backpacks, we have atropine we can shoot into our legs against nerve agents, we have pills to take against things like anthrax. So we're pretty well covered. And the soldiers I have talked to seem very comfortable about getting hit with this stuff. The only thing is nobody wants to live in those masks for weeks.

ROBERTSON: Paul, I am told that the sandstorm may be the worst in recent memory, you know, in the last 17 or 18 years. Can you tell us about the sandstorm? Is it growing in intensity?

STRAND: It is about the worst weather I have ever felt in my life. Last night I was sleeping outdoors like usual, and it was so bad I jumped into a Humvee. There, with all of the windows closed and everything, the Humvee just filled with sand, there was so much sand it just came in through the little air holes or whatever. And the wind was so strong, it felt like the Humvee would get picked up and thrown over - and you know, Humvees are big, strong, giant vehicles. Stuff was flying through the air, smashing into the side of the vehicle all night long. And the air is completely yellow. You can't see any normal light, you can't see the sky. It got dark like an hour before it was supposed to. It's just truly an amazing sandstorm.

ROBERTSON: The Iraqis are saying it's the judgment of Allah upon the attackers. Are we finding any bright spots in it for the American troops?

STRAND: We are. The soldiers have so much gear that can operate in this kind of thing that they say actually some obscuring factors like this can help them. Now the thing is, the battle has been raging in Karbala, back and forth, so both sides seem to be still operating in this environment. But I understand if it does go away here in the next day or two, that we will just really smash ahead as hard as we can. You know, I must admit, the first thing I said when the sandstorm came in, a lieutenant and I were sitting in the Humvee with it roaring all around us, and I said, "It's at a moment like this that a theologian asks, 'What is God trying to tell us?'"

ROBERTSON: [laughter] Paul, I think a lot of people are going to be asking that. This is kind of a trite statement, but as they say, stay safe.

(yes folks.....stay safe! Wear a desert-cammo NCB certified condom...)

It's not going to go away either. If anything it will be incorporated in more products as SMT costs an average of 50% less to manufacture that traditional thru-hole PCB technology. SMT is built by machine and not people. It's a major cost saver. The rule of thumb for SMT is if it breaks throw it away. For example Volkswagen Car electronics are almost 70% SMT.
When something breaks, they pop out a module and plug in a new one. Usually takes longer to get at the faulty module than to replace it. It's all about cost plain and simple. Same goes for most TV and VCR's which are 50-70% SMT. Cordless phones and all cell phones are close to 100% SMT. Proper tools to service SMT cost thousands in capital investment.
Better to toss em in the trash - sorry but it's the truth and I'm not happy about it either. (which is why I have older TV's and Radios for my use) costs

False profit Anti-Christ Stair has been goin' down the stair way to HELL for a LONG time now, ever since Texe Marrs exposed him in some BIG wickedness he said a few years ago.
By the way, tonight on 5070 @ 10pm EST Texe talks some interesting stuff about the space program & Columbia. Should be VERY interesting!

I heard that some in Chicago are using SSB on 19 there! I guess NOW I know WHY !

Cheeze--what you said struck a cord of what I heard from a mooslim who use to work for HUD in Worshington DC years ago--he came over here from da middle east, and he said that in dem projects da BROZ are living there like dey did 400 years ago in Africa--the same way! He couldn't believe that people lived like that in da USA ! Dey must have a lack of CB's or N8

What gets me is that Ranger does NOT distinguish these units with different model numbers. This is what I have seen so far:

1. IF the ranger has a BIG 2970 type power cord and just the 12 watt heat sink on the back of it, it IS a SMT piece of junk!

2. IF it has the NEW small fan and small heat sink on the bottom of it, it is a SMT piece of JUNK !

IS there any other way to distinguish SMT's from older units, other than what I have above or by looking inside? It is TOO BAD that the manufacturers have gotten a "Wally Mart" frame of mind, which is AN AMERICAN problem, of always going to the cheapest cost, regardless of anything!

I was going to sell more Rangers in da future, but after finding THIS out about SMT, I will NOT ! I even saw a model 6300 with a SMT 6900 board in it! ARE DRUNK commie chinks making these radios?!

That respitory ailament that started in China that the Chinese government has been LYING about that has been going worldwide, IS a Judgment of God against their Communist system.

You Commie Chinamen who violate the Laws of God (Jesus Christ) selling all you Cobra 25 & 29 & 148 trash and other trash will NOT have a good day to keep up your trash manufacturing. GOD is against you because you HATE him with your anti-God system of communism. Persecuting Christians and KILLING your own people (like Saddam who is sane?) He will plague you until your system is destroyed, along with your North Korean wimpy puppets that steal food from their people for arms!
Repent and believe The Gospel before it is too late! God didn't design Chinamen or any race to have a communist or socialist system! It is a big SLAVE system that will fizzle out under the wrath of God!

And if you believe everything you hear and read. I suspect that would qualify one for a trip to the Funny Farm in Walterboro and a tin foil hat. Its actually quite amusing to watch all of the personality conflicts and all of the so-called propets who can never quite hit the nail on the head. Then once you watch their prophesies fail, you find that they try to qualify their statements or water them down to make them seem real. No different with Jones or Stadtmiller or any of the like. Mostly people who always jump to conclusions before really researching whats going on.

THE BEST OF AARON VOOBNER, VOL. 1

Subject: "Illegals Lash Out At Aaron Voobner" 2000-12-28

Oh my goodness I don't know where to begin.

Regarding the Siltronix discussion. Someone gloated that "unmodified" amateur radios are being booted off of eBay and that amateurs have screwed themselves by going after illegal CB's. How in heavens can you guys be so proud of having messed up eBay with your illegal activity so that as a result now the legal people have to suffer? This makes no sense to me. I have to sit down and take an aspirin because the very thought of it is distressing me to no end.

Then I see discussions about how to mod FRS radios for higher power. I ask you, what good can come of this? Must you cretins make FRS into the cesspool of anarchy that CB is?

And now the "phoneman" admits that he is in the illegal CB amplifier business. And that he and Piland work for NASA is ironic. Let me ask you guys a question. What if some bozos decided to use the Shuttle Com Link frequencies to "freeband" on? Would that trouble you? Probably not, since breaking FCC rules doesn't seem to matter to you at all.

And regarding the eBay controversy. No, I never said there were eBay "laws". You charming fellows in your vast ignorance were unable to comprehend a sentence containing a compound subject (e.g. "FCC and eBay"). I'm going to have toi start adding footnotes here with message numbers like Fuller did. Is that what you want?

And please check the profanity. It only serves to detract from your credibility. Although I don't know anyone who would think ANY of you anonymous heroes were credible individuals whose word should be given any credence whatsoever.

Aaron H. Voobner
(That's "Mister" Voobner to you) > you sound more like fuller everyday,.....cd is > out.....

Well what am I supposed to think of that? Is sounding like Mark Fuller supposed to be a really bad thing? As far as I can see, lots of people in this NG started getting very nervous because he was merely bringing up legal issues.

>It is the cb mentality to screw up anything >related to radio >communications.

I don't know if it the CB mentality or just the mentality of the lowlife type of person. I cannot for the life of me get enthused about purposely "keying over" someone else. The idea of "locking up a channel" or "plugging ears" doesn't appeal to me. Intentionally trying to ruin someone else's communication experience seems like a selfish child's game played only by bullies. And running companies that create or sell products that are designed to help people do that sort of thing seems like a very nasty way to make a living.

I am appalled.

Aaron H. Voobner

<<who cares? and if somebody cares why do they? aaron i'd like you to tell me how you personally have been affected by cb'ers that you feel its your life mission to correct our wrong doings.>>

Oh Tim,

Round and round we go, when will we stop, nobody knows. Is it my life mission to curb CBers, Tim? I hope not. I'm just here to add a little reality to the group discussion.

As far as I can see, you guys in rec.radio.cb have been existing in a fantasy dream world for a long time. In this dream world, high powered linears don't mess up anybody's enjoyment of CB, all frequencies between 25 and 35 MHz are open and up for grabs, and everything illegal is OK, as long as you don't get caught.

Now many of you have awakened momentarily from your self-induced dream world and noticed a couple of recent developments happening out in the real world.

#1. The US Government passed HR2346.
#2. eBay banned CB linears and other illegal CB
devices.

Now the average person would see that and conclude that "Gosh, maybe I shouldn't be an illegal CBer".
But you, Tim, and many of the others in here are evidently not the average person. Perhaps you think you are special. Or that the laws do not pertain to you. Or that you will only obey the laws that are convenient to obey. Or some such quasi-libertarian hooey.

And technicalities. I have never read so many laughable excuses based on technicalities. "It is OK to have a 10 KW CB linear and a VFO tuned to 32 MHz just so long as you don't use it - wink wink". Etc.
And seabag lawyering galore. You guys are like naughty schoolboys who know they are wrong and are trying to weasel out of it any way they can.

Whatever the case, by continuing to deny the fact that you have any accountability for your little radio piracy, you hope to stay blissfully in your little dream world.

Sorry to burst your bubble, guys.

Aaron H. Voobner

> Gee, for a guy who wants to be a Ham and >studying for it, sure knows alot >about Ham stuff. All of a sudden you are a >subject expert. How is that, >Voobie?
>

Well, I guess I know the difference between legal and illegal. So that makes me "an expert in ham stuff" to you. Go figure.

Did I say I was studying for a ham license? OK, I guess I did. Well, I wasn't going to tell you, but since you asked, the truth is that I was studying, but you fellows got me so distracted here in rec.radio.cb that I just put it all aside for now.

See what you've accomplished?

You guys ask me what I want. Well for starters I want Mr. 137 to get a nice, clean FCC type approved 40 channel CB rig with no mods and a decent antenna and I want him to be nice to people on the air. For a change.

Then I want Mr. Tim Kp82 or whatever he calls himself to ditch the phoney callsign, put his illegally-operated ham rig away in the closet and never bootleg again. And get a good haircut while he's at it.

Then I want Jay in the Mojave to post his ham callsign accompanied by a confession about why he is ashamed to be a ham and pretends to be an ignorant redneck type of person who drinks and collects welfare.

Oh yeah, I'd like that Curious Dan guy to take all his illegal crap, generators, blowers, pills, amplifiers, coax, and whatever he's smoking and dump it in a big 55 gallon drum and pour gasoline into it and drop a lit match into it.

And just for good measure I'd like Scott Unit 69 to put all his overpowered illegal radio gear in the trunk of Mobile51's car and drive it straight into the Chesapeake Bay at high tide until it sinks.

Last but not least I'd like to see ExportsRUs, Brass, DaveMade, IceColdNYC, XForce, Slash, RazorBlade, GeekBoy, DummyLoad, LawBreaker, Earplugger, Toadstool, and whoever else is involved in manufacturing illegal CB amps and promoting the idiotic "sport" of Keydown Competition to turn themselves in to the nearest FCC field office and beg to be locked up and have the keys thrown away.

(Oh well. I can dream, can't I?)

Too cheap to buy another pair of tweezers and a hot blower for a butane soldering gun? Sheesh, dave..

BTW, SMT Technology is redundant... SMT stands for Surface Mount Technology.

Along with the lower cost, you get higher reliability, and lower purchase prices (if the marketing department has half a brain).. Lower cost doesn't necessarily mean cheap.

Actually, I thought the site was pretty funny, but after visiting a 'link' from that site, I had 4 warnings from my protection software for attempted 'hijacking of my browser' with registry entries. They were easy to clean out, but I won't go back there.

7127. WORSE reliability & MORE problems

NO ! With the lower cost, THE COMPANY pockets the $$$ because they sell them for the same price as the old technology. The marketing dept. has NO brain, and neither does the corporation, because it is not a God created entity (it is state created).

Higher reliability? What kind of drugs are you on? The reliability is WAY DOWN, compared to old tech. units, especially when the new units come out. This will alienate MANY customers that will be FED UP big time and never buy their brand name again. SMT is a duel sided board, which in the old tech days, had MORE problems. These will even have MORE than then!
Dave!

WannaBee Patriots come out of the woodwork now, but where were they @ Ruby Ridge, @ Waco, @ OK City, @ Macarthur's time, ... A fameous quote says that the Patriot is hated and scouraged in the beginning, but when it costs nothing to be one, everyone is one!

And the parts aren't as heavy, so the board is lighter. This also lower mass also keeps the parts from loosing contact as much as thru-hole parts. Less mass = less expansion and contraction.

As much as it's a bitch to work on without tweezers and fine soldering tips, it's the wave of the future.

Manufacturing technology is much less prone to errors, and quality control and manufacturing process is vastly improved now.

Really.. Interesting..

Paper caps go bad rather quickly.. that's Old tech.
Electrolytics go bad rather quickly as well.. especially the axial lead type.. That's Old tech, too.

Never heard of, in the last 10 or so years SMT has been out, any SMT caps going bad, electrolytic or not.

Let's see... Transistors can be surface mounted to both the board and their heatsinks, thus IMPROVING the heat conductance away from the transistors, reducing their operating temperature and IMPROVING their reliability and longevity.

Resistors, being mounted on the surface of the board, also shed heat more quickly, reducing the chance that they'll burn out due to excessive heat load. It also keeps their values (read tolerances) lower, because of the improved delta-T.

What examples can you cite regarding their purported reduced reliability, other than "'cause I said so."? Oh, I forgot, you deal with RCI and SuperStar and other lower-grade "radio" electronics.. Of course, if you half-assed convert a design that was piss-poor to begin with over to SMT, you're going to have problems.

Design something right, use the right technology in the first place, and it'll last a long, long time.

So tell me again how they're less reliable, other than the fact that your old, antiquated CB "Tech Shop" doesn't have a pair of tweezers, a heat gun, and a magnifying glass to keep up with the times.

Yep... wee little, more reliable, longer lasting components...

And it still stands for Surface Mount Technology. Saying SMT Technology is still redundant.

smt is not designed to be component level remove and replace maintenance.
'I' or intermediate level maintenance is the idea nowadays as circuit boards are becoming throwaway items instead of components.
Or maybe its a communist chinese plot to put dave out of business and they wont have to read his rants here anymore....

Problem is, you told us everything about the amp EXCEPT the important part: What's the power output? What's the required drive level? Can't be much for $100.

FS or trade: CB Horizons magazines, Aug 1962-March 1963; CB Magazine, 4/64-7/64, 10/64, 8/65; and 10/62 S9 magazine. All in good shape, a few have torn spines, mostly storage wear.
$5 each or make offer. I collect antique radios, would consider trade for '30s or 40's manuals. No SAMS. reply by email.

How true... but you're right about being the wave of the future. I have become quite good at working with 0805 surface mount packages. The 0402 ones are almost impossible unless you have a very steady hand. I shake too much to solder those manually... lol Soldering surface mount components takes experience and you develop a knack for it after a while. There are some tricks to it... as with anything.

As far as Dave says about not buying any CB's with any SM technology... that means you won't have a new CB.

YEAH RIGHT ! Then WHY do they have more problems than the recently older Rangers had? ALL duel sided circuit boards for CB use ARE a problem waiting to happen!

I have a lighted magnifying glass, and a fine tip soldering iron. SO the parts don't go bad as fast---BUT the CONNECTIONS on these duel sided boards for CB use (vibration and throwing around, dropping) WILL be more of a problem. This is even true with the 21 year old SMT cordless phone I had. I drop it, I have to fix it. The ones with older technology could stand shocks better!

Well see how many of YOUR customers you will make mad by selling this trash when the high amount of CB's go bad to give YOU a bad name because of it.
How can we "roll" with it if we can't fix it, without getting the equipment to fix it, plus the eyes of a 20 year old? No thanks Sunny--my eyes and brain is racked enough with this JUNK, so I ain't gonna fix it but stay away from it, just like my good ranger engineer said too! I guess the Lord made me a "field" technician, out fixin' dem all in da field, instead of in da Laboratory! Ask IGOR for some solder flux capacitor AIR for that soldering phaser, captain Griffey Kirk!!!

No, that means you won't have a new Ranger or Midland 79-290. All the old type CB's still use the old tech stuff with very little SMT's in them. Do you shake too much because you ain't 20 no more, or were you a '62 twister back then? !

SMT has the potential for a cheaper and more reliable circuit.

What you are saying is exactly what was said about Integrated circuits. They were wrong then as you are wrong now.

May as well accept it, SMTs are here to stay. I think that was another way to make things "throw away" and to keep or try to keep people from playing. And as for the slam of the Hambos keeping SMTs to themselves, do you really think WE like it? NO..... Most of them can not repair their equipment as in the past.... Even those of us that have the equipment and do the repairs, in my own opinion still find it to be a pain in the ass. Small is nice, but it sure has it's drawbacks. I for one would love the old to come back. After all, with age, the ole eyes don't see as well even with a magnifier. And the small stuff is making it tougher.

Ah, resist technology eh? Is that what yer preachin'?

Wake up, and smell the coffee. In almost every other consumer electronic device, the move has been toward SMTR and VLSI technology, for the last several years now. It allows for a device to take up less space, and it lowers manufacturing costs. Only CB's have been frozen in time. CB's, for the most part, are still using late 1970's technology.

Ah! so the real truth comes out. You don't like SMT because you can't work on it. If you have to proper soldering tools, it's not that difficult. There are some places that have "newfangled" equipment (Only to them it's not so "newfangled" because they've been using it for over 10 years now), and they can easily handle service jobs.

But the real nail in your coffin is that the costs of manufactuing for CB radio will come down so much, that a CB will truly become disposable. Like the Cobra 19, only even now on rigs that have more features. Why would someone pay $50 for a repair bill, when a new radio can be had for $60?

It's called progress. There are two kinds of people, those who embrace the progression, and adapt to it, and those who resist, and get run over by it. Which will you be?

I doubt if you are going to make a difference. I'm actually surprised that it took this long for technology to catch up to CB.

And it's not some sort of paranoid induced conspiracy. It's simply an updating of manufacturing techniques. The end result should be lower prices.

It's a shame that some hack shops will be forced out of business. Maybe that's a good thing. If you can't handle something as simple as SMT, you have no business calling yourself a "technician".....

Ok, then why does my Icom 706, and all my Kenwood VHF rigs all run flawlessly? All utilized SMT technology. If SMT was the true culprit as you allege, then any radio would suffer the same problems.

If Ranger and others are seeing problems that are not attributed to "tampering", then it might be that they're having problems adapting to the new process. The next production run should improve. Heck they've got 20 years of catch-up learning to do....

Well, there are cases where a surface mount cap will develop a hairline fracture, as a result of expansion and contraction, due to either board flexing or temperature change. But it's not that common. But it can be a bitch to find.

Ok... besides your say so... HOW does it GUARANTEE problems?

Let's face it dave... you're resisting change. They said the same thing when the Transistor came out.. ("If it's not tubes, I ain't workin on it"), then the IC ("No discrete components? Count me out!"). Same shit, different decade.

If the boards (and the radios for that matter) were engineered right IN THE FIRST PLACE they wouldn't have these problems...

BTW, why are you advocating Ranger and Midland? THey're both manufactured in Taiwan, aren't they? Taiwan is a part of the Republic of China, dood.

Yes, it seems that if you're a ham, you're at a greater risk of being "busted", for illegal activity, than someone who strictly bootlegs, sans any license. Riley H. has been tasked with ham rule enforcement. And it seems, he's taken that quite literally.

I don't like the message that this is sending. It gives someone even less incentive to legitimize himself, by taking that step to ham radio, if it means that it also increases his chances of being cited, for visiting his old haunts once in a while.

I need to buy a Firestik no-ground-plane antenna and a vertical radio mounting bracket, but so far I get nowhere with any of the few online sources I've been able to find. A T/A truckstop nearby does have a pretty good selection, but they can't special order what I need. My local Radio Shack is useless for that kind of stuff.

I'm hoping someone in this group can recommend a good mail order or internet store where I can buy CB accessories.

Thanks much

One needn't set a hammie license as a goal for "legitimizing" their radio enjoyments,,only pricks like you draw and maintain distinctions between cbers and hammies. As I maintained before, and you denied, but now admit, you are pissed because you are held to higher standards..too bad,,get over it..you ought work on injecting some joy into your own miserable life instead of self-contradicting yourself and lying all the time and being angry over those who choose to play a game they had no hand in designing. AS one prior to you said,,there is a wrong way and a right way,,your problem appears to be at the federal level and within your angry self. Projecting it onto cbers/freebanders/masons or whoever else you may not comprehend and begin to hate, is tantamount to our expectations of you, Davie-son.

Yes you did,,incorrectly. ASSuming they are cbers doesn't make it so.
This is the second time you have vehemently fought and said the FCC is incorrect about their information they release. Poor bastard..you need get a grip and realize things in reality are not the way you have them misconstrued in your fantasy world where I rule and you drool.

If you are going to be down on people for breaking FCC rules regarding CB (amps on 11m, out of band transmissions) you should be equally down on ALL who make such transgressions.

Deal. You WA3MOJ, are a lying lid.

_
Of course it won't SAY it,,,,doesn't need to. Any facts you present, such as saying "he was speeding", doesn't negate the fact he is a hammie, either. To purport that one can only occupy a single postition at one time is not surprising coming from yourself, as you apparently and delusionally feel others share your deficits, when in fact only one or two do....nevertheless, others have demonstrated a propensity for the ability to walk AND chew gum, unlike yourself.

Nonsense. One needs not be a hammie to break hammie rules. And with that, you're back out,,even the dwighted voob didn't call names,,,you're a failure at all you do,,even imitating voob....now that's bad!! LOL! Poor Geogre.

It's not, or at least this isn't evidence of it. It's programmed in the "alter only the bits that need altering" method.

Now if you found win3.11 in 9x, or 9x in NT, that'd be evidence of c/p

First of all most technicians do not know their butt on how to work on a radio, and the small parts keeps them from screwing then up.
If they built a good CB to start with lets say from Icom those cheap CB copies from each other , and china would disappear unless you want a piece of crap.

Yeah, he claims to listen to 5.070 on the shortwave.
Of course, its true according to him.

Agreed. I love when a "tech" cant even spell the components he claims to be an expert at. I work on mobile A/V equipment for a living, design has more to do with failure rates than the manufacturing process ever will. Wake up Dave !!!!!! Nixon is dead, and so is your way of thinking !!!!!

You initiated and began the exchange of names. I suggest if the truth upsets you as much as me laughing at your impotence does, treat others as you wish to be treated,,in other words, do an about face,,,you know,,a 180,,,become the polar opposite of what you are now.... lid fits you WA3MOJ,,you;re a shining example of a lid...a lousy hammie with lousy traits that cares nothing of the hobby, and you hate yourself.
